ROOSEVELT CONDEMNS MUSSOLINI FOR ENTERING THE EUROPEAN WAR

Nazis Reach Paris Area; French Government Flees

Tanks in Environs Of Capital; Seine Crossed in Drive By the Invaders

But Main Front Remains 30 to 35 Miles West and Northeast of City; French Fighting Hard

By The Associated Press

PARIS, June 10—The government fled from Paris, the capital of the Republic of France, tonight as marauding German tanks were reported to have reached the region of the city itself.

Premier Paul Reynaud has gone to join the French armies, a brief ministry of information communique said.

"The high command asked the ministers to effect their withdrawal to the provinces in conformity with established dispositions. This withdrawal has been effected."

Havas, the French news agency, suspended services in Paris.

Newspapers already had ceased to appear in the French capital, which in peacetime has a population of nearly 3,000,000.

Some German armored advance guards were said to have penetrated to the environs of Paris itself in isolated raids through the French lines.

But the main front was thirty to thirty-five miles west and northeast of the capital.

Civilians Leave City

The stream of civilians leaving the city was steadily swelling, and more antiaircraft fire against planes bombing the outskirts of the proud city was heard.

Although steadily approaching, the battle's roar still could not be heard here.

The announcement of the departure of the ministers was made only after they were safely installed "somewhere in France"—in the southern provinces.

The battle, which had been waged heretofore on familiar World war territory for the most part, swung into virgin soil as the Germans advanced west of Paris.

In the triangle bounded by Amiens on the Somme, Rouen, seventy miles west of Paris on the Seine, and Vernon, forty miles west on the Seine, the Germans redoubled their attacks, crossing the river at several points. An armored column which crossed the Bresle last week led the assault.

The French took their main stand west of Paris all along the Seine in an effort to prevent the Germans from effecting further passages and taking the capital from the rear.

In the central sector of the Oise valley, directly north of Paris where the Germans had suffered tremendous losses, they held back their infantry and sent out dive bombers in an effort to break down French resistance.

Nazis Broaden Salient

They boadened their salient, however, farther East where they had crossed the Aisne. Three columns fanned out from Soissons through La Ferte Milon and Le Fere En Tardenois and toward Fismes.

They were just north of Chateau-Thierry and the Marne, where they were stopped in their 1918 thrust by Americans fighting with the French. On the East flank, where the French have been holding firm, fresh German infantry, tanks and

Capital Getting Ready To Speed Arms to Allies

Congress Will also Act Promptly on Defense Measures

WASHINGTON, June 11, (AP)—The capital swiftly geared itself tonight for a double program President Roosevelt outlined — that of arming the Allies and preparing America for any eventuality.

The president had laid down his program for two-fold action before a graduating class at the University of Virginia.

The Senate finally finished its share of congressional action on important naval bills authorizing an eleven per cent expansion of the fleet and providing for an increase to 10,000 planes in the naval airforce.

The legislation, worked out by joint conference committees, was returned to the House for its final approval and will go from there to the White House.

22 More Warships

The fleet expansion bill, authorizing future appropriations of $655,000,000, would provide for 167,000 additional tons of combat vessels. Navy authorities have estimated that twenty-two ships would be built under the legislation.

The naval aircraft legislation substituted a 10,000 plane ceiling for the existing authorization of 4,000 planes. That bill also would authorize funds for the continuance of work on a score of naval bases.

The House Military committee recommended increasing the size of the regular army from 280,000 to 400,000 and authorizing the president to call out the national guard for peace-time service in the United States and its possessions.

No Amendments Permitted

The House rules committee voted to permit the $1,004,000,000 defense tax bill to be brought up in the House under procedure permitting

Hostilities Have Started, Rome Broadcast Declares

MEDITERRANEAN AREA MAY SEE FIGHTING

Reports Italians Have Entered France Not Confirmed

NEW YORK, JUNE 10—(AP)—The Rome radio declared tonight that hostilities "started four hours ago" in a broadcast received in New York by CBS at 11 P. M. tonight.

"The first Italian war bulletin is expected to be issued within a few hours," the broadcast said.

By The Associated Press

Rome, June 11—(Tuesday)—Italy was at war today on the side of Germany against France and Great Britain but the ominously blacked out Italian capital gave no hint as to where Premier Mussolini's blackshirt legions struck first.

Although Berlin reports said Italian troops already had set foot upon France, striking up through the Reviera, there was no confirmation here.

This would comport with the long-anticipated Italian plan to strike secretly with the first blow, making fullest use of the strategy of surprise.

The zero-hour of Italy's entry was midnight, the day of hostilities June 11, several hours after Mussolini announced the historic decision to side definitely with Germany

But the deadline passed without event in Rome.

Rome was blacked out except for feeble blue lamps and dimmed headlights on the few automobiles and bicycles allowed to be at large. Steel-helmeted blackshirt troops patrolled the city through the night.

Roosevelt Speech Both Praised and Called Warlike

Congressmen Expression Various Views about Address

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — Reaction among members of Congress who listened by radio to President Roosevelt's address tonight ranged from enthusiastic endorsement to expressions of concern lest this nation be drawn into war.

Senator Minton (D-Ind) said, "he certainly reflects the sentiments of the country, and I know he reflects my views. I am going to support his program 100 per cent."

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont), a prospective presidential nominee, said soberly, "I agree with what he said about preserving democracy in this country and with what he said about Mussolini. I would have liked it better if he had added that he was going to keep this country out of war."

Senator Adams (D-Colo) said a "wise corrolary" to the Monroe doctrine would be "the doctrine that we should not interfere with the affairs of Europe."

Chairman Pittman (D-Nev) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee declared:

"I think it was a very eloquent and appealing address. It was the strongest condemnation of the rule of force and at the same time an expression of determination to maintain democracy."

BALTIMORE, June 10, (AP)—The grandson of Stephen A. Douglas, whose debates with Abraham Lincoln made history, endorsed Wendell L. Willkie today for the Republican presidential nomination.

In a letter to Willkie, made public by Kirk Landon, head of the Willkie forces in Maryland, Martin Douglas, prominent Greensboro, N. C., lawyer, praised the Indianan's "patriotism in offering your splendid services to the country at this crucial time."

Douglas said his "mild interest" when Willkie's name first was mentioned as a possible candidate had lately assumed "the proportion of an enthusiastic support," adding:

"Whether in these hectic times the Republican leaders and the American people will listen to the voice of reason I do not know. But I wish x x x to express the sincere hope that the Republican national convention will name you for the high office of president."

WORLD'S BIGGEST ARMY IS CHIEF ACE UP IL DUCE'S SLEEVE

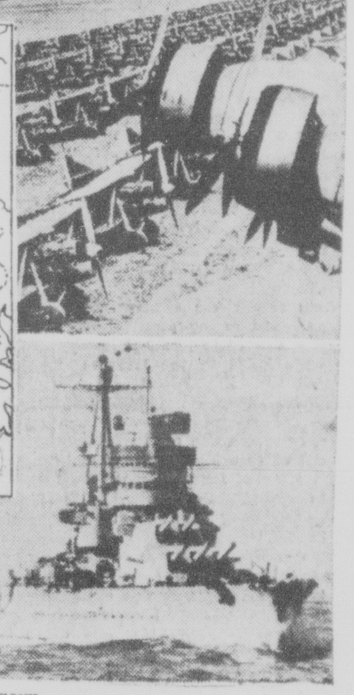

Premier Mussolini

Where Italy borders Germany and France

315,400 tons—world's fifth largest navy

The world's largest army came into the European conflict when Italy joined forces with their German allies. Italy's giant army—latest compilations place it as 7,693,000 under arms—is even larger than Germany's huge land force. Italy's air force—numerically—would also appear a match for the combined Allied air strength. Of Italy's 8,000 planes, however, only 1,160 are considered first line. The navy, smaller than that of France, could hardly attempt a full-dress engagement with Allied sea forces with expectation of victory.

WASHINGTON, June 10. (AP)—President Roosevelt extended provisions of the neutrality act to Italy tonight as a result of Premier Mussolini's declaration of war.

Canadian House Declares War on Italian Nation

Mussolini Called Carrion Bird by MacKenzie King

OTTAWA, June 10 (AP) — The Canadian House of Commons unanimously approved declaration of a state of war against Italy late today as Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King called Italian premier Mussolini "a carrion bird waiting for brave men to die."

The resolution, calling on King George formally to proclaim a state of war between Canada and Italy, was proposed by the Prime Minister, seconded by Opposition Leader R. B. Hanson, and carried by acclamation.

The Senate, scheduled to meet tomorrow, was summoned hastily to give its expected endorsement to the resolution.

MacKenzie King, speaking to a House subdued by the news that Canada's defense minister, Norman Rogers, had just been killed in an airplane crash, lifted his voice as he upbraided Italy for entering the war at Germany's side.

Mussolini, he said, was "swooping like a buzzard" in an attempt to profit from the extremities of other nations.

Earlier, in a quiet, sad voice, MacKenzie King announced Rogers' death and that of three members of the Royal Canadian Air Force in the crash of their plane near Newtonville, Ont.

Switzerland Not Invaded; Hopes To Escape War

Nation Reassured by Mussolini's Pledge to Neutrals

BERN, Switzerland, June 10 (AP)—Swiss mountaineers in villages near Mount Dolent where the Italian, French and Swiss frontiers join, reported intense military preparations in the mountain passes tonight, but no sounds of firing to indicate fighting already had broken out in the newly declared war between Italy and the Allies.

Switzerland, although reassured by Premier Mussolini's guarantee that "neutral neutrals" would not be attacked by Italy, took the same precautions on the Italian frontier as she has heretofore taken on the French and German borders.

As long as Italy remained non-belligerent the Swiss Alpine frontier, by mutual agreement between

Orders 'Full Speed Ahead' in U. S. for "Any Emergency and Every Defense"; Riots in London

By The Associated Press

Fascist Italy joined Germany, her mighty axis partner, for a knockout blow at the reeling Allies yesterday, (Monday) and a few hours later the president of the United States topped world-wide repercussions with a flat condemnation of the Italian act.

With German tanks cruising the Paris area itself, and threatened by an Italian attack, the French government abandoned its capital in one of the darkest hours France ever has known.

Premier Reynaud went "with the armies," and the rest of the government withdrew to the provinces under the plan for such a grave emergency.

Boldly naming Italy specifically, President Roosevelt accused the Fascist nation of scorning "the rights and security of other nations."

The material resources of the United States, he said would be thrown to the aid of "opponents of force."

The order is "full speed ahead" in the United States' measures for "any emergency and every defense," the president said, addressing University of Virginia graduates.

There were anti-Italian riots in London, Liverpool, and Edinburgh.

Announcement a Surprise

Mussolini saw fit to proclaim Italian belligerency, long expected with an element of surprise.

Instead of sending his Fascist legions into the fray first and speaking afterward, he announced to cheering millions of Italians that declarations of war had been handed to the Allies.

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—Angry crowds participated in wild anti-Italian riots tonight in London, Liverpool, Edinburg and elsewhere, smashing Italian cafe and shop fronts with bricks and bottles. Several persons were injured.

Mace-brandishing police charged the crowds in Edinburgh, where several were hurt, but failed to stem the throng of persons protesting what they regarded as Italy's "stab in the back" in declaring war on Britain and France.

Several were injured by police batons, and the crowds showed their hostility to police intervention by knocking off the policemen's helmets.

A London policeman was severely cut by flying glass. The backfiring of a London automobile, believed at first to be pistol shots, added to the confusion.

WASHINGTON, June 10. (AP)—Chairman Gillette (D-Iowa) announced tonight that his Senate Campaign Investigating Committee had found no evidence of "unreasonably large expenditures" by Thomas E. Dewey or Senator Arthur Vandenberg in their presidential primary campaigns in three states.

The committee investigated in Nebraska and Wisconsin, where Dewey defeated Vandenberg, and in Maryland, where Dewey alone was entered. Inquiry also was made at Dewey's New York headquarterr

"Some of the complaints we received were general," Gillette told reporters, "and some specified Mr. Dewey. The committee found no evidence of unreasonably large expenditures. It was of the opinion that any nationwide campaign takes money, and although there were some accounting discrepancies, these were more careless than intentional."

Gillette gave these reports on committee investigations in other states:

Nazis Battle To Close Clamp Around City of Paris

Berlin, Elated over Entrance of Italy into the War, Predicts Early Victory over France

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 10 — German troops fighting to close a vast semi-circular clamp around Paris were reported tonight within thirty to thirty five miles of the French capital as the rejoicing German Reich greeted with open arms the march of Italy into the war against Britain and France.

Confidence in a prompt victory over France spread boundlessly.

With the prospect that France now would receive a terrific smash from the south, the belief grew among Germans that the hard-pressed Frenchmen soon would be brought to their knees.

Italians in Riviera

Italy lost no time in lashing out at France, authorized German circles said. Italian troops were reported to have marched into the French Riviera at 6:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m., E.S.T.) a short while before Premier Mussolini announced the state of war but after the declaration of hostilities had been handed to the French and British ambassadors.

The Germans greeted Mussolini's plunge with assertions that the Rome-Berlin axis "has become an alliance of blood and steel."

Germany's army was reported making progress in its drive of Paris.

In reliable quarters it was stated an enveloping movement in the semi-circular form was closing about the French capital.

German aviators it was said, were swooping over Paris and dropping leaflets in which the French population was urged to "give up the futile resistance."

German tank divisions were said to be on the Seine river northwest of Paris.

One wedge of Nazi forces were reported to have reached a point east of Rouen, on the Seine.

Another wedge, it was said, pushed its way forward to the Ourcq river south of Soissons, northeast of the French capital.

Although it was reliably stated that the Germans were within thirty to thirty-five miles of Paris, the reports mentioned no specific points that distance from the city.

German's satisfaction over Mussolini's decision was proclaimed by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop in a solemn announcement to the press.

"Germany is overwhelmed with joy at Fascist Italy's own initative to advance at Germany's side against the common enemy," von Ribbentrop said.

He asserted the fight would be carried on until the "vital rights of our two peoples are respected."

Then Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, whose whereabouts remained a strictly-guarded secret, quickly sent messages of felicitation to Premier Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele.

Hitler's message to the king, presumably dispatched from his field headquarters, observed that the Italian step was "ordained by providence" and that the axis partners were determined to be assured of their vital rights "for all the time."

To Il Duce, Hitler messaged:

"The historical decision which you announced today moved me most deeply. German armed forces are glad to be able to stand in battle at the side of their Italian comrades."

Hitler Wires Mussolini

Hitler told Mussolini that "the rising disrespect for the national living rights of Italy by the rulers in London and Paris has now led us together — we who already were most closely bound in the world outlook through our revolutions and politically through treaties — in the great battle for the freedom and future of our nation."

Immediately after making the Reich's pronouncement, von Ribbentrop hurried to the Italian embassy, where he had a long and earnest conversation with the Italian ambassador, Dino Alfieri.

Alfieri was called to the balcony of the embassy by clamoring crowds.

Speaking briefly, he said "the pact of steel which von Ribbentrop and Ciano (Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano) sealed here a year ago came to practical expression in the alliance of arms and blood today."

The last twenty-four hours had been a victory parade for the German people.

First came word that two German battleships, the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, were back in action and had sunk the British aircraft carrier Glorious (which British officials admitted today).

Then came announcement of capitulation of the Norwegian army —the third enemy army to fall before German arms in a month. The Netherlands and Belgium previously had given up the fight.

A row of reported successes on the long front across northern France was told in headlines in German papers — and then came Il Duce's word that Italy had entered the war at the side of the Reich.

of his address at University of Virginia Commencement exercises, he said:

"On this tenth day of June, 1940, the hand that held the dagger has struck it into the back of its neighbor."

The audience applauded this and other passages in the President's speech.

Mentioning nations specifically in his discussion of the war abroad, Mr. Roosevelt said that:

"The people and government of the United States have seen with the utmost regret and with grave disquiet the decision of the Italian government to engage in the hostilities now raging in Europe."

The President declared that the sympathies of the American republics "lie with those nations which are giving their life blood in combat against the gods of force and hate.

Two obvious courses will be pursued simultaneously, Mr. Roosevelt said:

Two Courses for U. S.

"We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation and, at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to the task of any emergency and every defense.

"All roads leading to the accomplishments of these objectives must be kept clear of obstructions. We will not slow down or detour. Signs and signals call for speed—full speed ahead."

And the chief executive, his words reaching the nation and the world by radio, called upon Americans for effort, courage, sacrifice and devotion.

Rain forced the commencement ceremonies into the memorial gymnasium erected to honor university students killed in the last World War.

Waving aside a raincoat, the President entered the huge structure, donned a cap and gown, and moved on to a big temporary platform reserved for faculty members and distinguished guests.

A small bang struck up "Hail to the Chief."

The address was so strongly worded that sources close to the administration said it was obvious the United States had abandoned a position of neutrality for one of non-belligerency.

Cheers and rebel yells from his audience greeted every reference to sympathy with Great Britain and France.

Tried to Sway Italy

Mr. Roosevelt brushed aside the secrecy surrounding his communications with Premier Mussolini of Italy to relate how the government had tried to swerve Italy away from war.

He said he had proposed that if Italy would refrain from going to war, he would be willing to ask assurances from "the other powers concerned" that they would execute faithfully any agreement made to effect readjustments desired by Italy.

"Unfortunately," he asserted, "the chief of the Italian government was unwilling to accept the procedure suggested."

The President said, too, that he had expressed his administration's willingness to try to cooperate with the Italian government when the appropriate occasion arose from creation of "a more stable world order through the reduction of armaments, and through the construction of a more liberal international economic system."

Other Nations Ignored

But by choosing to preserve what it terms its "freedom of action" and to fulfill what it states are its promises to Germany, Mr. Roosevelt said, Italy had "manifested disregard for the rights and security of other nations; for the lives of the people of those nations which are directly threatened by this spread of the war" and had evidenced an unwillingness to attempt to achieve its aspirations by peaceful means.

"On this tenth day of June, 1940, in this university founded by the first great American teacher of democracy," Mr. Roosevelt said, "we send forth our prayers and our hopes to those beyond the seas who are maintaining with magnificent valor their battle for freedom."

Discussing further his communications with Mussolini, the President said:

"I made it clear that in the opinion of the government of the United States any extension of the hostilities in the region of the Mediterranean might result in a still greater enlargement of the scene of the conflict in the near east and Africa, and that if this came to pass no one could foretell how much greater the extension of the war might eventually become."

The President spoke also as the father of one of those receiving degrees. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., was graduating from the university law school, and the chief executive referred to "questions" each generation of young men and women have to ask the world."

"It is right," he said, "that each new generation should ask questions.

"But in re cent months the principal question has been greatly simplified. Once more the future of the nation and of the American people is at stake.

"We need not and will not, in any way, abandon our continuing effort to make democracy work within our own borders. We still insist on the need for the vast improvements in our own social and economic life.

"But that is a component part of national defense itself. The program unfolds swiftly and into it will fit the responsibility and opportunity for every man and woman to preserve our heritage in days of peril. xxx "The love of freedom is still fierce and steady in the nation today."

Mr. Roosevelt termed "an obvious delusion" the belief that the United States can "safely" be permited "to become a lone island in a world dominated by the philosophy of force."

"Such an island," he said, "may be the dream of those who still talk and vote as isolationists. Such an island represents to me and to the overwhelming majority of Americans today a helpless nightmare of a people without freedom, a people lodged in prison, handcuffed, hungry, fed through the bars from day to day by the contempuous, unpitying masters of other continents. xxx

"Let us not hesitate—all of us—to proclaim certain trusts. Overwhelmingly we, as a nation, and this applies to all the other American nations, are convinced that military and naval victory for the gods of force and hate would endanger the institutions of democracy in the western world—and that equality, therefore, the whole of our sympathies lie with those nations which are giving their life-blood in combat against those forces."

Balkans Worried Over Entrance of Italy into War

Do Not Trust Hitler or Mussolini To Keep Their Word

BUDAPEST, June 10 (AP)—Turkey's imminent fulfillment of her mutual assistance pact with Britain and France became the key tonight to the future of the vastly-worried Balkans, which rumbled with frenzied military preparations as a result of Italy's declaration of war against the Allies.

Cloaked in sudden strict censorship, the Turkish government declared a state of "alert," putting the nation on a virtually full wartime basis.

Turkish officials said unofficially they were ready to live up to their agreement with Britain and France.

Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece and Bulgaria all urgently looked to their own military precautions while casting anxious eyes toward Turkey and toward Soviet Russia.

Despite Premier Mussolini's statement that Italy's little neighbors would be safe as long as they observed strict neutrality, the Balkans were taking no chances, for they have expected the worst while hoping for the best ever since Germany and the Allies went to war last September.

Most of them remember that Germany gave similar assurances to her little neighbors shortly before invading Denmark, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium.

Ford Plans New Airplane Motor

Examines U. S. Army Pursuit Plane at His Detroit Plant

By DAVID L. WILKIE

DETROIT, June 10 (AP)—Henry Ford, examining a fast United States army pursuit plane to determine its adaptability to mass production methods, disclosed today he is working on a new airplane motor.

The seventy-six-year-old automobile manufacturer who said he could build 1,000 standard planes a day under certain conditions, did not describe the new motor in detail.

His comment was made as, accompanied by engineers and high officials of the Ford Motor Company, he clambored over and peered into a Curtiss P-40 plane flown here from Langley Field at his request.

Ford, after a preliminary inspection of the plane, received permission to keep it here for a closer examination, and also was promised that an even faster type of plane—the twin-motored Lockheed P-28—would be here for his study in a few days. The top speed of the single-engined P-40 is 267 miles an hour; the P-38 has a maximum speed of 420 miles an hour.

Of the new motor, which Ford said he believed would be an improvement over present engines, the industrialist said only that it was of simplified construsction and was of the Rolls Royce type.

Asked if the plane appeared more complicated than he anticipated, Henry said "No." When he said he could build 1,000 planes a day, he stipulated there must be no "meddling by governmental agencies" and no changes in specifications after production was started.

War Bulletins

MADRID, June 10 (AP)—The news of Mussolini's declaration of war spread quickly in Spain tonight and caused intense, if restrained excitement.

No official neutrality steps were announced immediately, although it was known the government has moved to have everything ready to defend Spanish soil.

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill is expected to make a public statement in the House of Commons tomorrow on Italy's entry into the war.

BOGOTA, Colombia, June 10 (AP)—A violent anti-Italian demonstration broke out here today when the word came that Italy had declared war on Britain and France.

Italian commercial establishments were damaged.

BASEL Switzerland, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Heavy artillery of the French forts along the Rhine opened fire on German positions in Baden this morning, as they did yesterday.

LONDON, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—A Rome radio announcement heard here said Premier Mussolini will be supreme commander of the Italian armed forces in the conflict declared yesterday. The king will remain as "nominal chief."

hand, and France and the United Kingdom on th other.

Another declared a state of war to exist between Italy on the one hand and France and the United Kingdom on the other. This automatically extended the neutrality act to this conflict.

The third proclamation dealt with the use of ports and territorial waters of the United States by warships and armed merchant vessels of the belligerents.

The executive order was issued under the first proclamation and contained three regulations.

The first dealt with exceptions to the "cash and carry" policy which will henceforth apply to United States exports to Italy.

The second forebade United States citizens to travel on Italian ships.

The third imposed restrictions upon the solicitation and collection of contributions for Italy in this country.

The orders were signed by President Roosevelt late tonight upon his return from Charlottesville, Va. The proclamations were written in technical language as amendments to similar proclamations issued at the start of the war between Germany and France and England.

Rep. Rogers (R-Mass): "The speech sounded to me like a prelude to a declaration of war."

Senator Hatch (D-New Mex) declared that "the president's words today constitute a complete abandonment of any pretense towards socalled neutrality. If this government furnishes material aid to a belligerent, of course we have assumed at least a non-belligerent role."

2 Italian Ships Burned by Crews

Scuttled Near Gibraltar To Prevent Capture by British

LA LINEA, Spain, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Two Italian merchant ships, the 10,000-ton Chelina and the 2,000-ton Numbolia, were scuttled by their crews in Gibraltar waters late yesterday when their crews heard the radio news that Italy had gone to war.

Sixty persons from the Chelina, including a nurse and one passenger, reached La Linea.

Captain Adolfo Muntjan said he ordered the crew to take to the boats and then he sprinkled the ship with gasoline and set it to blazing with bombs when he heard that Mussolini had announced Italy's entry into the conflict.

Half of the crew of the other Italian ship, the Numbolia, was able to reach La Linea. The other half was picked up by British boats and made prisoners as they swam ashore.

British Attack

sands of milling persons, were enacted in Liverpool.

Police Roundup Italians

Police, who already had begun a general roundup of alien Italians immediately upon Italy's declaration of war, patrolled the streets heavily.

Indicative of the temper of Londoners was the angry crowd which surrounded a man who shouted "viva Il Duce."

"Lynch him," screamed the throng.

Flying squads of police were kept on the jump, but the crowds frequently got out of hand.

In London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Belfast and other cities in England, Scotland and Ireland, they nabbed thousands of Italians speedily under a plan arranged several days ago.

Italian Club Raided

The Italian club in central London was raided, and many Italian restaurants were dark and deserted.

Great Britain called Italy's entrance into the war as an act of "cowardice and treachery," and responded to the challenge tonight with a tremendous assault by land, sea and air forces on the reinforced Nazi war machine.

Italy's plunge into the conflict at the side of Germany, coupled with acknowledgment of the greatest single day's naval losses, including the 22,500-ton aircraft carrier Glorious and 23,206 tons of other vessels, brought Britons their blackest day of the war.

But they responded defiantly by announcing:

Allies Undaunted

"The Allied governments for some time have discounted the decision of Italy to enter the war as Germany's vassal. Their preparations are complete and they will know how to meet the sword with sword x x x in the struggle between civilization and the pagan hordes."

Words shifted quickly to action. "Important contingents" of new troops were disembarked in France. Considerable numbers of additional Royal Air Force planes are in the thick of the fighting on the continent. And the British fleet launched a tremendous shelling of German troops along the Nazi-occupied French coast.

The air ministry reported reinforced aerial units inflicted heavy damage on the Germans in northern France, in Rhenish Prussia and the Ruhr.

British officials said "hundreds of German planes" dropped bombs on England during the past few days in the hope of "immobilizing our fighters" but that they had "completely failed."

The Italian blow fell a few hours after the Allies abandoned Narvik, the far northern Norwegian port, to pour all their strength into the crucial battle of France.

Allies Score Mussolini

Britain's minister of information declared Italy's move "one of the vilest acts in history . . . Mussolini stabbed an old friend in the back."

France's Prime Minister Paul Reynaud accused Italy of being unwilling to negotiate differences peaceably, despite overtures by Pope Pius XII and President Roosevelt.

France is "ailing but not downed" he insisted and in the Mediterranean, Italy's "mare nostrum" the Allies "are stronger than anywhere else."

Military and diplomatic events tumbled over one another as the wires and radio crackled into the far corners of the earth the news that Italy had entered the boiling cauldron of Europe's war.

Amid the world-wide flurry over the Italian march to war, the fight in northern France was going badly for the Allies.

German tanks, plunging through Weygand line defenses ahead of the main German army, were reported cruising in the region of Paris.

Seine River Crossed

Though the French night communique declared the French were "holding everywhere" by hard counter attacks, it also said the Seine river had been crossed by some German units at certain points as well as in the Ourco river valley northeast of Paris.

The Seine valley west of Paris was the principal fighting area, but in the main, the German movement was a double-headed affair to blast in on the French capital from two sides.

Berlin declared its soldiers were between thirty and thirty-five miles from Paris.

As the fighting was outlined by the French, the Nazis has accomplished a break-through from Amiens to Rouen and from Amiens to Vernon as far as the lower Seine.

East of the Oise river, German forces advancing from the Soissons river attacked Arain on the Ourco river which is twelve miles north of the Marne river at one point.

New German divisions, meanwhile, resumed an attack on either side of Rethel.

In striking contrast to the expressions of regret, or defiance, or concern, that greeted the Italian move in other parts of the world, Adolf Hitler warmly declared he was profoundly moved by it and forthwith dispatched messages of congratulation to his good friend Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele.

Turkey Declares "Alert"

Turkey, bound by mutual assistance pacts to the Allies in the event an act of aggression brings war in the Mediterranean area, announced staunchly she would fulfill those obligations. She declared a state of "alert," virtually a wartime basis.

Russia made no comment on Italy's entry, merely announcing it over her radio.

The Canadian House of Commons quickly voted approval of a Canadian declaration of war on Italy, paralleling the stand of the dominion at the side of the mother country in the fight against Germany.

Reactions came thick and fast in the Balkans, area of Italian influence, possible theater of Italian military moves.

Budapest reported telephone communications were cut between Turkey and the rest of Europe.

Rumania Still Neutral

Rumanian called her crown council into session, presumably to affirm her neutrality in the new situation confronting the Balkans.

Yugoslavia called up technical troops and a source close to the government declared Russia was expected to rush to Yugoslavia's aid if her frontiers were violated. She also reshuffled her cabinet to represent all elements of the nation.

Egypt's government ordered distribution of gas masks and increased a special appropriation for her defense.

The United States was affected profoundly by Italy's decision.

Crowded galleries cheered loudly the appeal of Senator Lee (D-Okla) for the United States to "send the Allies everything we can except men."

A few minutes after Mussolini spoke, Secretary of State Hull expressed "the deliberate opinion that the entry of Italy into the war will prove a great disappointment to peoples everywhere and a great human tragedy."

troops into French territory through the Maritime alps into the Riviera.

Singularly, the official communique in Rome said Italy considered herself at war with France as of today, Tuesday, June 11.

Britain and France, out-maneuvered and out-fought in Adolf Hitler's drives into Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and Flanders, and backing up to the walls of Paris, took Italy's act with scorn and equanimity.

All these nine months of war, declared Britain, the Allies have figured on Italy entering the war "as Germany's vassal" and they well know how to meet "sword with sword" in the "struggle between civilization and the Pagan hordes."

Crew Sets It Afire in St. Lawrence River When War Is Declared

OTTAWA, June 10. (AP)—The crew of an Italian ship sought to evade capture by Canadian authorities tonight by setting the vessel afire in the St. Lawrence river. A Royal Canadian navy mine sweeper folled the attempt.

The Italian vessel was the Capo Nilo, 3,690 tons, which sailed from Montreal yesterday.

Announcement of its capture came from the Canadian department of national defense. The ship was overtaken off the Big Islands, 10 miles west of Rimouski, which is 180 miles east of Quebec.

Ever since the ship left Montreal yesterday afternoon it had been followed by Canadian units.

Overtaken by the minesweeper the Capo Nilo's crew ran it aground and set her on fire.

No Intervention Possible, Legion Commander Says

Kelly Sure United States Cannot Enter European War Soon

CHICAGO, June 10—(AP)—Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, declared tonight that it would be "idle to consider" intervention in the European war "while our nation is ill-equipped to provide even a minimum of protection for the Monroe Doctrine."

"With what would we intervene?" he asked rhetorically. "We do not have on hand today the needed planes, weapons and materials to train properly the extremely modern armed forces we are able to put in the field. How, then, would we make our potential strength felt in short of two or three years?"

In a radio address over the N. B. C. blue network, he called for:

Congress to remain in session during the "emergency".

"Complete unity" in strengthening the army, navy and air forces.

"Summary action" to "stamp out the activities of "Communazi conspirators."

"We must pull no punches. There are more than 600 Communazi organizations flourishing in the United States. Many are Trojan horse and fifth column groups. They have no rightful place here among us."

Dewey Says FDR Speaks in Voice Of Belligerent

Asks President To State If He Intends To Involve U. S.

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Commenting on President Roosevelt's radio speech tonight, Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination declared the president spoke in "the voice of a belligerent."

"President Roosevelt's speech gives cause for grave concern," he said. "The words may be the words of a neutral but the voice is the voice of a belligerent. x x x"

Asserting this country's experience in 1917 showed that Americans "had to be educated for war," Dewey asked, "are we now being educated for a new war?"

"If the president intends to involve us in this war he should do so openly," he added. "That is an issue for the people to decide."

ROSENBAUM'S

Complete Text of Mussolini's Fiery Declaration of War

New York, June 10 (AP)—The text of Premier Mussolini's address, as translated and transcribed by NBC, follows:

Combatants on land, sea and in the air, blackshirts of the revolution and of the legion, men and women of Italy, of the empire and of the kingdom of Albania, listen:

An hour signed by destiny is ticking on the skies of our country. An hour of the irrevocable decisions, a declaration of war, has already been given to the ambassadors of Great Britain and France.

We shall descend on the fields against the plutocratic democracies and the reactionary democracies of the west—who in all times have always obstructed the march of the Italian people. Some facts of more recent history can be assumed in these words, promises, menaces, threats against us by 52 states. Our conscience is absolutely quiet. With us the whole world is a testament that Italy has done what was humanly possible to avoid the storm that is overhanging Europe.

It was enough to see again the treaties, to realize that they were not adequate to the times and that they would have to be changed. The Allies should have accepted the proposals of Hitler before the Polish campaign.

Today we are decided to face the sacrifices of the war and the risks of the war to safeguard the honor and the interests and the future, because a great people is only such if it considers sacred those pledges which determine history.

You will take arms to safeguard our frontiers and also to solve the maritime problems. We want to break the chains which are keeping our seas closed, because 45 millions of souls are not free unless they have free access to the ocean.

This gigantic effort is the fight of the rich recund people against those who have nothing but who are rich with arms and the right to work.

Our will—Italy does not intend to bring other people into the conflict. Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Egypt will take notice of this fact.

Italians—in a memorable gathering in Berlin, I said that according to the laws of Fascist morale, when you have a friend, you march with him to the end.

With Germany we shall march with these victorious armed forces. In this vigil of such an important event we think of the Italian Emperor-King, Victor Emmanuel. He has interpreted forever the soul of Italy. Italy, Fascist and proletarian Italy, is for the third time on its feet, strong and united. The word of order is only one: Categoric and imperative—victory.

And we shall win! — to give finally a long period of peace to Italy, to Europe, to the world.

Nazis Battle To Close Clamp Around City of Paris

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 10 — German troops fighting to close a vast semi-circular clamp around Paris were reported tonight within thirty to thirty five miles of the French capital as the rejoicing German Reich greeted with open arms the march of Italy into the war against Britain and France.

Confidence in a prompt victory over France spread boundlessly.

With the prospect that France now would receive a terrific smash from the south, the belief grew among Germans that the hard-pressed Frenchmen soon would be brought to their knees.

Italians in Riviera

Italy lost no time in lashing out at France, authorized German circles said. Italian troops were reported to have marched into the French Riviera at 6:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m., E.S.T.) a short while before Premier Mussolini announced the state of war but after the declaration of hostilities had been handed to the French and British ambassadors.

The Germans greeted Mussolini's plunge with assertions that the Rome-Berlin axis "has become an alliance of blood and steel."

Germany's army was reported making progress in its drive of Paris.

In reliable quarters it was stated an enveloping movement in the semi-circular form was closing about the French capital.

German aviators it was said, were swooping over Paris and dropping leaflets in which the French population was urged to "give up the futile resistance."

German tank divisions were said to be on the Seine river northwest of Paris.

One wedge of Nazi forces were reported to have reached a point east of Rouen, on the Seine.

Another wedge, it was said, pushed its way forward to the Ourcq river south of Soissons, northeast of the French capital.

Although it was reliably stated that the Germans were within thirty to thirty-five miles of Paris, the reports mentioned no specific points that distance from the city.

German's satisfaction over Mussolini's decision was proclaimed by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop in a solemn announcement to the press.

"Germany is overwhelmed with joy at Fascist Italy's own initative to advance at Germany's side against the common enemy," von Ribbentrop said.

He asserted the fight would be carried on until the "vital rights of our two peoples are respected."

Then Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, whose whereabouts remained a strictly-guarded secret, quickly sent messages of felicitation to Premier Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele.

Hitler's message to the king, presumably dispatched from his field headquarters, observed that the Italian step was "ordained by providence" and that the axis partners were determined to be assured of their vital rights "for all the time."

To Il Duce, Hitler messaged:

"The historical decision which you announced today moved me most deeply. German armed forces are glad to be able to stand in battle at the side of their Italian comrades."

Hitler Wires Mussolini

Hitler told Mussolini that "the rising disrespect for the national living rights of Italy by the rulers in London and Paris has now led us together — we who already were most closely bound in the world outlook through our revolutions and politically through treaties — in the great battle for the freedom and future of our nation."

Immediately after making the Reich's pronouncement, von Ribbentrop hurried to the Italian embassy, where he had a long and earnest conversation with the Italian ambassador, Dino Alfieri.

Alfieri was called to the balcony of the embassy by clamoring crowds.

Speaking briefly, he said "the pact of steel which von Ribbentrop and Ciano (Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano) sealed here a year ago came to practical expression in the alliance of arms and blood today."

The last twenty-four hours had been a victory parade for the German people.

First came word that two German battleships, the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, were back in action and had sunk the British aircraft carrier Glorious (which British officials admitted today).

Then came announcement of capitulation of the Norwegian army —the third enemy army to fall before German arms in a month. The Netherlands and Belgium previously had given up the fight.

A row of reported successes on the long front across northern France was told in headlines in German papers — and then came Il Duce's word that Italy had entered the war at the side of the Reich.

Tried to Sway Italy

Mr. Roosevelt brushed aside the secrecy surrounding his communications with Premier Mussolini of Italy to relate how the government had tried to swerve Italy away from war.

He said he had proposed that if Italy would refrain from going to war, he would be willing to ask assurances from "the other powers concerned" that they would execute faithfully any agreement made to effect readjustments desired by Italy.

Such an island represents to me and to the overwhelming majority of Americans today a helpless nightmare of a people without freedom, a people lodged in prison, handcuffed, hungry, fed through the bars from day to day by the contempuous, unpitying masters of other continents. xxx

"Let us not hesitate—all of us—to proclaim certain trusts. Overwhelmingly we, as a nation, and this applies to all the other American nations, are convinced that military and naval victory for the gods of force and hate would endanger the institutions of democracy in the western world—and that equality, therefore, the whole of our sympathies lie with those nations which are giving their life-blood in combat against those forces."

Balkans Worried Over Entrance of Italy into War

Do Not Trust Hitler or Mussolini To Keep Their Word

BUDAPEST, June 10 (AP)—Turkey's imminent fulfillment of her mutual assistance pact with Britain and France became the key tonight to the future of the vastly-worried Balkans, which rumbled with frenzied military preparations as a result of Italy's declaration of war against the Allies.

Cloaked in sudden strict censorship, the Turkish government declared a state of "alert," putting the nation on a virtually full wartime basis.

Turkish officials said unofficially they were ready to live up to their agreement with Britain and France.

Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece and Bulgaria all urgently looked to their own military precautions while casting anxious eyes toward Turkey and toward Soviet Russia.

Despite Premier Mussolini's statement that Italy's little neighbors would be safe as long as they observed strict neutrality, the Balkans were taking no chances, for they have expected the worst while hoping for the best ever since Germany and the Allies went to war last Sptember.

Most of them remember that Germany gave similar assurances to her little neighbors shortly before invading Denmark, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium.

Ford Plans New Airplane Motor

Examines U. S. Army Pursuit Plane at His Detroit Plant

By DAVID L. WILKIE

DETROIT, June 10 (AP)—Henry Ford, examining a fast United States army pursuit plane to determine its adaptability to mass production methods, disclosed today he is working on a new airplane motor.

The seventy-six-year-old automobile manufacturer who said he could build 1,000 standard planes a day under certain conditions, did not describe the new motor in detail.

His comment was made as, accompanied by engineers and high officials of the Ford Motor Company, he clambored over and peered into a Curtiss P-40 plane flown here from Langley Field at his request.

Ford, after a preliminary inspection of the plane, received permission to keep it here for a closer examination, and also was promised that an even faster type of plane—the twin-motored Lockheed P-28—would be here for his study in a few days. The top speed of the single-engined P-40 is 267 miles an hour; the P-38 has a maximum speed of 420 miles an hour.

Of the new motor, which Ford said he believed would be an improvement over present engines, the industrialist said only that it was of simplified construsction and was of the Rolls Royce type.

Asked if the plane appeared more complicated than he anticipated, Henry said "No." When he said he could build 1,000 planes a day, he stipulated there must be no "meddling by governmental agencies" and no changes in specifications after production was started.

War Bulletins

MADRID, June 10 (AP)—The news of Mussolini's declaration of war spread quickly in Spain tonight and caused intense, if restrained excitement.

No official neutrality steps were announced immediately, although it was known the government has moved to have everything ready to defend Spanish soil.

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill is expected to make a public statement in the House of Commons tomorrow on Italy's entry into the war.

BOGOTA, Colombia, June 10 (AP)—A violent anti-Italian demonstration broke out here today when the word came that Italy had declared war on Britain and France.

Italian commercial establishments were damaged.

BASEL Switzerland, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Heavy artillery of the French forts along the Rhine opened fire on German positions in Baden this morning, as they did yesterday.

LONDON, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—A Rome radio announcement heard here said Premier Mussolini will be supreme commander of the Italian armed forces in the conflict declared yesterday. The king will remain as "nominal chief."

hand, and France and the United Kingdom on th other.

Another declared a state of war to exist between Italy on the one hand and France and the United Kingdom on the other. This automatically extended the neutrality act to this conflict.

The third proclamation dealt with the use of ports and territorial waters of the United States by warships and armed merchant vessels of the belligerents.

The executive order was issued under the first proclamation and contained three regulations.

The first dealt with exceptions to the "cash and carry" policy which will henceforth apply to United States exports to Italy.

The second forebade United States citizens to travel on Italian ships.

The third imposed restrictions upon the solicitation and collection of contributions for Italy in this country.

The orders were signed by President Roosevelt late tonight upon his return from Charlottesville, Va. The proclamations were written in technical language as amendments to similar proclamations issued at the start of the war between Germany and France and England.

Rep. Rogers (R-Mass): "The speech sounded to me like a prelude to a declaration of war."

Senator Hatch (D-New Mex) declared that "the president's words today constitute a complete abandonment of any pretense towards socalled neutrality. If this government furnishes material aid to a belligerent, of course we have assumed at least a non-belligerent role."

Complete Text of Mussolini's Fiery Declaration of War

New York, June 10 (AP)—The text of Premier Mussolini's address, as translated and transcribed by NBC, follows:

Combatants on land, sea and in the air, blackshirts of the revolution and of the legion, men and women of Italy, of the empire and of the kingdom of Albania, listen:

An hour signed by destiny is ticking on the skies of our country. An hour of the irrevocable decisions, a declaration of war, has already been given to the ambassadors of Great Britain and France.

We shall descend on the fields against the plutocratic democracies and the reactionary democracies of the west—who in all times have always obstructed the march of the Italian people. Some facts of more recent history can be assumed in these words, promises, menaces, threats against us by 52 states. Our conscience is absolutely quiet. With us the whole world is a testament that Italy has done what was humanly possible to avoid the storm that is overhanging Europe.

It was enough to see again the treaties, to realize that they were not adequate to the times and that they would have to be changed. The Allies should have accepted the proposals of Hitler before the Polish campaign.

Today we are decided to face the sacrifices of the war and the risks of the war to safeguard the honor and the interests and the future, because a great people is only such if it considers sacred those pledges which determine history.

You will take arms to safeguard our frontiers and also to solve the maritime problems. We want to break the chains which are keeping our seas closed, because 45 millions of souls are not free unless they have free access to the ocean.

This gigantic effort is the fight of the rich recund people against those who have nothing but who are rich with arms and the right to work.

Our will—Italy does not intend to bring other people into the conflict. Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Egypt will take notice of this fact.

Italians—in a memorable gathering in Berlin, I said that according to the laws of Fascist morale, when you have a friend, you march with him to the end.

With Germany we shall march with these victorious armed forces. In this vigil of such an important event we think of the Italian Emperor-King, Victor Emmanuel. He has interpreted forever the soul of Italy. Italy, Fascist and proletarian Italy, is for the third time on its feet, strong and united. The word of order is only one: Categoric and imperative—victory.

And we shall win! — to give finally a long period of peace to Italy, to Europe, to the world.

Italian people, to arms: and show your tenacity, your courage, your valor.

Scuttled Near Gibraltar To Prevent Capture by British

LA LINEA, Spain, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Two Italian merchant ships, the 10,000-ton Chelina and the 2,000-ton Numbolia, were scuttled by their crews in Gibraltar waters late yesterday when their crews heard the radio news that Italy had gone to war.

Sixty persons from the Chelina, including a nurse and one passenger, reached La Linea.

Captain Adolfo Muntjan said he ordered the crew to take to the boats and then he sprinkled the ship with gasoline and set it to blazing with bombs when he heard that Mussolini had announced Italy's entry into the conflict.

Half of the crew of the other Italian ship, the Numbolia, was able to reach La Linea. The other half was picked up by British boats and made prisoners as they swam ashore.

sands of milling persons, were enacted in Liverpool.

Police Roundup Italians

Police, who already had begun a general roundup of alien Italians immediately upon Italy's declaration of war, patrolled the streets heavily.

Indicative of the temper of Londoners was the angry crowd which surrounded a man who shouted "viva Il Duce."

"Lynch him," screamed the throng.

Flying squads of police were kept on the jump, but the crowds frequently got out of hand.

In London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Belfast and other cities in England, Scotland and Ireland, they nabbed thousands of Italians speedily under a plan arranged several days ago.

Italian Club Raided

The Italian club in central London was raided, and many Italian restaurants were dark and deserted.

Great Britain called Italy's entrance into the war as an act of "cowardice and treachery," and responded to the challenge tonight with a tremendous assault by land, sea and air forces on the reinforced Nazi war machine.

Italy's plunge into the conflict at the side of Germany, coupled with acknowledgment of the greatest single day's naval losses, including the 22,500-ton aircraft carrier Glorious and 23,206 tons of other vessels, brought Britons their blackest day of the war.

But they responded defiantly by announcing:

Allies Undaunted

"The Allied governments for some time have discounted the decision of Italy to enter the war as Germany's vassal. Their preparations are complete and they will know how to meet the sword with sword x x x in the struggle between civilization and the pagan hordes."

Words shifted quickly to action. "Important contingents" of new troops were disembarked in France. Considerable numbers of additional Royal Air Force planes are in the thick of the fighting on the continent. And the British fleet launched a tremendous shelling of German troops along the Nazi-occupied French coast.

The air ministry reported reinforced aerial units inflicted heavy damage on the Germans in northern France, in Rhenish Prussia and the Ruhr.

British officials said "hundreds of German planes" dropped bombs on England during the past few days in the hope of "immobilizing our fighters" but that they had "completely failed."

The Italian blow fell a few hours after the Allies abandoned Narvik, the far northern Norwegian port, to pour all their strength into the crucial battle of France.

troops into French territory through the Maritime alps into the Riviera.

Singularly, the official communique in Rome said Italy considered herself at war with France as of today, Tuesday, June 11.

Britain and France, out-maneuvered and out-fought in Adolf Hitler's drives into Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and Flanders, and backing up to the walls of Paris, took Italy's act with scorn and equanimity.

All these nine months of war, declared Britain, the Allies have figured on Italy entering the war "as Germany's vassal" and they well know how to meet "sword with sword" in the "struggle between civilization and the Pagan hordes."

Allies Score Mussolini

Britain's minister of information declared Italy's move "one of the vilest acts in history . . . Mussolini stabbed an old friend in the back."

France's Prime Minister Paul Reynaud accused Italy of being unwilling to negotiate differences peaceably, despite overtures by Pope Pius XII and President Roosevelt.

France is "ailing but not downed" he insisted and in the Mediterranean, Italy's "mare nostrum" the Allies "are stronger than anywhere else."

Military and diplomatic events tumbled over one another as the wires and radio crackled into the far corners of the earth the news that Italy had entered the boiling cauldron of Europe's war.

Amid the world-wide flurry over the Italian march to war, the fight in northern France was going badly for the Allies.

German tanks, plunging through Weygand line defenses ahead of the main German army, were reported cruising in the region of Paris.

Seine River Crossed

Though the French night communique declared the French were "holding everywhere" by hard counter attacks, it also said the Seine river had been crossed by some German units at certain points as well as in the Ourco river valley northeast of Paris.

The Seine valley west of Paris was the principal fighting area, but in the main, the German movement was a double-headed affair to blast in on the French capital from two sides.

Berlin declared its soldiers were between thirty and thirty-five miles from Paris.

As the fighting was outlined by the French, the Nazis has accomplished a break-through from Amiens to Rouen and from Amiens to Vernon as far as the lower Seine.

East of the Oise river German forces advancing from the Soissons river attacked Arain on the Ourco river which is twelve miles north of the Marne river at one point.

New German divisions, meanwhile, resumed an attack on either side of Rethel.

In striking contrast to the expressions of regret, or defiance, or concern, that greeted the Italian move in other parts of the world, Adolf Hitler warmly declared he was profoundly moved by it and forthwith dispatched messages of congratulation to his good friend Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele.

Turkey Declares "Alert"

Turkey, bound by mutual assistance pacts to the Allies in the event an act of aggression brings war in the Mediterranean area, announced staunchly she would fulfill those obligations. She declared a state of "alert," virtually a wartime basis.

Russia made no comment on Italy's entry, merely announcing it over her radio.

The Canadian House of Commons quickly voted approval of a Canadian declaration of war on Italy, paralleling the stand of the dominion at the side of the mother country in the fight against Germany.

Reactions came thick and fast in the Balkans, area of Italian influence, possible theater of Italian military moves.

Budapest reported telephone communications were cut between Turkey and the rest of Europe.

Rumania Still Neutral

Rumanian called her crown council into session, presumably to affirm her neutrality in the new situation confronting the Balkans.

Yugoslavia called up technical troops and a source close to the government declared Russia was expected to rush to Yugoslavia's aid if her frontiers were violated. She also reshuffled her cabinet to represent all elements of the nation.

Egypt's government ordered distribution of gas masks and increased a special appropriation for her defense.

The United States was affected profoundly by Italy's decision.

Crowded galleries cheered loudly the appeal of Senator Lee (D-Okla) for the United States to "send the Allies everything we can except men."

A few minutes after Mussolini spoke, Secretary of State Hull expressed "the deliberate opinion that the entry of Italy into the war will prove a great disappointment to peoples everywhere and a great human tragedy."

Crew Sets It Afire in St. Lawrence River When War Is Declared

OTTAWA, June 10. (AP)—The crew of an Italian ship sought to evade capture by Canadian authorities tonight by setting the vessel afire in the St. Lawrence river. A Royal Canadian navy mine sweeper foiled the attempt.

The Italian vessel was the Capo Nilo, 3,690 tons, which sailed from Montreal yesterday.

Announcement of its capture came from the Canadian department of national defense. The ship was overtaken off the big Mingan lands, 10 miles west of Rimouski, which is 180 miles east of Quebec.

Ever since the ship left Montreal yesterday afternoon it had been followed by Canadian units.

Overtaken by the minesweeper the Capo Nilo's crew ran her aground and set her on fire.

No Intervention Possible, Legion Commander Says

Kelly Sure United States Cannot Enter European War Soon

CHICAGO, June 10—(AP)—Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, declared tonight that it would be "idle to consider" intervention in the European war "while our nation is ill-equipped to provide even a minimum of protection for the Monroe Doctrine."

"With what would we intervene?" he asked rhetorically. "We do not have on hand today the needed planes, weapons and materials to train properly the extremely moderate armed forces we are able to put in the field. How, then, would we make our potential strength felt short of two or three years?"

In a radio address over the N. B. C. blue network, he called for:

Congress to remain in session during the "emergency".

"Complete unity" in strengthening the army, navy and air forces.

"Summary action" to "stamp out" the activities of "Communazi conspirators."

"We must pull no punches. There are more than 600 Communazi organizations flourishing in the United States. Many are Trojan horse and fifth column groups. They have no rightful place here among us."

Dewey Says FDR Speaks in Voice Of Belligerent

Asks President To State He Intends To Involve U. S.

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Commenting on President Roosevelt's radio speech tonight, Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination declared the president spoke in "the voice of a belligerent."

"President Roosevelt's speech gives cause for grave concern," he said. "The words may be the words of a neutral but the voice is the voice of a belligerent. x x x"

Asserting this country's experience in 1917 showed that Americans "had to be educated for war," Dewey asked, "are we now being educated for a new war?"

"If the president intends to involve us in this war he should say so openly," he added. "That is the issue for the people to decide."

Diet Can Help To Cure High Blood Pressure

Different Kind of Life and Change of Habits Also Recommended

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

People who have been told that they have high blood pressure are inclined to believe that going on a diet is, alone, enough to fix them. I suppose it is natural for them to have this kind of psychology. Voltaire said that if there were no God, we would have to invent one: the remark applies to the high blood pressure patient and his diet.

High blood pressure usually afflicts those who have lived well, who are a little, or more than a little, overweight, who enjoy the good things of the table, who have lived a gay and happy life under high pressure. When they are confronted with a verdict that something has happened to their mechanism, they naturally look back with regret on all the good times that they had and they are inclined to ascribe their plight to their indulgences. They also think that if they reform and live an ascetic and monastic kind of life things will be reversed.

This, as I say, is perfectly natural, but I believe their consciences need not be so troubled because I seriously doubt if their condition is due to any habits or ways of life. Nor, in my opinion, will diet alone fix them up. They must be content to lead a different kind of life and to change their habits in more particulars than one. They must be ready to take the strain off the entire system, including the strain of worry and business enterprises.

"Neutral Diet"

Of course, this includes diet. If they reduce activities and worry and strain, one way to do it is by reducing the number and content of exciting meals and the stimulation that goes with them.

A diet that fulfils these requirements is the so-called "neutral diet." This emphasizes an increase of the carbohydrates and starches, and a decrease of the protein, the ratio being about 50 protein, 100 fat and 200 carbohydrate.

A sample diet is a follows:

Breakfast

Apple sauce; dry oatmeal; whole wheat toast; butter; milk; cream, twenty percent; sugar.

Dinner

Dry, polished rice, butter; lean steak; canned green beans, butter; whole wheat bread, butter; dry tapioca, stewed prunes, sugar; cream, twenty per cent; sugar.

Supper

Dry macaroni, milk; fresh asparagus—butter; lettuce, sliced tomato, mayonnaise; whole wheat bread; butter; canned pears; milk; cream, twenty percent; sugar.

Questions and Answers

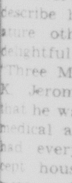

D. P. B.: "Please tell me what 'water on the knee' comes from and how you can treat it?"

Answer: The condition which you describe has quite a place in literature other than medical. In a delightful book of long ago called "Three Men in a Boat," by Jerome K. Jerome, the author mentions that he was reading through a home medical adviser and found that he had every disease mentioned except housemaid's knee. The term more or less explains itself. There is a synovial sac or bursa in front of the knee cap which, when inflamed, gets full of water, and by some humorist it was christened "housemaid's knee." It does not occur in housemaids nearly so often as it does in football players, although injury is a prime cause of the condition. There is another form of water on the knee which may be in the knee joint itself, and is part of any form of arthritis. The treatment of both forms is by rest and heat. The water of housemaid's knee can be drained off through a needle puncture, but it is likely to reform and is best left alone.

10-Inch Snake Devours Another One a Foot Long

Capturing two venomous adders at Mount Nebo, officials of the Queensland Museum in Brisbane, Australia, placed them in a case and shipped them to the museum to be exhibited.

On arrival at its destination the case contained only a twenty-inch snake and officials kept a close watch on the sand covering the bottom, thinking that a twelve-inch one had buried himself. Meanwhile the big snake slept. After two days it awoke and solved the mystery by disgorging a pile of bones and skin.

Farley Appoints Keynote Committee

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley has designated the twenty-one member committee to select the keynoter and permanent chairman of the party's national convention and called the committee to meet at Chicago, June 26.

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, the keynoter at the 1932 and 1936 conventions, has been mentioned frequently as the probable choice for permanent chairman of the convention opening at Chicago on July 15.

Among those discussed for the job of keynoting are Senators Byrnes of South Carolina and Lee of Oklahome, speaker Bankhead and Homer Cummings, former attorney general.

Meanwhile, the Republicans worked on details of a pre-convention session of their platform committee.

Chairman John Hamilton said that thirty-five members-designate of this resolutions committee had been named, but noted that contests involving three state delegations narrowed the list of certain members of the committee to thirty-two. Each state delegation selects a member of this committee.

Vandenberg Urges Cut in Salaries Of U. S. Employes

Says Defense Program Is Like Mustard Plaster on a Cancer

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — Terming the administration's defense tax program "not much more than a mustard plaster on a cancer," Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) urged that Congress reduce non-military government expenditures by ten per cent and cut federal salaries of more than $3,000 by the same amount.

The House Ways and Means Committee has approved legislation designed to raise $1,004,000,000 a year of additional revenue by increasing personal and corporate income taxes and most excise taxes.

Congress, Vandenberg said in a radio address, "should not adjourn until it realistically attacks preparedness on the fiscal as well as the military front." A sound public credit, he declared, was "the first line of national defense."

"The new taxes thus far proposed, though heavy and burdensome," he said, "will only pay twenty per cent of next year's operating deficit, with no account of these latest defense proposals. A crisis is obvious. xxx We are at the end of the road of deficit spending. We are at the bottom of the barrel."

Vandenberg declared, too, that the United States was no longer neutral toward the European war, but had become a non-belligerent—a non-fighting sympathizer and ally of Great Britain and France. He made these points in discussing defense and foreign policy.

Diet Can Help To Cure High Blood Pressure

Different Kind of Life and Change of Habits Also Recommended

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

People who have been told that they have high blood pressure are inclined to believe that going on a diet is, alone, enough to fix them. I suppose it is natural for them to have this kind of psychology. Voltaire said that if there were no God, we would have to invent one: the remark applies to the high blood pressure patient and his diet.

High blood pressure usually afflicts those who have lived well, who are a little, or more than a little, overweight, who enjoy the good things of the table, who have lived a gay and happy life under high pressure. When they are confronted with a verdict that something has happened to their mechanism, they naturally look back with regret on all the good times that they had and they are inclined to ascribe their plight to their indulgences. They also think that if they reform and live an ascetic and monastic kind of life things will be reversed. This, as I say, is perfectly natural, but I believe their consciences need not be so troubled because I seriously doubt if their condition is due to any habits or ways of life. Nor in my opinion, will diet alone fix them up. They must be content to lead a different kind of life and to change their habits in more particulars than one. They must be ready to take the strain off the entire system, including the strain of worry and business enterprises.

"Neutral Diet"

Of course, this includes diet. If they reduce activities and worry and strain, one way to do it is by reducing the number and content of exciting meals and the stimulation that goes with them.

A diet that fulfils these requirements is the so-called "neutral diet." This emphasizes an increase in the carbohydrates and starches, with a decrease of the protein, the fat being about 50 protein, 100 fat and 200 carbohydrate.

A sample diet is a follows:

Breakfast

Apple sauce; dry oatmeal; whole wheat toast; butter; milk; cream, twenty percent; sugar.

Dinner

Gravy, polished rice, butter; lean steak; canned green beans, butter; whole wheat bread, butter; dry tapioca, stewed prunes, sugar; cream, twenty per cent; sugar.

Supper

Gravy macaroni, milk; fresh asparagus—butter; lettuce, sliced tomato, mayonnaise; whole wheat bread; butter; canned pears; milk; cream, twenty percent; sugar.

Questions and Answers

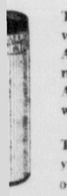

P. B.: "Please tell me what water on the knee' comes from and how you can treat it?"

Answer: The condition which you describe has quite a place in literature other than medical. In a delightful book of long ago called "Three Men in a Boat," by Jerome K. Jerome, the author mentions that he was reading through a home medical adviser and found that he had every disease mentioned except housemaid's knee. The term more or less explains itself. There is a synovial sac or bursa in front of the knee cap which, when inflamed, gets full of water, and by some humorist it was christened "housemaid's knee." It does not occur in housemaids nearly so often as it does in football players, although injury is a prime cause of the condition. There is another form of water on the knee which may be in the knee joint itself, and is part of any form of arthritis. The treatment of both forms is by rest and pressure. The water of housemaid's knee may be drained off through a needle puncture, but it is likely to return and is best left alone.

10-Inch Snake Devours Another One a Foot Long

Capturing two venomous adders at Mount Nebo, officials of the Queensland Museum in Brisbane, Australia, placed them in a case and shipped them to the museum to be exhibited.

On arrival at its destination the case contained only a twenty-inch snake and officials kept a close watch on the sand covering the bottom, thinking that a twelve-inch one had buried himself. Meanwhile the big snake slept. After two days it awoke and solved the mystery by disgorging a pile of bones and skin.

Farley Appoints Keynote Committee

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley has designated the twenty-one member committee to select the keynoter and permanent chairman of the party's national convention and called the committee to meet at Chicago, June 20.

Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, the keynoter at the 1932 and 1936 conventions, has been mentioned frequently as the probable choice for permanent chairman of the convention opening at Chicago on July 15.

Among those discussed for the job of keynoting are Senators Byrnes of South Carolina and Lee of Oklahome, speaker Bankhead and Homer Cummings, former attorney general.

Meanwhile, the Republicans worked on details of a pre-convention session of their platform committee.

Chairman John Hamilton said that thirty-five members-designate of this resolutions committee had been named, but noted that contests involving three state delegations narrowed the list of certain members of the committee to thirty-two. Each state delegation selects a member of this committee.

Vandenberg Urges Cut in Salaries Of U. S. Employes

Says Defense Program Is Like Mustard Plaster on a Cancer

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — Terming the administration's defense tax program "not much more than a mustard plaster on a cancer," Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) urged that Congress reduce non-military government expenditures by ten per cent and cut federal salaries of more than $3,000 by the same amount.

The House Ways and Means Committee has approved legislation designed to raise $1,004,000,000 a year of additional revenue by increasing personal and corporate income taxes and most excise taxes.

Congress, Vandenberg said in a radio address, "should not adjourn until it realistically attacks preparedness on the fiscal as well as the military front." A sound public credit, he declared, was "the first line of national defense."

"The new taxes thus far proposed, though heavy and burdensome," he said, "will only pay twenty per cent of next year's operating deficit, with no account of these latest defense proposals. A crisis is obvious. xxx We are at the end of the road of deficit spending. We are at the bottom of the barrel."

Vandenberg declared, too, that the United States was no longer neutral toward the European war, but had become a non-belligerent—a non-fighting sympathizer and ally of Great Britain and France. He made these points in discussing defense and foreign policy.

Army Furnishing Munitions for Allies

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP) — The Anglo-French purchasing board announced here that the "flow of munitions" of all kinds shipped from America will be immediately augmented as a result of recent federal action releasing surplus government equipment and material.

The board said it had been informed that "certain important quantities of war materials—old, but all in fully serviceable condition—have been or are being declared surplus by the United States army and navy."

A War Declaration Would Not Help

BELIEVING that it reflects the sentiment of the people of this section, which is in accord with the sentiment of the people generally throughout the country as registered in the usually accurate Gallup polls, this newspaper desires to enter dissent from the demand of thirty American educators, lawyers, writers and businessmen, speaking as individuals, that the United States declare war against Germany at once. The time may come when we shall have to do that, but the time is not now.

Successive polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion, of which Dr. George Gallup is director, have shown that the great majority of Americans are still opposed to sending an army and navy abroad to fight in the present European war. While the surveys have all along indicated that America is unwilling to enter the war, they are not indicative of a "peace at any price" sentiment in the country. "I'd volunteer if any nation made the slightest gesture against the United States," is the verdict that has been expressed time and time again, the last registration by the overwhelming majority of eighty-six per cent, which allows for the pacifists, the undecided and the Fifth Columnists, or their ilk. A recent poll also disclosed sentiment, by eighty-four per cent, in favor of entering the war, as a matter of self defense, should a victorious Germany attempt to take over the British, French or Dutch possessions in Latin America.

The time is not at hand, in the opinion of this newspaper, for this country to declare war. This nation has not been attacked. No move has been made to seize British, Dutch or French possessions in this hemisphere. For one moving reason, this nation is totally unprepared for war, and its big job right now is to prepare itself, a job that is beginning to get under way. Should we now declare war, we could not possibly send any sort of army abroad in time to do any good, and Britain, still mistress of the seas, needs no naval aid at present, or, so far as can be seen, in the immediate future.

What the Allies need are planes, tanks and other implements and munitions of war; and this country, under its policy of neutrality, is supplying these as rapidly as it is possible to supply them without impairing the defensive strength of this country, which should not be impaired in any eventuality until that is forced.

A declaration of war now would only make matters worse. The obvious job is to speed up production here, to build up our defenses, while continuing to ship to the Allies the things they need, which can not be furthered by a war gesture.

This is a time to guard against panic, against emotionalism, against a lack of calm, common sense. America's task is clear. It should be prosecuted as quickly and as sensibly as it is possible.

Senator Byrd Is Right About Congress Session

IMPERATIVE REASONS why the Congress of the United States should continue in session and not "run out on the people" in the face of the present grave crisis, have been set forth in these columns.

United States Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, a Democrat, has expressed this need in forcible terms.

"In this hour of supreme world crisis," he declares, "it is the plain duty of the Congress of the United States to remain in session and meet its responsibilities. The happenings of the next few weeks in Europe may be so momentous as to have a profound effect upon our own civilization.

"Here at home we have the colossal task of defense preparations without interference with the purchase of military supplies in this country by France and England, as authorized by law. We have the problem of financing the huge cost of our rearmament program, as well as other vital conditions to meet.

"In this emergency Congress has its constitutional duties to perform and its constitutional responsibilities to meet. It should not render itself incapable of meeting these by adjourning on June 22, as proposed."

Senator Byrd is dead right about this.

The Broadening of The Tax Base

REDUCTION in income tax exemptions from $2,500 to $2,000 for heads of families and from $1,000 to $800 for single persons has been approved by the House subcommittee in charge of the revenue bill. It is estimated that this broadening of the tax base will increase the number of federal income taxpayers from 3,750,000 to 5,800,000. Two million more Americans would pay income taxes and presumably would develop a more direct and personal interest in just what is being done with the money which the federal government collects.

This substantial increase in the number of tax-conscious Americans is more important than the additional revenue which would be derived from the lowering of exemptions. The proposed "supertax" of ten per cent on normal individual and corporate income taxes — to say nothing of possible increases in base rates — will go far toward swelling revenues. But such increases in the burdens carried by present taxpayers would not do more than provide additional revenue for "emergency" purposes. The present undemocratic federal tax structure would be left untouched.

Some may take exception to that word, "undemocratic," in this connection; but its use is justified. Maybe "soak the rich"—or rather "soak the moderately well-to-do"—is a soul-satisfying slogan to the politician who poses as a friend of the masses. But it is not a democratic slogan. The essence of democracy is an equitable sharing of the benefits and the responsibilities of government. And, since the days of ancient Rome, a "soak the rich" program always has culminated in a policy of soaking everybody—and soaking the poor the hardest of all.

As a matter of sober fact, the process of raising a tall, narrow structure of high taxes on a small base does soak the poor just as hard as it soaks the rich. Inordinately high taxes paid by the "big fellow" do not come out of any private storehouse of riches of his own. He simply turns over to the government large sums which otherwise might be distributed among his less affluent fellow-citizens in the form of wages or other expenditures—or he charges enough more for the goods and services which he sells to make up for his additional taxes.

In the final analysis, men who never made an income tax return in their lives are helping to pay the existing heavy surtaxes on individual and corporate incomes.

A taxpayer never feels a "hidden tax" as acutely as he feels a tax which he pays directly to government. Therefore, a broadening of the tax base is sure to have a salutary effect on public opinion in relation to government finances. The new income taxpayers, which the House subcommittee proposes to add to the rolls, already have a real stake in sound federal financing. But they will be far more keenly aware of their stake when they pay a plainly labeled tax directly into the United States Treasury.

And anyway "national protection" should be paid for by all who share in that protection.

A Practical Suggestion For Home Defense

CONTENDING that Americans no longer are as expert with rifle and revolver as they were during earlier days and that facility in handling firearms is vitally necessary for one's own protection in war, the Military Engineer suggests establishment of shooting galleries or ranges in all cities and towns of one thousand persons or more. The magazine advocates that operation of the ranges be carried on by the regular army, the national guard and the organized reserves.

"Some may think that it takes only a few days after being enlisted or drafted for a soldier to learn how to shoot," says the magazine. "Unless one begins the use of firearms early in life, he seldom excels. On the battlefield the man who is so familiar with shooting that his piece is really a part of him will survive where his less experienced companion may fail."

The contention that the prevalence of shooting ranges would make a nation war-minded is disposed of by reference to Switzerland, where every man, woman and child knows how to shoot; yet Switzerland has not had a war since Napoleon. The Russo-Finnish war is cited as an example in which a people, the Finns, knowing how to use firearms effectively, made a remarkable showing against a much more powerful enemy.

In view of the news from Europe, there perhaps will be few persons to disagree with the theory that Americans should know how to handle firearms with facility.

The old quarrel between the urge to freedom and the urge to eat is settled, in Hollywood. Columbia Pictures, Inc., retitles its "Ode to Liberty." It is now "He Stayed for Breakfast."

A new type pumpkin has been developed which is just large enough to produce enough material for only one pie. We always said science would some day go too far.

Ten millions unemployed in the United States—more than are engaged in war in Europe!

Letter to a Friend

By MARSHALL MASLIN

"My Dear Friend:

"It is nearly two years since you have written to me. It is longer than that, since you have had a letter from me. But sitting here tonight, I began to think of that time more than a quarter of a century ago when we first met in our college days.

Marshall Maslin

"We were so young and we thought we were so wise. Perhaps we WERE wise. It is not for me, a middle-eged man whose hair is nearly all gray, to pass judgment on those two young fellows. . . . You do remember, of course, that we grew into manhood at a time when men were fighting in Europe and we read avidly and thought long about that war. Do you remember that belovedly impatient and passionate professor who was such a partisan for the allied cause? Do you remember that moment in class when you argued against our participation in that war and angered him so far out of self-control that he rose from his desk and grasped you by the shoulders and shook you? Of course you do.

"But we were young and when America declared war, we enlisted almost immediately and went across the Atlantic almost immediately, too, and were comrades together for nearly two years in France. . . . That was a ghastly war but does it seem to you, my friend, as it seems to me—that it was almost a little war compared with this murderous catastrophe that has come upon the world today?

"Is it only because I am older now that this war seems so much more terrible, as though it might split our world apart and leave it in bloody fragments? I believe, to be sure, that whatever happens men will go on and will build upon the ruins. I believe that no civilization based on the enslavement of man's will or body can possibly survive. I believe in the perfectability of human beings. Even in such a time as this, I cling—almost desperately—to my conviction that man is a rising, growing creature and that his nature is of infinite enrichment.

"Once you believed as I do. Once we talked the night almost through about the lovely, fascinating, delightful business of being alive. And even after our two years in that last war we were still lovers of our species and glad to be alive.

"Do you still believe that? Older and sadder and wiser, is that faith in our race still an ingredient of your being, does it still throb with your heart? Is it as enduring as our friendship, my friend?

"Write to me, my old companion. Tell me what you think. Assure me that we have not wasted our lives in vain imaginings.

"I am "THAT OLD FRIEND OF YOURS."

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

Washington, June 10.—The impression is being given that the sale of airplanes, cannon and small arms to the Allies is, as Senator Pittman called it, "perfectly legal." Even since the Hague Convention of 1907, the United States Neutrality act, 1918, and the British Foreign Enlistment act, 1870, it is illegal for a nation not at war to "furnish any belligerent with "troops, munitions of war, money or with commodities of direct or indirect use in war." A private individual can do it at his own rish. So we "sell" them to an individual—or do we'

Press reports have said that the attorney general's office has approved this as legal at international law. What the solicitor general really said was that it was lawful to sell surplus war materials to an individual or corporation. He couldn't have honestly said that it is lawful for our government to "furnish" its military equipment to a belligerent. If you can "sell" an airplane, you can sell a battleship—or a regiment.

A Subterfuge

What is this "clever little scheme." It is, explains Senator Pittman, like trading in an old automobile to a manufacturer for credit on some future purchase of a new one. Then, says Senator Pittman, "We don't know what the manafacturers will do with the stuff we trade in, and it's none of our business."

What do you think of that for frankness and honesty by a mouthpiece of our great and honorable government? We know exactly what the "manufacturers" will do with the stuff. We procured them to do it, made it our business, and are party to the deal. In other words, the statement is false and this section is a subterfuge to conceal something which under our own law and international law is an act of war.

Rejected Overwhelmingly

Congress has under advisement the sale of this material in this way. A committee of the Senate overwhelmingly rejected it as a violation of international law and an act of war. It is the duty of Congress alone to autorize war. This is no action "short of war." It is war. In defiance of the Congress and the constitution, the president by a slick trick has circumvented the war-making power and arrogated to the executive a right to commit this country to an act of war.

It will be interesting to see what will happen to the Senator's automobile "trade-in" theory when it comes to shipping our "surplus" 75 mm cannon. We did not buy them from any American company. We bought them from France. Is France now going to furnish us any "trade-in" cannons? They are not surplus in any true sense. They are the only reserve artillery we have. General Marshall testified that, instead of getting the new 101 mm. guns we need, our general staff had decided to recondition these old 75's because the new guns would cost too much and take too long to get. The fact is that under present methods they would take years to get.

Necessity for Defense

Much the same thing is true of our reserve supply of rifles. We will get new semi-automatic rifles only two years hence and then only for a fraction of the force we should need in war. We are not making any other shoulder rifles. What we are getting ready to send abroad is a necessity for home defense. The Navy planes are not even reported by the Navy as obsolete.They are "temporarily in excess of requirements" because the reserve pilots for them "have been ordered to Pensacola."

What is being done is an act of panic and imprudence, but skip that for the moment. The truly dangerous significance of this act is the presidential usurpation of congressional war powers. He is frothing to get Congress to go home. He secured a recess to prevent debate on this. If he dares to do this with Congress in session, what can we expect when Congress is gone?

If it is the will of this country to commit this act of war, let's do it. But let's do it without any small cheating and let's do it as the constitution intends, as an act of the direct representatives of the American people, who alone are charged with this responsibility.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

South America Holds Big Opportunity For Development of Yankee Aviation

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Latin America is not unfriendly to the idea of ousting German aviation from its midst in response to the suggestion that the United States undoubtedly can provide a better service for our southern neighbors and incidentally in the interest of western hemispherical solidarity.

Andrew J. May

Following the last World War Germany was somewhat more prompt than the United States in introducing its air shipping into the southern continent.

It has not now nearly so many planes in that part of the world as this country has, but it does have the advantage of a reputation for being first on the ground.

The German company also has been at much pains to popularize itself in the southern republics by means of low fares and even free rides. In brief, the system has been quite an effective means of propaganda. The pilots mostly are Germans or of German ancestry and sympathies.

Chairman Andrew J. May, of the representatives' Military Affairs committee, who has been prominently identified with plans to defend the western hemisphere, is energetically seeking permission to establish air bases in Central and South America.

His version is that considerable subversive activity prevails to the southward. However, the southern governments claim to have the situation in hand.

Panama Canal

Nevertheless, republics like Colombia and Ecuador are uncomfortably close to the Panama canal. It also appears that the German planes for the most part are of a type which could easily be converted into bombers.

To be sure, Yankee experts do not believe that German air strength in this part of the world is sufficient to conduct a general campaign of any consequence. Still, the Panama canal might be put out of commission in pretty short order, which would be plenty bad enough.

Our Latin neighbors from the very early days of the airplane have favored that means of transportation.

It may seem odd that a largely primitive area should have done so. That, however, was the very reason why they found aviation so much of a convenience for their purposes. Their railroads are few and far between. Their highways during much of the year are impassable. Huge two-wheeled carts (wheels about eight feet high) and dragged by oxen may wade through them with much difficulty. Flivvers can't negotiate them.

Premium On Flying

But a farmer who, by road, may be ten days from his nearest settlement, quite likely is able to fly the distance in an hour or less.

Consequently, the South Americas are surprisingly well equipped with ground facilities for flyers.

Development of Yankee aviation in South America therefore offers a real opportunity which has been greatly neglected.

German aviation doubtless is more strongly entrenched in southern Brazil than elsewhere, principally because the two southern Brazilian states are virtually solidly German. However, geographically, the Brazilian coast is not so situated as to cause much worry in connection with Panama.

The present war has interfered very little, if any, with these Nazi air activities.

America Has The Wheels

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

The paper program for national defense, at its present dimensions and rate of translation into reality, can be expected to yield no startling results in the immediate future either in armament or in reemployment. Experts estimate that it will be about six months before its effects can be felt on any appreciable scale.

New shipyards and new airplane plants must be constructed before ships and planes can be turned out of them. Bottlenecks must be broadened in the means of production, particularly in the machine tool sphere. Skilled workers must be found and moved to the places where jobs await them. All of these initial stages in the armament program call for relatively small accretions in the labor force. They are inevitably slow to be set in motion, however speedily they may produce when once established. The automobile industry, geared as it is for mass production, requires months of preparation to get set for the relatively slight changes involved in a new car model.

In the armament program, new plants must be started from scratch or old plants must be adapted to technique with which they are not familiar. Just how much of the available funds will go into payrolls, moreover, is uncertain. At prevailing wage levels, at any rate, no tremendous dent is likely to be made in the army of 10 million unemployed.

Once the preliminaries have been attended to, however, there should be a marked upsurge in employment and production can be made to reach high levels. Henry Ford's assertion that he could build a thousand airplanes a day may give some idea of the possibilities once the production machinery has been thrown into gear. Germany, with all its efficiency, could not begin t. equal the mass production possible in the United States.

Hymie Augen Envisions Quick Defense Plans

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

Mr. Hymie Augen wanted to about a play he had seen wh had stirred thougths of our natio emergency and what we might do about it. He couldn't be sure of the name.

I thought perhaps he had seen Robert Sherwood's new play, "There Shall be No Night," but that wasn't it. In fact, when we began to crowd Mr. Augen, it appeared that it about forty years ago that he seen this provocative play.

Mr. Augen has a keen sense the contemporaneousness of past and he is continually mak one think of Voltaire's, "the m the change, the more of the sa thing" As to this play, it see certain that what he saw was I Yere King," with Cissy Loftus the late E. Gas House Ganger

"I'm reading about all this ac tion and substraction down Washington," said Mr. Augen, wondering why we don't hurry and get some fighting tools, and at once smack into my head co this play which I hadn't thought for thirty or forty years.

"Here's a mug that might h been just one of the Gas Ho gang, but he could take a bird a tree and he has a mob foll ing him around hoping he will a poem. The big politicians w give him a tumble, and the dis leaders frame him every once i while and throw him in the klin

BELIEVING that it reflects the sentiment of the people of this section, which is in accord with the sentiment of the people generally throughout the country as registered in the usually accurate Gallup polls, this newspaper desires to enter dissent from the demand of thirty American educators, lawyers, writers and businessmen, speaking as individuals, that the United States declare war against Germany at once. The time may come when we shall have to do that, but the time is not now.

Successive polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion, of which Dr. George Gallup is director, have shown that the great majority of Americans are still opposed to sending an army and navy abroad to fight in the present European war. While the surveys have all along indicated that America is unwilling to enter the war, they are not indicative of a "peace at any price" sentiment in the country. "I'd volunteer if any nation made the slightest gesture against the United States," is the verdict that has been expressed time and time again, the last registration by the overwhelming majority of eighty-six per cent, which allows for the pacifists, the undecided and the Fifth Columnists, or their ilk. A recent poll also disclosed sentiment, by eighty-four per cent, in favor of entering the war, as a matter of self defense, should a victorious Germany attempt to take over the British, French or Dutch possessions in Latin America.

The time is not at hand, in the opinion of this newspaper, for this country to declare war. This nation has not been attacked. No move has been made to seize British, Dutch or French possessions in this hemisphere. For one moving reason, this nation is totally unprepared for war, and its big job right now is to prepare itself, a job that is beginning to get under way. Should we now declare war, we could not possibly send any sort of army abroad in time to do any good, and Britain, still mistress of the seas, needs no naval aid at present, or, so far as can be seen, in the immediate future.

What the Allies need are planes, tanks and other implements and munitions of war; and this country, under its policy of neutrality, is supplying these as rapidly as it is possible to supply them without impairing the defensive strength of this country, which should not be impaired in any eventuality until that is forced.

A declaration of war now would only make matters worse. The obvious job is to speed up production here, to build up our defenses, while continuing to ship to the Allies the things they need, which can not be furthered by a war gesture.

This is a time to guard against panic, against emotionalism, against a lack of calm, common sense. America's task is clear. It should be prosecuted as quickly and as sensibly as it is possible.

Senator Byrd Is Right About Congress Session

IMPERATIVE REASONS why the Congress of the United States should continue in session and not "run out on the people" in the face of the present grave crisis, have been set forth in these columns.

United States Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, a Democrat, has expressed this need in forcible terms.

"In this hour of supreme world crisis," he declares, "it is the plain duty of the Congress of the United States to remain in session and meet its responsibilities. The happenings of the next few weeks in Europe may be so momentous as to have a profound effect upon our own civilization.

"Here at home we have the colossal task of defense preparations without interference with the purchase of military supplies in this country by France and England, as authorized by law. We have the problem of financing the huge cost of our rearmament program, as well as other vital conditions to meet.

"In this emergency Congress has its constitutional duties to perform and its constitutional responsibilities to meet. It should not render itself incapable of meeting these by adjourning on June 22, as proposed."

Senator Byrd is dead right about this.

The Broadening of The Tax Base

REDUCTION in income tax exemptions from $2,500 to $2,000 for heads of families and from $1,000 to $800 for single persons has been approved by the House subcommittee in charge of the revenue bill. It is estimated that this broadening of the tax base will increase the number of federal income taxpayers from 3,750,000 to 5,800,000. Two million more Americans would pay income taxes and presumably would develop a more direct and personal interest in just what is being done with the money which the federal government collects.

This substantial increase in the number of tax-conscious Americans is more important than the additional revenue which would be derived from the lowering of exemptions. The proposed "supertax" of ten per cent on normal individual and corporate income taxes — to say nothing of possible increases in base rates — will go far toward swelling revenues. But such increases in the burdens carried by present taxpayers would not do more than provide additional revenue for "emergency" purposes. The present undemocratic federal tax structure would be left untouched.

Some may take exception to that word, "undemocratic," in this connection; but its use is justified. Maybe "soak the rich"—or rather "soak the moderately well-to-do"—is a soul-satisfying slogan to the politician who poses as a friend of the masses. But it is not a democratic slogan. The essence of democracy is an equitable sharing of the benefits and the responsibilities of government. And, since the days of ancient Rome, a "soak the rich" program always has culminated in a policy of soaking everybody—and soaking the poor the hardest of all.

As a matter of sober fact, the process of raising a tall, narrow structure of high taxes on a small base does soak the poor just as hard as it soaks the rich. Inordinately high taxes paid by the "big fellow" do not come out of any private storehouse of riches of his own. He simply turns over to the government large sums which otherwise might be distributed among his less affluent fellow-citizens in the form of wages or other expenditures—or he charges enough more for the goods and services which he sells to make up for his additional taxes.

In the final analysis, men who never made an income tax return in their lives are helping to pay the existing heavy surtaxes on individual and corporate incomes.

A taxpayer never feels a "hidden tax" as acutely as he feels a tax which he pays directly to government. Therefore, a broadening of the tax base is sure to have a salutary effect on public opinion in relation to government finances. The new income taxpayers, which the House subcommittee proposes to add to the rolls, already have a real stake in sound federal financing. But they will be far more keenly aware of their stake when they pay a plainly labeled tax directly into the United States Treasury.

And anyway "national protection" should be paid for by all who share in that protection.

A Practical Suggestion For Home Defense

CONTENDING that Americans no longer are as expert with rifle and revolver as they were during earlier days and that facility in handling firearms is vitally necessary for one's own protection in war, the Military Engineer suggests establishment of shooting galleries or ranges in all cities and towns of one thousand persons or more. The magazine advocates that operation of the ranges be carried on by the regular army, the national guard and the organized reserves.

"Some may think that it takes only a few days after being enlisted or drafted for a soldier to learn how to shoot," says the magazine. "Unless one begins the use of firearms early in life, he seldom excels. On the battlefield the man who is so familiar with shooting that his piece is really a part of him will survive where his less experienced companion may fail."

The contention that the prevalence of shooting ranges would make a nation war-minded is disposed of by reference to Switzerland, where every man, woman and child knows how to shoot; yet Switzerland has not had a war since Napoleon. The Russo-Finnish war is cited as an example in which a people, the Finns, knowing how to use firearms effectively, made a remarkable showing against a much more powerful enemy.

In view of the news from Europe, there perhaps will be few persons to disagree with the theory that Americans should know how to handle firearms with facility.

The old quarrel between the urge to freedom and the urge to eat is settled, in Hollywood. Columbia Pictures, Inc., retitles its "Ode to Liberty." It is now "He Stayed for Breakfast."

A new type pumpkin has been developed which is just large enough to produce enough material for only one pie. We always said science would some day go too far.

Ten millions unemployed in the United States—more than are engaged in war in Europe!

Letter to a Friend

By MARSHALL MASLIN

"My Dear Friend:

"It is nearly two years since you have written to me. It is longer than that, since you have had a letter from me. But sitting here tonight, I began to think of that time more than a quarter of a century ago when we first met in our college days.

Marshall Maslin

"We were so young and we thought we were so wise. Perhaps we WERE wise. It is not for me, a middle-eged man whose hair is nearly all gray, to pass judgment on those two young fellows. . . . You do remember, of course, that we grew into manhood at a time when men were fighting in Europe and we read avidly and thought long about that war. Do you remember that belovedly impatient and passionate professor who was such a partisan for the allied cause? Do you remember that moment in class when you argued against our participation in that war and angered him so far out of self-control that he rose from his desk and grasped you by the shoulders and shook you? Of course you do.

"But we were young and when America declared war, we enlisted almost immediately and went across the Atlantic almost immediately, too, and were comrades together for nearly two years in France. . . . That was a ghastly war but does it seem to you, my friend, as it seems to me—that it was almost a little war compared with this murderous catastrophe that has come upon the world today?

"Is it only because I am older now that this war seems so much more terrible, as though it might split our world apart and leave it in bloody fragments? I believe, to be sure, that whatever happens men will go on and will build upon the ruins. I believe that no civilization based on the enslavement of man's will or body can possibly survive. I believe in the perfectability of human beings. Even in such a time as this, I cling—almost desperately—to my conviction that man is a rising, growing creature and that his nature is of infinite enrichment.

"Once you believed as I do. Once we talked the night almost through about the lovely, fascinating, delightful business of being alive. And even after our two years in that last war we were still lovers of our species and glad to be alive.

"Do you still believe that? Older and sadder and wiser, is that faith in our race still an ingredient of your being, does it still throb with your heart? Is it as enduring as our friendship, my friend?

"Write to me, my old companion. Tell me what you think. Assure me that we have not wasted our lives in vain imaginings.

"I am "THAT OLD FRIEND OF YOURS."

Hugh Johnson

Washington, June 10.—The impression is being given that the sale of airplanes, cannon and small arms to the Allies is, as Senator Pittman called it, "perfectly legal." Even since the Hague Convention of 1907, the United States Neutrality act, 1918, and the British Foreign Enlistment act, 1870, it is illegal for a nation not at war to "furnish any belligerent with "troops, munitions of war, money or with commodities of direct or indirect use in war." A private individual can do it at his own rish. So we "sell" them to an individual—or do we'

Press reports have said that the attorney general's office has approved this as legal at international law. What the solicitor general really said was that it was lawful to sell surplus war materials to an individual or corporation. He couldn't have honestly said that it is lawful for our government to "furnish" its military equipment to a belligerent. If you can "sell" an airplane, you can sell a battleship—or a regiment.

What is this "clever little scheme." It is, explains Senator Pittman, like trading in an old automobile to a manufacturer for credit on some future purchase of a new one. Then, says Senator Pittman, "We don't know what the manafacturers will do with the stuff we trade in, and it's none of our business."

What do you think of that for frankness and honesty by a mouthpiece of our great and honorable government? We know exactly what the "manufacturers" will do with the stuff. We procured them to do it, made it our business, and are party to the deal. In other words, the statement is false and this section is a subterfuge to conceal something which under our own law and international law is an act of war.

Rejected Overwhelmingly

Congress has under advisement the sale of this material in this way. A committee of the Senate overwhelmingly rejected it as a violation of international law and an act of war. It is the duty of Congress alone to autorize war. This is no action "short of war." It is war. In defiance of the Congress and the constitution, the president by a slick trick has circumvented the war-making power and arrogated to the executive a right to commit this country to an act of war.

It will be interesting to see what will happen to the Senator's automobile "trade-in" theory when it comes to shipping our "surplus" 75 mm cannon. We did not buy them from any American company. We bought them from France. Is France now going to furnish us any "trade-in" cannons? They are not surplus in any true sense. They are the only reserve artillery we have. General Marshall testified that, instead of getting the new 101 mm. guns we need, our general staff had decided to recondition these old 75's because the new guns would cost too much and take too long to get. The fact is that under present methods they would take years to get.

Much the same thing is true of our reserve supply of rifles. We will get new semi-automatic rifles only two years hence and then only for a fraction of the force we should need in war. We are not making any other shoulder rifles. What we are getting ready to send abroad is a necessity for home defense. The Navy planes are not even reported by the Navy as obsolete. They are "temporarily in excess of requirements" because the reserve pilots for them "have been ordered to Pensacola."

What is being done is an act of panic and imprudence, but skip that for the moment. The truly dangerous significance of this act is the presidential usurpation of congressional war powers. He is frothing to get Congress to go home. He secured a recess to prevent debate on this. If he dares to do this with Congress in session, what can we expect when Congress is gone?

If it is the will of this country to commit this act of war, let's do it. But let's do it without any small cheating and let's do it as the constitution intends, as an act of the direct representatives of the American people, who alone are charged with this responsibility.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

THE SCAVENGER

South America Holds Big Opportunity For Development of Yankee Aviation

Central Press Columnist

Latin America is not unfriendly to the idea of ousting German aviation from its midst in response to the suggestion that the United States undoubtedly can provide a better service for our southern neighbors and incidentally in the interest of western hemispherical solidarity.

Andrew J. May

Following the last World War Germany was somewhat more prompt than the United States in introducing its air shipping into the southern continent.

It has not now nearly so many planes in that part of the world as this country has, but it does have the advantage of a reputation for being first on the ground.

The German company also has been at much pains to popularize itself in the southern republics by means of low fares and even free rides. In brief, the system has been quite an effective means of propaganda. The pilots mostly are Germans or of German ancestry and sympathies.

Chairman Andrew J. May, of the representatives' Military Affairs committee, who has been prominently identified with plans to defend the western hemisphere, is energetically seeking permission to establish air bases in Central and South America.

His version is that considerable subversive activity prevails to the southward. However, the southern governments claim to have the situation in hand.

Panama Canal

Nevertheless, republics like Colombia and Ecuador are uncomfortably close to the Panama canal. It also appears that the German planes for the most part are of a type which could easily be converted into bombers.

To be sure, Yankee experts do not believe that German air strength in this part of the world is sufficient to conduct a general campaign of any consequence. Still, the Panama canal might be put out of commission in pretty short order, which would be plenty bad enough.

Our Latin neighbors from the very early days of the airplane have favored that means of transportation.

It may seem odd that a largely primitive area should have done so. That, however, was the very reason why they found aviation so much of a convenience for their purposes.

Their railroads are few and far between. Their highways during much of the year are impassable. Huge two-wheeled carts (wheels about eight feet high) and dragged by oxen may wade through them with much difficulty. Flivvers can't negotiate them.

Premium On Flying

But a farmer who, by road, may be ten days from his nearest settlement, quite likely is able to fly the distance in an hour or less.

Consequently, the South Americas are surprisingly well equipped with ground facilities for flyers.

Development of Yankee aviation in South America therefore offers a real opportunity which has been greatly neglected.

German aviation doubtless is more strongly entrenched in southern Brazil than elsewhere, principally because the two southern Brazilian states are virtually solidly German. However, geographically, the Brazilian coast is not so situated as to cause much worry in connection with Panama.

The present war has interfered very little, if any, with these Nazi air activities.

Edwin C. Hill

Mr. Hymie Augen wanted to talk about a play he had seen which had stirred thoughts of our nation's emergency and what we might do about it. He couldn't be sure of the name.

I thought perhaps he had seen Robert Sherwood's new play, "There Shall be No Night," but that wasn't it. In fact, when we began to crowd Mr. Augen, it appeared that it was about forty years ago that he had seen this provocative play.

Mr. Augen has a keen sense of the contemporaneousness of the past and he is continually making one think of Voltaire's, "the more the change, the more of the same thing" As to this play, it seems certain that what he saw was "I Yere King," with Cissy Loftus and the late E. H. Sothern. He thinks that's probably what it was, as he remembers clearly the part-time king who saved his country.

Gas House Ganger

"I'm reading about all this addition and substraction down in Washington," said Mr. Augen, "and wondering why we don't hurry up and get some fighting tools, and then at once smack into my head comes this play which I hadn't thought of for thirty or forty years.

"Here's a mug that might have been just one of the Gas House gang, but he could take a bird off a tree and he has a mob following him around hoping he will recite a poem. The big politicians would give him a tumble, and the district leaders frame him every once in a while and throw him in the klink.

"He was an in-and-outer, but at the time when he was out, he was in the dump on Saturday night, with a bottle of yeggs and jiggerdips, and he tears off a big poem about what he would do if he was the king. He's all burnt up about politicians sitting around and counting their money while his tough Burgundian mob is just out at the end of the car line ready to tear the town to pieces. He says this old king of theirs is not a ham and he ought to quit and let somebody give these Burgundians the bum's rush.

In Disguise

"He puts all this in a poem and while he's saying it a wrinkled old party done up in a big cloak nips him and says he's the king, he's kibitzing around in disguise to see what people are saying, and if the poet thinks he's so hot he can take over the king job. The poet thinks this is a rib, but it's the king right. The king is just having fun and is fixing to hang the poet the next morning, but he lets him be king that night.

"I forget how the girl comes in, but she helps the poet and before any of the gang at the city hall can throw a switch on him, he gets the mob, which is made up of some quite tough hombres and they pass these Burgundians with everything from an ash can to a chunk of slag. Then he and the girl wade into a clinch the way they did afterward in the movies, which hadn't been thought of then. That's old stuff, too.

Prompts Big Idea

"So the other day I got to thinking about this and what I would do if I was the king of this country at this time. I says, Hymie I says if you was so smart you would be four-bitting along at your age and then I says there are millions of people that aren't any smarter than I am thinking the same thing about being boss of this country and that sprung a big idea which I hurried up to have you put in the paper. I'm telling you it's the berries and it would be the K. O. of this Hitler. It's like this:

"You are a sap if you let the other gink make you fight his kind of a fight. You have to fight your own way. Well our way is to do something we need bad, in a hurry if we know where we can get it. I'm king—see? I call in my stenographer and I give her a letter to Henry Ford. I say dear Henry, I see by the papers you say you can kick out a thousand planes a day. You're hired. My man will be there today to tell you what kind to make. I may have to put some of this on the cuff, but anyway you start work this afternoon.

Would Avoid Worry

"Then I would herd all the army and navy bosses and straw bosses together and say what do you boys need in the line of fighting tools and battleships, etc. Write it down and we will put in the orders.

"The smart thing about this is that you go to the store where they sell this line of goods and you wouldn't lose any sleep because somebody might clean up a fat case note on the deals. You wouldn't have to worry about the bottlenecks, etc., if you give the boys a chance to earn a few dollars. Maybe we'd have to hock the capital dome before we get through, but that would be better than have it blown up.

"And if I was king and work like that you can make a book on it that I'd have my mob with me. But first of all I'd turn in a burglar alarm all over the country and order an official bust on the coast for anybody that wouldn't help."

U. S. Ambassador to France Scores Nazi Cruelty and Bestiality

DOMREMY, France, June 10 (AP)—William C. Bullitt, United States ambassador to France, declared here that "from one end of this earth to the other every civilized man is praying, after his fashion, for the victory of France."

Here at the birthplace of Joan of Arc, at the close of a ceremonial presentation of an altar donated by Americans to the village church, the ambassador placed a White House rose at the feet of a statue of the maid of Orleans, in the name of President Roosevelt.

Joan of Arc worshipped at this church in her childhood five centuries ago.

Only a small group was present at the ceremony. Crowds were not permitted because of the danger from flights of German planes over the Domremy region, about ninety miles south of the now German-held junction of the French, Belgian and Luxembourg borders.

Bullitt Scores Nazis

"Americans know on which side are right, justice and Christian decency and on which side are wrong, cruelty and bestiality," Bullitt said.

"They believe in France."

The altar was donated by Americans "of all churches and faiths who desired at this moment to express their belief that the spiritual values represented by Joan of Arc should triumph over the forces of evil," said a statement given out in connection with the ceremony.

The ambassador said that "this altar is offered to France and to God by young and old Americans of all churches and faiths who revere Joan of Arc and love France.

"The gifts to build it have come to me from Catholics and Protestants who wish to express to their French brothers their faith that Christians are right and that the spiritual forces of the earth will triumph over the forces of Satanism.

"We know that the French blood flowing today is being spent for all the values of two thousand years of Christian civilization."

Americans Believe in France

Americans, Bullitt said, "believe in France because they know that the heart of each Frenchman there burns always, whether he is conscious of it or not, the flame of Joan of Arc.

"They are certain that this flame will never be put out and that, whatever may come, it will never be conquered. x x x

"The invader is killing men, women and children x x x and worthy are the soldiers who stand against fire and even treason."

In closing, the envoy said:

"Guard France! In the service of God and man let your spirit lead to Christian victory."

Joan of Arc was born about 1412, led the French to victory against the English besieging Orleans in 1429, was burned at the stake as a convicted heretic in 1431 and was canonized in 1920 by Pope Pius X.

The Old Car Had a Way of Talking to People, and What It Said This Time Interested the Police

By VIRGINIA DEVLIN

Doc Simm's old car slowed down for the turn at the end of the dirt road that led out from his house to the main pike. He eased it gently over the frozen ruts and then stopped. He stopped suddenly, more suddenly than the age of the ancient vehicle warranted. And then he swore.

A young man in a slouch cap and a dirty brown sweater was standing directly in front of him, blocking the way, and in the young man's hand was a pistol. He came over to the side of the car and climbed in.

"No funny stuff," he said abruptly. "Do as you're told and I won't hurt you. You're doin' your good turn for the day."

The Man's Lips Were White

"You young upstart," fumed Doc. "I'm on my way to deliver a baby. I'm in a hurry."

"Good," said the young man. "So am I. Straight through town. And no funny stuff," he added.

The doctor threw the car into gear and it crawled asthmatically out on the concrete highway. Through town—that was good, but how far beyond? The man with the gun would undoubtedly take the car and make him walk. And with Nick Jergen's baby due any minute—

"Faster," said the young man.

"She won't do much over 40," said Doc. "She's too old." He looked closely at the stranger. Young and maybe handsome once, but mean. Mean as sin, thought Doc. And a lot of experience and cussedness written across those cold, pinched features. Doc understood the necessity of not opposing him.

"Faster," said the young man again. "I ain't got all day."

The speedometer climbed up to 25 and then, as the old frame shuddered, moved on to 30. There was a sudden, grumbling noise, like the growl of a dozen dogs, down under the floorboards.

"What's that?" asked the man.

"Gears," said Doc simply. "Gettin' old."

"Needs thinner oil," the young man muttered. Any fool'd know that."

"Nope. That's what they all say, but they're wrong. Been usin' the same oil for 10 years and not a growl out of 'er till last fall. It's old age. She always complain now on cold mornings when you push 'er over 25."

"Then slow down to 20," the stranger ordered. "I don't aim to attract attention, see. We're goin' through town respectable like, as if there weren't nothin' wrong. And the first false move——"

The gun moved insistently against the doctor's ribs. The growling under the floorboards ceased.

They were turning onto the main street of Three Mills when the man spoke again. "Why don't you get yourself a new car?"

"What for? This one gets me there."

It was still pretty early and pretty frosty. Ned Search, the druggist, was outside washing his window and evidently not enjoying it. He waved a friendly greeting to Doc as they went by. Then he seemed to stare as if something were wrong.

The stranger noticed it. "What you doin'?" he snapped. "You heard what I said, and I mean it. One false move——"

He's read that in some book, Doc thought to himself. One false move——. Well, he wasn't making any false moves. He was just doing as he was told.

They reached the end of the block but at the young man's command did not slow down. Pete Riger, the substitute cop, was standing on the corner waiting for the first youngsters to come past on their way to school. The squad car, pride of the town, was parked at the curb. Pete, too, waived at Doc and, like the druggist, looked puzzled.

The man's lips were white. "Something's wrong here. Those guys suspect something'. What're you doin'?"

"Nothin'," said Doc.

They drove on through the town, and as Doc had hoped, straight up the pike past Jergen's place. They passed the house, quiet outside but as Doc knew, frantic with activity within. It was then the doctor had his only impulse to do something wild and strike out at his passenger. But he contained himself and drove straight on.

"You can go faster now," said the young man. "Nobody'll hear us out here."

They stepped up to 30 again and the old car grunted and grumbled like a tired dog down the wide concrete highway. And then what Doc had been hoping for happened.

"What's that?" the man yelled. "Behind us—a siren!"

"That's right," said Doc calmly, "a siren. And be careful of that gun or it'll be a murder charge on top of everything else."

A few minutes later Pete Riger, the substitute cop, was explaining.

"Nick Jergen called up this morning and said for me to take his corner. Expectin' the kid any minutes, he said. Well, I wished him luck and then came down to work. When I saw you comin,' I knew where you was goin'. We all knew, as a matter of fact, because I told the boys along the street about Nick. And then it suddenly dawned on me. Somethin' was wrong. If you was goin' to Doc's on a stork case, you'd be goin' fast enough to make that dang thrashin' machine of yours sing like a dog fight."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Role of Growing Boy Is Told By Physician

Children Are Different in Many Ways from Adults

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

The child is not just a small edition of the adult. He is different from the adult in every fiber, every blood corpuscle, every bone cell, and in the relative proportion of all his parts.

His resistance to disease and power of recovery from it, his food and rest and sleep requirements are all unlike those of adults.

The newborn child is chiefly trunk and head. His head is as broad from side to side as his shoulders. His legs are very short. Most of his vital organs are nearer their adult size than are his height and weight.

His brain at birth is one-eighth of his entire weight, half as heavy as it ever will be. Suppose adults were one-eighth brain! A boy seven or eight wears a man's size hat and at fifteen, a man's size shoe. The baby's liver is one-eighteenth of him; the adults, one-thirty-sixth.

Other Differences

The three-year-old requires two-fifths as much food as an adult, though only one-fifth as big. The child is more "skinful" than the grown-up. At the age of six he has sixty percent more skin surface in proportion to his weight than the grownup has. He is more sensitive, therefore, to changes in temperature. He consumes about twice as much oxygen in proportion to his weight as does the adult.

While girls from eleven to fourteen exceed boys in height and weight, they trail the boys in lung capacity at every stage. Not so much difference between boys and girls of primitive peoples.

Danger of Deformities

The muscles of a new-born are about one-fifth of his weight; of the adult, about two-fifths. Much that is rigid bone in the adult was soft cartilage in the infant. The jaw is not completely hardened into bone until after puberty; hence deformities of the lower part of the face may be caused or cured up to this time.

The first tooth usually appears between the age of six and seven months, earlier in girls than boys, as a rule. The first set of teeth are all formed in the jaws before the baby's birth. The mother's health and diet during pregnancy and while nursing the baby determine the soundness of his teeth.

Swift Progress

At the end of five months the baby has doubled his weight, and at the end of a year, trebled it. He weighs, when he is eleven, ten times as much as at birth.

When fully grown, he will be about three and a half times as long as at birth. Starting off with about twenty inches, he adds ten inches to his length the first year. But is takes him three more years to double his birth-length. These facts apply to the average child.

By writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth Street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it, you may receive a graded list of toys; also a list of books from which to read to the baby and young child.

Social Events and Items of Interest for the Women

Card Party and Box Social Will Be Held for Red Cross Benefit

A public card party will be held today by the Catholic Daughters of America for the benefit of the war relief fund of the American Red Cross. Bridge, five-hundred and set-back will be played at the party beginning at 2:15 p. m. at the Catholic Daughters's home, 226 Union street. Miss Anna Ketzner is chairman for the affair with Mrs. P. W. Cavanaugh, Miss Kathryn Dixler and Mrs. Anna McCleary on the committee. Reservations may still be made by calling Miss Ketzner or Mrs. Cavanaugh.

Also scheduled for this week's Red Cross war relief benefits is a box social and square dance to be held by the Parent Teachers Association of the Paper Mill School, Locust Grove, Thursday evening on the school grounds. Miss Helen Caldera, chairman, reports the picnic will be a community affair with guests from Cumberland and other sections as well.

Married in Church

Emmanuel Episcopal church, Washington street, was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Catherine Kershen, daughter of Mrs. Frances Kershen, 418 Robbins terrace, and Wagner Wade Sheetz, son of Mrs. Maude Sheetz, 11 North Lee street. The ceremony took place at 10 o'clock Sunday morning with the Rev. David Cartwright Clark, rector of the church, officiating.

The bride had as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Helen M. Kershen, this city, and William Sheetz, this city, brother of the groom, was best man.

Weekend Guests

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fike, 13 Mary street, entertained at a house party over the week-end at their summer cottage, Town Creek.

Guests included: their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Fowley, Keyser, W. Va., Miss Norma Brown, this city, Bleb Reese, Frostburg, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Dowling and Miss Jean McCleary and Virgil Eackles, this city.

Have Benefit Tea

For the benefit of the American Red Cross war relief fund many attended the tea yesterday at the Manse of the First Presbyterian church, 222 Washington street, which was given by the community work group of the Women's Association of the church. Refreshments were donated by the officers and leaders of the association.

Miss Nell Bane was chairman and was assisted by Mrs. W. Carl White, Mrs. Thomas Pickering, Mrs. Walter L. Pierce, Mrs. William A. Eisenberger, Mrs. Lloyd R. Meyers and Mrs. P. E. Ervin.

Style Review Pleases

Lovely models looking cool and fresh in the latest in summer clothes formed a pleasing picture yesterday afternoon at Rosenbaum Brothers' style show.

It was a Georgiana style revue with the firm's representative, Miss Georgiana, here to announce the best motif for summer. New fabrics typical of this firm's frocks were named such as crushed rose and sea foam green fashioned in the new margette, shadowdelle, sporthin and tissue shere to fit juniors, misses and women's sizes.

Style revue guests were served refreshments.

Birthday Party

The Rev. and Mrs. Milton B. Crist, Thurmont, Md., and their two children, Margaret and Carl, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Crist's mother, Mrs. Carl C. Hetzell, 106 Decatur street.

Miss Margaret celebrated her sixth birthday yesterday with a party which was attended by James and Elizabeth Spitznas, Ann and Peggy Thompson, Carl Frederick Siemmer and Alice Hatton Hetzell. Mothers of the guests also participated in the festivities.

Events in Brief

The Miraculous Medal Club held a social at 8:15 o'clock last night at the Allegany hospital.

A reception for Past Officers of Potomac Sisterhood No. 284 of the Dames of Malta will be held at 8 o'clock this evening at the Junior Order Hall, Polk street.

The Frances E. Willard Bible class of Kingsley Methodist church will meet at 7:30 o'clock this evening at the home of Mrs. Genevieve Wotring, Christie road.

At 2:15 o'clock this afternoon the Catholic Daughters of America will hold a public card party at their home, 226 Union street, for the benefit of the American Red Cross war relief fund.

Miss Martha Lee Scheermesser entertained with a birthday party Saturday afternoon at her home, 25 North Waverly terrace. Miss Scheermesser was twelve years old.

Honoring her granddaughter, Rosemary Simpson on her first birthday, Mrs. Peter J. Decker entertained a number of little guests Sunday afternoon at her home, 917 Grand avenue.

Oliver Herman Bruce, 407 Washington street, George Peter Charuhas, 240 Columbia street, and Newton Heston, 911 Ridgedale avenue, received their B. S. degree in Foreign Service at commencement exercises yesterday morning at Georgetown university, Washington, D. C.

War Is Cutting Supply Of Fashion's Materials

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

An understudy can't help being glad when the star gets sick and gives her a chance to perform.

It's that way with the American fashion industry. However much it may sympathize with Europe, there's no denying the war is going to give it it's Big Chance and it's glad.

French designers have hung out a sign, "business as usual." Actually, business is not as usual. Bombs are bursting too close.

If America wants wartime fashion, she'll have to produce it for herself. This may mean the end of French leadership.

France didn't lose out after the last war, probably because the American fashion industry was in its infancy. But during the last five years such names as Hattie Carnegie, Nettie Rosenstein, Germaine Monteil, Omar Kiam, Jo Copeland and Louise Barnes Gallagher have come to the front.

In shoes, America already leads. Most fabrics can be made in this country, so with stepped up production we won't miss the imports. This isn't true, however, of the linens we import from Belgium, nor the woolens we get from England. We'll really miss those. We'll miss the fine prints of Lyons, France, too.

Gloves are a headache to the trade. They've been kicked all around. From Germany to Czechoslovakia to Poland. Now where?

If America is to be truly self-sustaining, she'll have to grow furs as good as the foxes of Norway; Make felt hat bodies as good as those we get from Italy and France, and learn the art of lacemaking as practiced in Belgium.

The last war taught us to make dyes, toys and glassware. Perhaps this one will prove that fashion, too, can be made in America.

If You Raise An Eyebrow

By HELEN FOLLETT

EYEBROWS NO longer look like a single thread of darning cotton: praise be for that! Movie stars are looking human once again and the copy cats are following suit. Nor are eyebrows spaced too far apart as has been the custom. Poor little things, what tortures they have suffered!

When the forehead lamberquins are tweezed, both sides are treated, not just the under edge, as has happened in the past. They belong on the edge of the eye socket; anyhow, that's where Mama Nature puts them. They've been moved around so much they don't know where they belong.

To Bring Out Gloss

To make yours glossy and lustrous, brush them well every night with brilliantine or mineral oil. That practice will train them the way they should go. Brush upward at the inner end, on a straight line in the center, down at the far tip; you'll have a flattering pattern. Eyelashes improve in appearance if brushed with mineral oil, which can have no bad effect upon the eyes if it happens to get into them.

Be gentle when treating the lashes. The tissues of the eyelids are soft and thin, won't stand rough tactics. Every morning and every night bathe the eyes with hot water, then with cold, to keep circulation going strong.

Teen age girls are taking to hair ribbons with a will. Not only those bows of narrow ribbons but good old fashioned bouncing ones.

Taking a forelock, tying the curly ends with a small bow is a cute trick that even the twenty-age girls are trying out. The hair is swept to the left side, the bow resting over the left temple.

ABLE TO win two of the first three tricks in the opponents' suit, the average No Trump declarer thinks it makes no difference whether he wins the first and third tricks, holding up on the second and letting the opponents take it, or whether he holds up on the first trick so he can win the second and third. There is this great factor, however—if you lose the lead once to the partner of the long suit holder, it is better to have him then be blank in your suit and unable to assail one of your stoppers.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

MR. MERRIFIELD, Jeremy, Bill and Gayle dined together this evening. Mr. Weems had gone to visit a friend across town. But the elderly secretary's absence made no particular difference because the dinner was funereal anyway.

The three young folk responded very politely to Mr. Merrifield's conversational efforts, but they initiated nothing and they showed none of their accustomed gaiety. The old gentleman, of course, perceived it; quietly he studied their faces, but learned nothing definite. When dessert was done he smacked his lips in audible satisfaction at the meal, wiped his face and dropped the napkin onto his plate.

"Something is disturbing my young guests," he announced.

Gayle turned a little pink, even though she did not look at him. The truth was, she felt that responsibility for the somberness here was her own. Tacitly he had placed her in a position as hostess at The Oaks, and a hostess is expected to keep everyone happy.

"I—I went riding this morning with Jeremy," Gayle finally said, smiling. "My muscles are woefully out of condition, for horseback!"

It was enough to break the spell of gloom. Jeremy smiled, and the other laughed outright.

"So you took the young lady riding, Jeremy," his grandfather said. "Young sir, I envy you!"

Now it was Jeremy's turn to blush. He tried to answer, but Bill beat him to it.

"So do I," Bill declared. "What's Jeremy got that we haven't got, Mr. Merrifield? Aren't we as irresistable as he?"

The old gentleman chuckled. It delighted his soul thus to be welcomed into their comradeship and banter on occasions. "It may be my gray hairs," he suggested, "but you, Mr. Bailey, have no obvious faults."

"It could be," Gayle said, smiling, "that neither of you asked me and Jeremy did. Don't you think so?"

The old man knew he had succeeded then. Succeeded in driving away reticence and gloom. For a half hour or so they all talked pleasantly, even Jeremy entering into the spirit of fellowship more than he usually did. This later fact delighted his grandfather still more. Finally Mr. Merrifield arose.

"Whatever was troubling you three seems to have subsided," he stated. "I hope it was nothing serious. Worry and fretting is for old men such as I, not for youth." He turned to leave the room.

"I hope I'm half as cheerful at 78 as you are, Mr. Merrifield," Bill declared, and to that Gayle and Jeremy added agreement.

The three young people drifted aimlessly out onto the broad front porch then and sat together in a canopied canvas swing, a soft, sink-down thing suspended by springs. Bill's long legs pushed to keep them swaying gently while they talked.

The talk here carefully avoided what had been on their minds most of the day. Absolutely no mention was made of Lola Montesa, nor of Bill's embarrassing episode with her. For this, Bill at least was grateful. He was glad to have the talk kept to horseback riding and other assorted things.

"I have given some thought to—ah—that which you suggested, Gayle," Jeremy ventured. "I refer to the—the riding party."

"Oh. Of course, Jeremy! You'll love it. You could even do it at night now, there's such a tremendous moon on duty."

"That would be pleasant. Should I—would you say that I just telephone the others? I feel as if—"

"Surely. Just telephone anybody you liked at the party here, Jeremy, and invite them to be your guest on a riding party," Gayle spoke, as if she were a doting big sister. "Say that you will provide the horses and that you will start from here. I hope you invite Bill and me."

"You'd better!" Bill growled.

"Oh, I say—of course!" Jeremy was pleased. "I—well, I owe a great deal to you two. But for you I would not have—"

"Skip that, Jeremy." Bill poked him playfully. "You're a swell egg, really. But you keep it sort of hidden. I'm talking frankly."

"Jeremy," Gayle put in, "you could ride for an hour or so and come back here to dance."

"I, ah, do not dance, Gayle, but—"

She sat up straight. "I'd forgotten! I was going to teach you. For goodness sakes, Jeremy, come inside with me this very minute and we'll have a lesson. Bill, you—you can dance with a broom or something."

"I'm no witch," Bill protested, following them in.

Graham, the butler, helped them clear off a rug or two in the big room near the piano, but then they remembered that only Gayle could play.

"There's not even a radio or a phonograph!" Gayle lamented.

"I—I shall purchase one, both, tomorrow!" Jeremy declared. "I have some funds. I have done some figuring today, anyway, and I was quite astounded. If I allotted myself $100 per week, which is far more than I use, I'd have money enough to live for more than 150 years! I had no idea! My parents had set aside a trust fund, and then I inherited some, and there have been dividends on investments made for me, so that I find myself in a position of some financial responsibility when I had not thought of it at all. It is really most disturbing!"

Poor Jeremy was quite sincere, so that in spite of her inclination to laugh at the odd situation, Gayle controlled herself. Bill just couldn't help being a trifle sarcastic, though.

"I do believe," said he, "that you might afford some sort of music box, then. Say a second-hand one, maybe!"

"No," Jeremy gave a serious thought to that. "That would not be satisfactory, I am sure. I shall want—wouldn't you both go with me tomorrow to choose what is needed. You—you are my only friends!"

Gayle squeezed Bill's arm quickly, furtively.

"Certainly, Jeremy, any time you say," she spoke earnestly. "It will be a pleasure to help you. And Bill will help you select the saddle horses we discussed, too. Remember?"

"Yes! Yes, surely. Will you, Bill?"

Bill nodded, and Gayle stepped to Jeremy's side.

"Dancing is largely a matter of moving in march time rhythm, Jeremy," she began. "We don't really need much music tonight. Instead of walking, you just slide. On the balls of your feet, like this. Come on . . . slide, slide, slide, slide . . . that's right! One, two; one, two; one, two . . ."

For a half hour she taught him, and Bill found himself an unnecessary adjunct there. He drifted back onto the porch, but he was near a window where he could see them under the lights within.

The longer he watched, the less enthusiasm he had for watching. There is simply not much pleasure watching another eligible man dance with the girl you love; and in the process of teaching Gayle naturally had to hold Jeremy quite close, had to be more intimate with him than might have been required in an actual dance.

It was plain, too, or at least Bill thought it was, that Jeremy enjoyed the session immensely. The flush of excitement on his face proved that, and the bright anxiousness in his eyes. He wanted so to please Gayle, to learn, to be a part of things. Jeremy had talked less and less of bookish things lately. He was definitely responding to the treatment Mr. Merrifield had arranged for him.

"It's only natural that they should get married," Bill told himself, there in the darkness. "Christopher, $100 a week for 150 years! Not counting what the old gent is sure to will him. And me—I've got about $16 in my jeans, expense money."

He sighed heavily. Life has a peculiar way of mixing up the people on this earth, creating the extremes and the heart aches and the good luck and all. Now take this business about Lola—no, skip that, he didn't want to think about that any more tonight. But the day had been pretty well scrambled. Even Mr. Merrifield had detected that, at dinner time.

"Tomorrow I've got to get things going," Bill mused now. "These girls have got to be kept busy, some way."

It was a way of saying that he must not let his mind dwell on personal things. And yet the girl he loved was just through the window dancing and laughing with a millionaire who obviously worshiped her, too. This very day that millionaire had completely disarmed Bill as a love rival by declaring his friendship, by offering Bill all his fortune, if needed, to help Bill out of trouble. Besides which, Bill was already obligated morally not to interfere with any romance between Jeremy and Gayle.

"Lordy!" he almost groaned in despair now. But that didn't help. Here was a situation, and he couldn't do a thing to change it. As far down the decades as he could prophesy for himself, Bill Bailey saw Bill Bailey as a single man made miserable by unrequitted love. Utterly depressed, he went upstairs to an early bed.

Social Events and Items of Interest for the Women

Card Party and Box Social Will Be Held for Red Cross Benefit

A public card party will be held today by the Catholic Daughters of America for the benefit of the war relief fund of the American Red Cross. Bridge, five-hundred and set-back will be played at the party beginning at 2:15 p. m. at the Catholic Daughters's home, 226 Union street. Miss Anna Ketzner is chairman for the affair with Mrs. P. W. Cavanaugh, Miss Kathryn Dixler and Mrs. Anna McCleary on the committee. Reservations may still be made by calling Miss Ketzner or Mrs. Cavanaugh.

Also scheduled for this week's Red Cross war relief benefits is a box social and square dance to be held by the Parent Teachers Association of the Paper Mill School, Locust Grove, Thursday evening on the school grounds. Miss Helen Caldera, chairman, reports the picnic will be a community affair with guests from Cumberland and other sections as well.

Married in Church

Emmanuel Episcopal church, Washington street, was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Catherine Kershen, daughter of Mrs. Frances Kershen, 418 Robbins terrace, and Wagner Wade Sheetz, son of Mrs. Maude Sheetz, 11 North Lee street. The ceremony took place at 10 o'clock Sunday morning with the Rev. David Cartwright Clark, rector of the church, officiating.

The bride had as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Helen M. Kershen, this city, and William Sheetz, this city, brother of the groom, was best man.

A wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's mother followed the ceremony.

Weekend Guests

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Pike, 13 Mary street, entertained at a house party over the week-end at their summer cottage, Town Creek.

Have Benefit Tea

For the benefit of the American Red Cross war relief fund many attended the tea yesterday at the Manse of the First Presbyterian church, 222 Washington street, which was given by the community work group of the Women's Association of the church. Refreshments were donated by the officers and leaders of the association.

Miss Nell Bane was chairman and was assisted by Mrs. W. Carl White, Mrs. Thomas Pickering, Mrs. Walter L. Pierce, Mrs. William A. Eisenberger, Mrs. Lloyd R. Meyers and Mrs. P. E. Ervin.

Style Review Pleases

Lovely models looking cool and fresh in the latest in summer clothes formed a pleasing picture yesterday afternoon at Rosenbaum Brothers' style show.

It was a Georgiana style revue with the firm's representative, Miss Georgiana, here to announce the best motif for summer. New fabrics typical of this firm's frocks were named such as crushed rose and sea foam green fashioned in the new margette, shadowdelle, sporthin and tissue shere to fit juniors, misses and women's sizes.

Style revue guests were served refreshmenis.

War Is Cutting Supply Of Fashion's Materials

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

An understudy can't help being glad when the star gets sick and gives her a chance to perform.

It's that way with the American fashion industry. However much it may sympathize with Europe, there's no denying the war is going to give it it's Big Chance and it's glad.

French designers have hung out a sign, "business as usual." Actually, business is not as usual. Bombs are bursting too close.

If America wants wartime fashion, she'll have to produce it for herself. This may mean the end of French leadership.

France didn't lose out after the last war, probably because the American fashion industry was in its infancy. But during the last five years such names as Hattie Carnegie, Nettie Rosenstein, Germaine Monteil, Omar Kiam, Jo Copeland and Louise Barnes Gallagher have come to the front.

In shoes, America already leads. Most fabrics can be made in this country, so with stepped up production we won't miss the imports. This isn't true, however, of the linens we import from Belgium, nor the woolens we get from England. We'll really miss those. We'll miss the fine prints of Lyons, France, too.

Gloves are a headache to the trade. They've been kicked all around, From Germany to Czechoslovakia to Poland. Now where?

If America is to be truly self-sustaining, she'll have to grow furs as good as the foxes of Norway; Make felt hat bodies as good as those we get from Italy and France, and learn the art of lacemaking as practiced in Belgium.

The last war taught us to make dyes, toys and glassware. Perhaps this one will prove that fashion, too, can be made in America.

If You Raise An Eyebrow

By HELEN FOLLETT

EYEBROWS NO longer look like a single thread of darning cotton: praise be for that! Movie stars are looking human once again and the copy cats are following suit. Nor are eyebrows spaced too far apart as has been the custom. Poor little things, what tortures they have suffered!

When the forehead lamberquins are tweezed, both sides are treated, not just the under edge, as has happened in the past. They belong on the edge of the eye socket; anyhow, that's where Mama Nature puts them. They've been moved around so much they don't know where they belong.

To Bring Out Gloss

To make yours glossy and lustrous, brush them well every night with brilliantine or mineral oil. That practice will train them the way they should go. Brush upward at the inner end, on a straight line in the center, down at the far tip; you'll have a flattering pattern. Eyelashes improve in appearance if brushed with mineral oil, which can have no bad effect upon the eyes if it happens to get into them.

Be gentle when treating the lashes. The tissues of the eyelids are soft and thin, won't stand rough tactics. Every morning and every night bathe the eyes with hot water, then with cold, to keep circulation going strong.

Teen age girls are taking to hair ribbons with a will. Not only those bows of narrow ribbons but good old fashioned bouncing ones.

They twirl them round their pretty heads, keeping their curly locks back of their ears. Black velvet ribbon is sometimes used for this purpose. They divide the hair at the back, fasten each portion with grosgrain or satin ribbon. Naive and chic.

Taking a forelock, tying the curly ends with a small bow is a cute trick that even the twenty-age girls are trying out. The hair is swept to the left side, the bow resting over the left temple.

A number of Cumberlanders are attending the Southern Baptist convention at the Fifth Regiment Armory in Baltimore.

Southern Baptists' week began at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon with the annual convention of the woman's Missionary Union of the Southern Baptist church.

Ensuing sessions will be held today and tomorrow the Southern Baptist Convention will open at the Armory. The annual election of officers will take place Thursday afternoon at the Armory with morning, afternoon and evening sessions to be held throughout the week and next Sunday.

Among Cumberlanders attending are: The Rev. and Mrs. Edwin W. Saylor, Mrs. W. S. Goodwin, Mrs. Edgar Matthews, Mrs. T. O. Curry, Mrs. William McCullough, Mrs. James Corfield, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Taylor and Miss Mary Moxley.

Will Have Tea

Honoring her week-end guest, Miss Ruth Butler, Pittsburgh, Miss Shirley Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Holmes, 509 Dunbar drixe, has issued invitations for a tea to be given Sunday afternoon at the home of her parents.

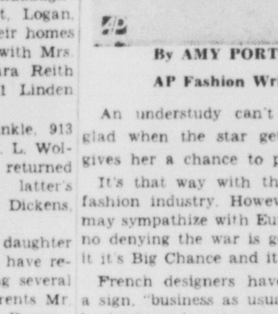

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

HOLD UP AT THE START

ABLE TO win two of the first three tricks in the opponents' suit, the average No Trump declarer thinks it makes no difference whether he wins the first and third tricks, holding up on the second and letting the opponents take it, or whether he holds up on the first trick so he can win the second and third. There is this great factor, however—if you lose the lead once to the partner of the long suit holder, it is better to have him then be blank in your suit and unable to assail one of your stoppers.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	1 ♥
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

This deal carries the tale of two declarers in a duplicate game where the bidding was the same at both tables and West each time led the 7 of his partner's hearts. In each case the 2 went on from dummy and East played the 9. One declarer let East hold the trick, playing the S. The other took the 9 with the J and was set. Let's follow the unhappy one. After taking the first trick, he led the spade K to the A and West returned his heart 3, drawing the Q and K, South holding up. East then knocked out the heart A. To get nine tricks South needed two diamonds, but as soon as he led that suit East won with the A and set the contract two with heart tricks.

As for the man who held up on the first trick, he took the second lead of the heart K with the A, then led a spade to West, who had no more hearts to lead. So he switched to a diamond. East won with his A, but South still had the hearts stopped with the J. When East led one the declarer took it, then rattled off his tricks in spades, diamonds and clubs, just enough for his game.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

If South bids first diamond, then clubs and later over 4-Spade sacrifices at 5-Clubs, why should North take out into 5-Diamonds?

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

MR. MERRIFIELD, Jeremy, Bill and Gayle dined together this evening. Mr. Weems had gone to visit a friend across town. But the elderly secretary's absence made no particular difference because the dinner was funereal anyway.

The three young folk responded very politely to Mr. Merrifield's conversational efforts, but they initiated nothing and they showed none of their accustomed gaiety. The old gentleman, of course, perceived it; quietly he studied their faces, but learned nothing definite. When dessert was done he smacked his lips in audible satisfaction at the meal, wiped his face and dropped the napkin onto his plate.

"Something is disturbing my young guests," he announced.

Gayle turned a little pink, even though she did not look at him. The truth was, she felt that responsibility for the somberness here was her own. Tacitly he had placed her in a position as hostess at The Oaks, and a hostess is expected to keep everyone happy.

"I—I went riding this morning with Jeremy," Gayle finally said, smiling. "My muscles are woefully out of condition, for horseback!"

It was enough to break the spell of gloom. Jeremy smiled, and the other laughed outright.

"So you took the young lady riding, Jeremy," his grandfather said. "Young sir, I envy you!"

Now it was Jeremy's turn to blush. He tried to answer, but Bill beat him to it.

"So do I," Bill declared. "What's Jeremy got that we haven't got, Mr. Merrifield? Aren't we as irresistable as he?"

The old gentleman chuckled. It delighted his soul thus to be welcomed into their comradeship and banter on occasions. "It may be my gray hairs," he suggested, "but you, Mr. Bailey, have no obvious faults."

"It could be," Gayle said, smiling, "that neither of you asked me and Jeremy did. Don't you think so?"

The old man knew he had succeeded then. Succeeded in driving away reticence and gloom. For a half hour or so they all talked pleasantly, even Jeremy entering into the spirit of fellowship more than he usually did. This later fact delighted his grandfather still more. Finally Mr. Merrifield arose.

"Whatever was troubling you three seems to have subsided," he stated. "I hope it was nothing serious. Worry and fretting is for old men such as I, not for youth." He turned to leave the room.

"I hope I'm half as cheerful at 78 as you are, Mr. Merrifield," Bill declared, and to that Gayle and Jeremy added agreement.

The three young people drifted aimlessly out onto the broad front porch then and sat together in a canopied canvas swing, a soft, sink-down thing suspended by springs. Bill's long legs pushed to keep them swaying gently while they talked.

The talk here carefully avoided what had been on their minds most of the day. Absolutely no mention was made of Lola Montesa, nor of Bill's embarrassing episode with her. For this, Bill at least was grateful. He was glad to have the talk kept to horseback riding and other assorted things.

"I have given some thought to—ah—that which you suggested, Gayle," Jeremy ventured. "I refer to the—the riding party."

"Oh. Of course, Jeremy! You'll love it. You could even do it at night now, there's such a tremendous moon on duty."

"That would be pleasant. Should I—would you say that I just telephone the others? I feel as if—"

"Surely. Just telephone anybody you liked at the party here, Jeremy, and invite them to be your guest on a riding party," Gayle spoke, as if she were a doting big sister. "Say that you will provide the horses and that you will start from here. I hope you invite Bill and me."

"You'd better!" Bill growled.

"Oh, I say—of course!" Jeremy was pleased. "I—well, I owe a great deal to you two. But for you I would not have—"

"Skip that, Jeremy." Bill poked him playfully. You're a swell egg, really. But you keep it sort of hidden. I'm talking frankly."

"Jeremy," Gayle put in, "you could ride for an hour or so and come back here to dance."

"I, ah, do not dance, Gayle, but—"

She sat up straight. "I'd forgotten! I was going to teach you. For goodness sakes, Jeremy, come inside with me this very minute and we'll have a lesson. Bill, you—you can dance with a broom or something."

"I'm no witch," Bill protested, following them in.

Graham, the butler, helped them clear off a rug or two in the big room near the piano, but then they remembered that only Gayle could play.

"There's not even a radio or a phonograph!" Gayle lamented.

"I—I shall purchase one, both, tomorrow!" Jeremy declared. "I have some funds. I have done some figuring today, anyway, and I was quite astounded. If I allotted myself $100 per week, which is far more than I use, I'd have money enough to live for more than 150 years! I had no idea! My parents had set aside a trust fund, and then I inherited some, and there have been dividends on investments made for me, so that I find myself in a position of some financial responsibility when I had not thought of it at all. It is really most disturbing!"

Poor Jeremy was quite sincere, so that in spite of her inclination to laugh at the odd situation, Gayle controlled herself. Bill just couldn't help being a trifle sarcastic, though.

"I do believe," said he, "that you might afford some sort of music box, then. Say a second-hand one, maybe!"

"No," Jeremy gave a serious thought to that. "That would not be satisfactory, I am sure. I shall want—wouldn't you both go with me tomorrow to choose what is needed. You—you are my only friends!"

Gayle squeezed Bill's arm quickly, furtively.

"Certainly, Jeremy, any time you say," she spoke earnestly. "It will be a pleasure to help you. And Bill will help you select the saddle horses we discussed, too. Remember?"

"Yes! Yes, surely. Will you, Bill?"

Bill nodded, and Gayle stepped to Jeremy's side.

"Dancing is largely a matter of moving in march time rhythm, Jeremy," she began. "We don't really need much music tonight. Instead of walking, you just slide. On the balls of your feet, like this. Come on . . . slide, slide, slide, slide . . . that's right! One, two; one, two; one, two . . ."

For a half hour she taught him, and Bill found himself an unnecessary adjunct there. He drifted back onto the porch, but he was near a window where he could see them under the lights within.

The longer he watched, the less enthusiasm he had for watching. There is simply not much pleasure watching another eligible man dance with the girl you love; and in the process of teaching Gayle naturally had to hold Jeremy quite close, had to be more intimate with him than might have been required in an actual dance.

It was plain, too, or at least Bill thought it was, that Jeremy enjoyed the session immensely. The flush of excitement on his face proved that, and the bright anxiousness in his eyes. He wanted so to please Gayle, to learn, to be a part of things. Jeremy had talked less and less of bookish things lately. He was definitely responding to the treatment Mr. Merrifield had arranged for him.

"It's only natural that they should get married," Bill told himself, there in the darkness. "Christopher, $100 a week for 150 years! Not counting what the old gent is sure to will him. And me—I've got about $16 in my jeans, expense money."

He sighed heavily. Life has a peculiar way of mixing up the people on this earth, creating the extremes and the heart aches and the good luck and all. Now take this business about Lola—no, skip that, he didn't want to think about that any more tonight. But the day had been pretty well scrambled. Even Mr. Merrifield had detected that, at dinner time.

"Tomorrow I've got to get things going," Bill mused now. "These girls have got to be kept busy, some way."

It was a way of saying that he must not let his mind dwell on personal things. And yet the girl he loved was just through the window dancing and laughing with a millionaire who obviously worshiped her, too. This very day that millionaire had completely disarmed Bill as a love rival by declaring his friendship, by offering Bill all his fortune, if needed, to help Bill out of trouble. Besides which, Bill was already obligated morally not to interfere with any romance between Jeremy and Gayle.

"Lordy!" he almost groaned in despair now. But that didn't help. Here was a situation, and he couldn't do a thing to change it. As far down the decades as he could prophesy for himself, Bill Bailey saw Bill Bailey as a single man made miserable by unrequitted love. Utterly depressed, he went upstairs to an early bed.

Milliners Are Getting Exercised About Women Who Go without Hats

A variation on the wearable, mannish-type sports hat. It fits, won't interfere with vision. In strawberry shantung, with red and white polka dot band and buckle.

Floppy brims like this are first choice of film stars, for flafittery. Sensible because the crown really fits, the brim turns up or down. White felt, with navy scallops.

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

Do you always wear a hat on the street?

If you don't you're part of the hatless trend, and the cause of sleepless nights for milliners.

This trend has cut into millinery sales. In the New York area, where 70 per cent of women's hats are manufactured, milliners say three-quarters of a million fewer hats were sold from January through April this year than in the same period last year.

They're taking steps. The Millinery Stabilization Committee, to which most of them belong, has set up a bureau to find the cause of the hatless trend and to combat it.

Why don't you wear a hat when you should, they'd like to know? Is it because a hat would spoil your front curls? Because hats are uncomfortable? Does the back elastic bind? The head band cut your forehead? The thing won't stay on in the wind? Or are most hats too hard to wear? Unbecoming? Too full of flowers? Too silly?

The milliners are doing something about every one of these queries in new hats for late summer and early fall. Also they've enlisted the support of movie producers and college boys. They say the movie people promise to make film stars wear hats more often. College boys are writing pro-hat editorials in campus newspapers, saying: "Men don't like hatless women. We are starting a giricott against girls who boycott hats."

Nobody knows how the hatless trend started. But the college girl is a prime offender. When she does wear a hat, she chooses inexpensive little stuck - on - the - back - of-the-head numbers, calots or beanies, or, for dress-up, Juliet caps. Milliners want her to choose a hat that is a hat, or several hats.

Society women are offenders too. Several smart Easter paraders were photographed minus hats, hair blowing in the breeze. Business women sometimes carry their hats instead of wearing them. Milliners don't like any part of it. Their theme song is, "It ain't smart, it ain't chic, it ain't etiquette."

One thing is sure. New hats will be more sensible. "More bulk, more fit," is the fall slogan. No more tiny dots posed over one eye. One milliner promises, "I will show no hat without a back. I'll show only hats a woman can feel on her head." There'll be fewer flowers and bows, more smooth-lined simplicity.

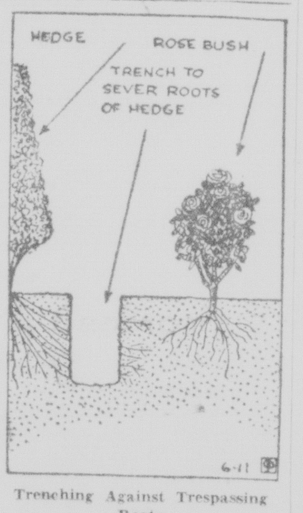

Look at the new black velvet hats you'll find in the stores in June and you'll see milliners are ready to give you wearable hats—if only you'll wear them.

Important for fall are adaptations of the Schiaparelli hug-the-head-bonnet. This one, in felt and mink, looks dizzy, but isn't. It stays put.

Trenching Against Trespassing Roots

Sometimes, due to limited amount of space, or for protection from winds, the rose bed is placed parallel with a hedge. Then, as the rose bed is fertilized, the hungry roots of the hedge invade the rose bed and consume food and moisture intended for the roses.

A method of checking such trespassing roots is shown in the accompanying illustration. This entails digging a trench between the hedge and the rose bed deep enough to sever the wandering roots of the hedge. The trench can be re-filled immediately after it has been dug and the severing of the transpassing roots ascertained. It will be necessary to dig such a trench at least once a year.

Suggestions for Washing a Rug

Rugs in constant use frequently become badly soiled. Thus they should be washed occasionally to clean them and freshen the colors.

First step in washing a rug, of course, is to sweep it. Then make a soft jelly by dissolving one medium bar of mild soap (shaved) in three quarts of hot water and add one tablespoon household ammonia. Beat this mixture until a good lather forms, then spread some of it on a small area of the rug (three square feet). Apply it with a brush, using a circular motion to wash the nap of the rug.

Next, scrape off the suds with the dull edge of a knife or spatula and immediately go over this same area with a cloth wrung from warm water to remove the soap. Continue this treatment, taking a new area each time, until the whole rug has been washed. Then place it where it will dry quickly and thoroughly before relaying.

Window Washing Hint

To give your windows extra sparkle, put two tablespoons of kerosene in each gallon of water when you're washing them.

The Dark Stains

To remove dark stains caused by eggs, coffee or tea, from dishes, as quickly as convenient dip a damp cloth in salt and rub over the stains. Rinse well and wash as usual.

Best in Hall

Scenic wall paper usually is best in a hall — it might become tiresome used in a living room and it is not restful in a bedroom. Keep away from bold figures and vivid colors in a bedroom.

Man Cook Brags, but He's Got An Idea

ST. LOUIS (AP) — C. D. Keeney, pastry scientist, demonstrated at the convention of the Associated Retail Bakers of America how to keep fruit pies from boiling over in the oven—a problem that long has baffled housewives.

"Just don't put the juice in until the pie is baked," he said.

"For an apple pie, sweeten the sliced apples and let them stand. Then pour off the juice, put the dry apples between the crusts and bake. Remove from the oven and pour the juice into the perforation in the crust.

"It took a man to think of a solution as simple as that," concluded Keeney.

WILL SHE WIN FILM CHANCE, TOO!

Miss Vivieine Pederson

New "goose girl" at the Hollywood park (Los Angeles) race track is lovely Vivieine Pederson. Her duty is to tend the geese in the pond in the track infield. A motion picture producer trained his glasses on Miss Frances Gladwin, last year's "goose girl", admired greatly her photogenic beauty and now Miss Gladwin is in the movies with a chance for stardom. Will Vivieine get the same chance?

Bad Quoting

It shows poor judgment to admit that a certain person is a raver, who is likely to exaggerate his or her statements, and then to continually quote such a person in all seriousness.

Think of Others

If you are going to spend a lot of time at a beach this summer, don't do your suntanning on the diving board. Some one might like to use it for diving, you know.

Milliners Are Getting Exercised About Women Who Go without Hats

A variation on the wearable, mannish-type sports hat. It fits, won't interfere with vision. In strawberry shantung, with red and white polka dot band and buckle.

Floppy brims like this are first choice of film stars, for flafittery. Sensible because the crown really fits, the brim turns up or down. White felt, with navy scallops.

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Writer

Do you always wear a hat on the street?

If you don't you're part of the hatless trend, and the cause of sleepless nights for milliners.

This trend has cut into millinery sales. In the New York area, where 70 per cent of women's hats are manufactured, milliners say three-quarters of a million fewer hats were sold from January through April this year than in the same period last year.

They're taking steps. The Millinery Stabilization Committee, to which most of them belong, has set up a bureau to find the cause of the hatless trend and to combat it.

Why don't you wear a hat when you should, they'd like to know? Is it because a hat would spoil your front curls? Because hats are uncomfortable? Does the back elastic bind? The head band cut your forehead? The thing won't stay on in the wind? Or are most hats too hard to wear? Unbecoming? Too full of flowers? Too silly?

The milliners are doing something about every one of these queries in new hats for late summer and early fall. Also they've enlisted the support of movie producers and college boys. They say the movie people promise to make film stars wear hats more often. College boys are writing pro-hat editorials in campus newspapers, saying: "Men don't like hatless women. We are starting a girlcott against girls who boycott hats."

Nobody knows how the hatless trend started. But the college girl is a prime offender. When she does wear a hat, she chooses inexpensive little stuck-on-the-back-of-the-head numbers, calots or beanies, or, for dress-up, Juliet caps. Milliners want her to choose a hat that is a hat, or several hats.

Society women are offenders too. Several smart Easter paraders were photographed minus hats, hair flowing in the breeze. Business women sometimes carry their hats instead of wearing them. Milliners don't like any part of it. Their theme song is, "It ain't smart, it ain't chic, it ain't etiquette."

One thing is sure. New hats will be more sensible. "More bulk, more hat is the fall slogan. No more tiny hat posed over one eye. One milliner promises, "I will show no hat without a back. I'll show only hats a woman can feel on her head." There'll be fewer flowers and bows, more smooth-lined simplicity.

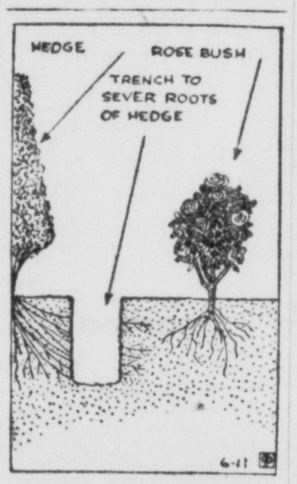

Look at the new black velvet hats you'll find in the stores in June and you'll see milliners are ready to give you wearable hats—if only you'll wear them.

Important for fall are adaptations of the Schiaparelli hug-the-head-bonnet. This one, in felt and mink, looks dizzy, but isn't. It stays put.

Trenching Against Trespassing Roots

Sometimes, due to limited amount of space, or for protection from winds, the rose bed is placed parallel with a hedge. Then, as the rose bed is fertilized, the hungry roots of the hedge invade the rose bed and consume food and moisture intended for the roses.

A method of checking such trespassing roots is shown in the accompanying illustration. This entails digging a trench between the hedge and the rose bed deep enough to sever the wandering roots of the hedge. The trench can be re-filled immediately after it has been dug and the severing of the transpassing roots ascertained. It will be necessary to dig such a trench at least once a year.

Turkish Cabinet Delays Action in Entering the War

Actual Declaration Will Await Developments in Mediterranean Area

ISTANBUL, Turkey, June 10 (AP)—The Turkish cabinet met tonight to consider the question of war or peace for Turkey as a result of Italy's entrance into the conflict today against Britain and France.

A meeting of the national assembly and partial mobilization which will increase greatly the 400,000 men Turkey already has under arms is expected tomorrow.

Any move toward an actual declaration of war in fulfillment of Turkey's mutual assistance pact with the Allies will, however, wait on developments, chiefly whether Italy's action brings the fighting to Turkey's doorstep in the Eastern Mediterranean, informed quarters said.

Tanks in Environs

planes battered the French lines, but with small gains.

But France, besieged on two sides by Germans driving on Paris from the north and the Italians entering the war on the south, proclaimed her grim determination to carry on the fight.

The main combats were centered in the Seine valley to the west of Paris, with the high command declaring that some German elements have crossed the Seine river at certain points, and in the Ourco river valley to the northeast of the capital.

The communique, however, said the "enemy is held everywhere by vigorous counter-attacks."

(There was no amplification of the reports that German tanks finally had reached the Paris region.

(German sources in Berlin said the Nazi were within thirty to thirty-five miles of Paris and that some tanks had reached the Seine river, which flows through Paris.)

The French communique was filed from Paris but was issued "somewhere in France." The regular press conference of the war office was not held this morning as only a few attaches were in the office. At the same time, part of the Associated Press staff moved to a point "somewhere in France."

French to Continue

Premier Reynaud, speaking to his people an hour and forty-five minutes after Premier Mussolini announced that Italy had cast her lot with Nazi Germany, voiced the nation's grim determination to fight against whatever might come.

"The Allies are strong," he said.

He emphasized the Allied intention to continue the war "for the independence of all other countries."

"France has been through even greater difficulties and it has always been at that moment that she has astonished the entire world," Reynaud said.

The high command reported that a German break-through to the Seine resulted from increased pressure applied by the Nazis between the route from Amiens to Rouen and from Amiens to Vernon as far as the lower Seine. Vernon is on the Seine about forty miles west of Paris.

In the other principal area of combat, east of the Oise river, German columns coming down from the region of Soissons have resumed their attack toward the Oureq river. The Oureq at one point is about twelve miles north of the Marne river.

Offensive Resumed

The German offensive in the Champagne area was resumed at dawn on both sides of Rethel, the high command said. This push was supported by new divisions and detachments of tanks and bombing planes.

However, the French said the best German efforts in that combat gained only the extension of a bridgehead that the Nazis created the day before in pushing up to La Returnes.

Earlier, a military spokesman had said the center of the Weygand line had fallen back to meet the German threat to its left flank, arising from the penetration of the tank column to the Seine, but that the right flank was actively striking back in the Argonne district.

The bulk of the German infantry was said to be bearing down on the west, trying to cut around the forests which protect Paris from the north.

The night communique indicated that, however, the French were counter-attacking at numerous points along the long front.

French Fight Bitterly

Although the French had dropped back yesterday to a main line along the wooded Bresle river—a line extending through the Oise valley to the Marne plains south of the Aisne, the French had fought bitterly, the war office said.

A communique said seventy-five tons of bombs were dropped on German formations yesterday and last night, and that thirty German planes had been brought down.

In the areas of Soissons, Pontavert, Bourg and Comin, German troops and armored columns had been particularly harassed, and the French made "very important breaks in the communication lines," wrecking several bridges over the Oise.

One French pursuit squadron, the communique said, brought down twelve planes in the Oise sector without loss to itself.

Italian Troops

vers" and the holders of "all the riches and gold on earth."

Italy cheered his decision, and wept, too; but mostly it cheered.

Attacks on French possessions in the Mediterranean were considered imminent—in response to the continual cries for Italian conquest of such prizes as Corsica and Tunisia.

Mussolini defined his principal war aim at control of the Mediterranean and warned his non-belligerent neighbors to rigidly preserve neutrality, lest the war spread to the Balkans and to Egypt and Turkey.

Military circles intimated Italian forces would strike at a French or Bhitish outpost in the Mediterranean rather than directly against France.

That would entail an attempt to seize Tunisia, Corsica or Malin.

The hate which had been hammered into minds in a five-year propaganda campaign was epitomized in Mussolini's asertion that recent history might be summarized in "phrases, promises, threats of blackmail x x x and the League of Nations' seige." This was in reference to the sanctions imposed on Italy during its conquest of Ethiopia.

Italy finally took the field with Germany, Mussolini said, "to smash the territorial military chains suffocating us in our own sea."

Behind his words lay the burning determination of Fascists to achieve territorial expansion which they said France and England always have blocked.

Italian Rights Proclaimed

Posters on walls of every Italian community proclaim Italian rights to Nice, Savoia, Corsica, Malta, Tunisia, Jibuti and the Suez Canal.

In fighting for them, Mussolini asserted, Italy will keep her pledge to Germany to "march to the end with friends."

Scenes of mild confusion followed the war announcement in the streets of Rome. Several hundred troops rushed to turn away a mob of sailors and civilians from the British consulate in the Piazza Espana. Firemen held one end of the Piazza with hoses attached to fireplugs ready to put down any rioting.

Students and Fascists roamed the streets for hours shouting and singing and speaking at demonstrations against what Mussolini called the "western plutocratic and reactionary democracies."

Mussolini opened his war statement by saying the declarations already had been handed to the Allied ambassadors.

The formal welding of the Rome-Berlin axis in the steel of war was set officially for tomorrow, but Berlin reports said Italian troops already had entered hard-pressed France through the Riviera.

Mussolini's announcement of the long-deferred decision from his balcony above blackshirted thousands packed in the square, and to millions at loudspeakers over the kingdom came as a partial surprise.

It long had been anticipated that open hostilities would signify the Italian plunge after nine months of threatful non-belligerency.

Seeks Control of Sea

The Italian war aim as outlined by Mussolini is control of the Mediterranean by Italy, translation of "mare nostrum" literally into "our sea" for Italy.

He held out the promise of non-entanglement to Italy's neighbor nations—but only if they rigidly retain their neutrality—and he made an oratorical attempt to wean away Egypt and Turkey from their pledges to the Allies.

All Italy and the annexed Balkan state of Albania was ordered to "lend their ears" to the moment—to listen!

Clustered and jamming about loudspeakers rigged up wherever Fascist ears might hear, the millions heard their leader, Il Duce, declare war on the "plutocratic reactionary democracies..."

"Our will," he told them, "is that Italy does not intend to bring other people into the conflict.

"Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Egypt will take notice of this fact."

Refers to Switzerland

He also mentioned Switzerland, which recently has been involved in aerial skirmishes with German bombers infringing on Swiss neutrality while cutting corners on their return from attacks on France.

Last-minute efforts were made by British and French ambassadors to avert the entry of Italy and the sandwiching of Paris between attacks from the hard-pressed north and the new southern front.

(The Italian foreign minister, Count Ciano, was quoted in Paris as saying "Italy's entry was only the fulfillment of her "axis obligations.")

Mussolini's war aim, as outlined between cheers that punctuated every sentence as he spoke from the familiar balcony of the Palazzo Venezia, clearly was based on Mediterranean control.

Gibraltar for Spain

It conformed with the often-expressed Italian hope of wresting Gibraltar from Britain and placing Spain in nominal control of the great fortified rock at the west, and of opening the eastern end at Suez with the acquiescence of Turkey.

The bottlenecks of the Mediterranean are the potential trouble spots as the war spreads to the southern shores of Europe.

Italian-controlled passage into the eastern Mediterranean would add a flourishing climax to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia in 1935 and 1936 and the riches that wait to be added to the lifeline linking Italy with Africa.

Rejecting all appeals to stay out, Mussolini overrode the beseechments of both the Pope and President Roosevelt in their vain effort to prevent the spread of bloodshed.

North Enders Protest Plans To Tear Down Footbridge over B&O

Forty-three residents and property owners of North Cumberland have petitioned the mayor and council not to close or remove the foot bridge spanning the B&O railroad from Piedmont avenue to U. S. Route 40, but to have it painted and repaired and placed in a safe condition so that it may remain in use.

Included among the signers of the petition were twenty-four persons residing on Piedmont avenue and six on Columbia avenue.

A check on the number of persons using the bridge has been made by the city engineering department and a report will be made to the council next Monday by City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer.

Several weeks ago the council reported that the cost of maintaing the bridge was too high and removal of the structure was favored, provided traffic did not warrant its upkeep.

Salvation Army Plans Daily Bible Schools

Brigadier Brice L. Phillipson and workers are arranging to operate two Daily Vacation Bible schools again this year, beginning next Monday. He will have charge of one in the Salvation Army Citadel building, and Captain Emma Myers will conduct one in the South Cumberland Army hall on Virginia avenue.

The schools will be operated for two weeks, with sessions every morning from 9 to 11:30 o'clock Monday through Friday. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cooper, county supervisor of the WPA recreational project, is supplying an insiructor to have charge of the recreational and craft work at each school. Members of the Salvation Army will assist the leaders in the various classes and departments.

A meeting of all leaders and instructors has been called for tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., at the Citadel to make plans for the conducting of the school. Any child, between the ages of four and sixteen is eligible to attend.

Capital Getting

no amendments except those offered by the Ways and Means committee.

House consideration, scheduled to start tomorrow, is expected to require one to two days.

The effect of the procedure is to expedite the bill's expected passage and to prevent any major reduction in any of the various tax increases proposed.

The capital echoed, too, to denunciations of Italy's course in entering the war, and predictions that the event would serve principally to stiffen American determination to give all possible help to the Allies.

There were these other developments:

President Roosevelt sent Congress a request for legislation authorizing the navy to build three lighter-than-air craft of 1,000,000 cubic feet capacity each for experimental purposes and coast patrol work.

The army was reported preparing to trade in about 150 combat training planes, mostly bombers, to manufacturers who would be free to sell them to the Allies.

The Senate Judiciary Committee urged the Senate to approve legislation requiring that aliens be registered and fingerprinted, as an anti-fifth column measure.

Old Guns for New

Consideration of a series of administration amendments, including one to permit the army to trade in old guns for new, delayed a final Senate vote on legislation granting broad powers to the President and war department to speed up the defense program.

Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) offered the amendments. Minority leader McNary (R-Ore) obtained a postponement of final action to give the chamber time to study the proposals.

Among other things the pending measure would suspend for one year all restrictions on the size of the army air corps, would give the army authority to construct and least for manufacture of munitions, or provide govertment facilities at private plants and would provide a special fund of $66,000,000 plus $66,000,000 in contract authorizations for use of the president in meeting defense emergencies.

One provision would give the president authority to restrict or prohibit the export of war materials whenever he found it to be in the interest of national defense.

Hyndman Sound Truck Banned by Council

A request for a permit to operate a sound truck in Cumberland advertising Bantly's All-American Shows now featured at Hyndman, Pa., in conjunction with the town's Centennial Celebration, was flatly rejected by a vote of 5 to 0 yesterday by the mayor and city council.

L. C. Miller, general agent for the shows, had requested that the city permit the sound truck to operate between the hours of three and four o'clock every day this week.

The application of Miss Helen Heacox, trading as Webb's Shoe Store, for a license to conduct a retail men and women's shoe business at 83 North Centre street, was tabled to await further investigation.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech on Grave International Situation

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 10 (AP) — President Roosevelt's address today at graduation exercises of the University of Virginia:

"Every generation of young men and women in America has questions to ask the world. Most of the time they are the simple but nevertheless difficult questions of work to do, opportunities to find, ambitions to satisfy.

"But every now and again in the history of the republic a different kind of question presents itself—a question which asks, not about the future of the individual or even of a generation, but about the future of the country, the future of the American people.

"There was such a time at the beginning of our history as a nation. Young people asked themselves in those days what lay ahead, not for themselves, but for the new United States.

"There was such a time in the seemingly endless years of the war between the states. Young men and young women on both sides of the line asked themselves, not what trades or professions they would enter, what lives they would make, but what was to become of the country they had known.

Young People Concerned

There is such a time again today. Again today the young men and the young women of America ask themselves with earnestness and with deep concern this same question 'What is to become of the country we know?'

"Now they ask it with even greater anxiety than before. They ask, not only what the future holds for this republic, but what the future holds for all peoples and all nations that have been living under democratic forms of government—under the free institutions of a free people.

"It is understandable that they would ask this question. They read the words of those who are telling them that the ideal of individual liberty, the ideal of free franchise, the ideal of peace through justice is a decadent ideal.

"They read the word and hear the boast of those who say that a belief in force—force directed by self chosen leaders—is the new and vigorous system which will overrun the earth. They have seen the ascendancy of this philosophy of force in country after country where free institutions and individual liberties were once maintained.

"It is natural and understandable, therefore, that the younger generation should first ask itself what the extension of the philosophy of force to all the world lead to ultimately. We see today in stark reality some of the consequences of the machine age.

Machines Misused

"Where control of machines has been retained in the hands of mankind as a whole, untold benefits have accrued to mankind. For mankind was then the master; the machine was the servant.

"But, in this new system of force the mastery of the machine is not in the hands of mankind. It is in the control af infinitely small groups of individuals who rule without a single one of the democratic sanctions.

"The machine in hands of irresponsible conquerors becomes the master; mankind is not only the servant but the victim. Such mastery abandons with deliberate contempt all of the normal values to which even this young continent for more than 300 years has been accustomed and dedicated.

"Surely the new philosophy proves from month to month that it could have no concept of the way of life or the way of thought of a nation whose origins go back to Jamestown and Plymouth Rock.

"Conversely, neither those who spring from that stock nor those who have come hiter in later years can be indifferent to the destruction of freedom in their ancestral lands across the sea.

"Perception of danger to our institutions may come slowly or it may come with a rush and shock as it has to the people of the United States in the past few months. This perception of danger has come to us clearly and overwhelmingly; and we perceive the peril in a worldwide arena—an arena which may become so narrowed that only the Americas would retain the ancient faiths.

"Some indeed still hold to the now obvious delusion that we of the United States can safely permit the United States to become a lone island in a world dominated by the philosophy of force.

Against Isolation

"Such an island may be the dream of those who still talk and vote as isolationists. Such an island represents to me and to the overwhelming majority of Americas today a helpless nightmare of a people without freedom, a people lodged in prison, handcuffed, hungry, and fed through the bars from day to day by the contemptuous, unpitying masters of other continents.

"It is natural also that we should ask ourselves how now we can prevent the building of that prison and the placing of ourselves in the midst of it.

"Let us not hesitate—all of us—to proclaim certain truths. Overwhelmingly we, as a nation, and this applies to all the other American nations, are convinced that military and naval victory for the gods of force and hate would endanger the institutions of democracy in the western world—and that equally, therefore, the whole of our sympathies lie with those nations which are giving their life blood in combat against those forces.

"The people and government of the United States have seen with the utmost regret and with grave disquiet the decision of the Italian government to engage in the hostilities now raging in Europe.

"More than three months ago the chief of the Italian government sent me word that because of the determination of Italy to limit, so far as might be possible, the spread of the European conflict, more than 200,000,000 of people in the region of the Mediterranean had been enabled to escape the suffering and the devastation of war.

"I informed the chief of the Italian government that this desire on the part of Italy to prevent the war from spreading met with sympathy and response on the part of the government and the people of the United States, and I expressed the earnest hope of this government that this policy on the part of Italy might be continued. I made it clear that in the opinion of the government of the United States any extension of the hostilities in the region of the Mediterranean might result in a still greater enlargement of the scene of the conflict in the Near East and in Africa and that if this came to pass no one could foretell how much greater the extension of the war might eventually become.

Sought Discussions

Again upon a subsequent occasion, recognizing that certain aspirations of Italy might form the basis of discussions between the powers most specifically concerned, I offered, in a message addressed to the chief of the Italian government, to send to the governments of France and of Great Britain such specific indications of the desires of Italy to obtain readjustments with regard to her position as the chief of the Italian government might desire to transmit through me. While making it clear that the government of the United States in such event could not and will not assume responsibility for the nature of the proposals submitted nor for agreements which might thereafter be reached, I proposed that if Italy would refrain from entering the war I would be willing to ask assurances from the other powers concerned that they would faithfully execute any agreement so reached and that Italy's voice in any future peace conference would have the same authority as if Italy had actually taken part in the war as a belligerent.

"Unfortunately, the chief of the Italian government was unwilling to accept the procedure suggested.

"The efforts of this government have been directed to doing what it could to work for the preservation of peace in the Mediterranean area, and it likewise expressed its willingness to endeavor to cooperate with the government of Italy when the appropriate occasion arose for the creation of a stable world order, through the reduction of armaments, and through the construction of a more liberal international economic system which would assure to all powers equality of opportunity in the world's markets and in the securing of raw materials on equal terms.

United States Concerned

"I have likewise, of course, felt it necessary in my communications to Signor Mussolini to express the concern of the government of the United States because of the fact that any extension of the war in the region of the Mediterranean would inevitably result in great prejudice to the ways of life and government and to the trade and commerce of all the American republics.

"The government of Italy has now chosen to preserve what it terms its "freedom of action" and to fulfill what it states are its promises to Germany. In so doing it has manifested disregard for the rights and security of other nations, for the lives of the peoples of those nations which are directly threatened by this spread of the war; and has evidenced its unwillingness to find the means through pacific negotiations for the satisfaction of what it believes are its legitimate aspirations.

"On this tenth day of June, 1940, in this university founded by the first great American teacher of democracy, we send forth our prayers and our hopes to those beyond the seas who are maintaining with magnificent valor their battle for freedom.

"In our American unity, we will pursue two obvious and simultaneous courses: We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation and at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to the task of any emergency and every defense.

"All roads leading to the accomplishment of these objectives must be kept clear of obstructions. We will not slow down or detour. Signs and signals call for speed—full speed ahead.

It is right that each new generation should ask questions. But in recent months the principal question has been greatly simplified. Once more the future of the nation and of the American people is at stake.

"We need not and we will not, in any way, abandon our continuing effort to make democracy work within our own borders. We still insist on the need for vast improvements in our own social and economic life.

"But that is a component part of national defense itself.

"The program unfolds swiftly and into it will fit the responsibility and the opportunity of every man and woman to preserve our heritage in days of peril.

"I call for effort, courage, sacrifice, devotion. Granting the love of freedom, all of these are possible.

"And the love of freedom is still fierce and steady in the nation today."

Council Bickers About Reports

Conlon Cuts Loose, Mayor Answers Back

Thomas F. Conlon, finance commissioner, hung his washing out on the line yesterday at city hall.

A firm believer in the saying, "It will all come out in the wash", Mr. Conlon picked "Wash Day" to loose his verbal blast at Mayor Harry Irvine and City Auditor Arthur B. Gibson.

Conlon's failure to receive a statement showing expenditures and balances remaining in the various accounts, as stipulated in a recent order passed by the council, resulted in a heated debate between the commissioner and mayor.

While the report was not available at the council session, Mr. Irvine insisted that Mr. Gibson had prepared it.

Time To Wake Up

"If I don't get it, I'll see why," fired back Conlon. "It is time the citizens wake up and demand things."

"It's your duty as finance commissioner to have the reports printed," shouted Irvine, as he gave the desk a healthy pounding with his hands.

After Conlon had accused the mayor of trying to avoid the presentation of reports and that Irvine was "trying to embarrass him," the city's chief executive said nothing is wrong and that the accounting system is up to date.

Just Contrariness

"It is just contrariness," declared Conlon, "I want the report next week".

Then the commissioner said the report should be prepared before any more tax bills are sent out.

When Irvine asked the finance commissioner if he had told the auditor, he replied, "I don't sleep with him".

Digging into "ancient" history, Conlon insinuated there were some irregularities in the payment for a steam shovel in 1939, that certain members of the administration had worked against him in the recent election and he even revived his altercation with a newspaper reporter in the mayor's office more than a year ago. The commissioner was peeved about the latter incident because the members of the council at that time, including the present mayor, had signed a statement to prove that the reporter was correct in his account of a story regarding Jehovah's Witnesses.

The Steam Shovel Deal

Regarding the steam shovel matter, Irvine said that it had been handled in the proper manner. The mayor stated that the city had received a bill for approximately $3,400 for the use of a steam shovel for cutting through streets in the section of the city known as "Egypt". Irvine said he objected when the bill was presented and that a compromise figure of $2,000 was reached. "This order was passed unanimously by the council, including Conlon," declared Irvine. The bill had been held up almost a year before the city paid it.

"Conlon has been on the warpath since I objected to putting his two 'stimulators' to work to speed up collections," the mayor said last night. "In my opinion I don't think his men were responsible for more than thirty cents in collections made by the city."

"The story that Conlon has been circulating to the effect that we worked against him in the election is just another one of his brainstorms," the mayor asserted.

Getting back to financial reports Mayor Irvine put emphasis on the fact that "Accounts at the city hall are open to the public at any time."

Italian, Nazi Agents Confer in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, June 10, (AP)—A foreign intelligence officer reported today that Italian agents in Mexico, acting simultaneously with Italy's entrance into the war, conferred this afternoon with several leaders of German "fifth column" activity here.

Five Fascist secret agents reportedly arrived for an entended conference with Nazi propaganda representatives.

found evidence to support complaints of "vote buying" and turned it over to state authorities for action. Gillette said that complaints involved some of the authorities to whom the evidence was presented, but that the committee felt it properly should be considered by state officials. He said it was possible that West Virginia criminal statutes had been violated, but declined to name the candidates involved.

Maryland—The committee found that expenditures in both the Democratic and Republican senatorial primaries were "too large for the public interest." Declining to name candidates Gillette said that there "should be some check on such expenditures so as not to preclude a poor man or a man of moderate income from running for the Senate."

Missouri investigators have filed voluminous reports on their inquiry into the Missouri Democratic senatorial primary, but these have not yet been studied by the committee.

Ohio—Charges of irregularities in the Republican senatorial campaign, the nature of which Gillette did not specify, were found to be without foundation.

Roar of Planes Heard over Paris

PARIS, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—The roar of airplanes and the thunder of French anti-aircraft guns were heard over Paris early today but no alarm was sounded immediately.

Informal Truce in France Permits Both Sides To Bury Dead

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—Fighting so fierce that both sides entered into an informal truce to bring in their dead and wounded was described tonight in eyewitness accounts of clashes between the British expeditionary force and the Germans in France.

These accounts said the British were fighting "stubborn rearguard actions against steadily advancing German tanks and infantry."

But all their courage and stubborness has not been able to stop the tide of the accelerated German advance," it was declared.

could be used to increase the salaries of the councilmen and mayor.

Further salary increases might be possible as the result of savings made to more efficient organization which should result from a four-year term of office.

Each councilman heads one of the four departments of the city government. Their duties require long study and careful supervision. Most councilmen find, after election, that they have full-time jobs on their hands. In return for these long hours of service and responsibility, they receive only $100 a month. The mayor who acts as president or chairman of the council and must watch over all departments and the administration of them, receives $1500 dollars of $125 a month. He, too, works long hours and has little time for outside activity.

Plan Further Action

It is the general opinion of the young men who are attempting to remedy this condition that it has existed too long, and that something should be done about it. The matter will be discussed further at the general meeting of the association June 17, at which time members will be informed of the action of their board of directors and the question will be thrown open for discussion. It is the plan of the board of directors to obtain a hundred per cent endorsement of the resolution, from the members and then begin a campaign to have proper legislation enacted to extend the term to four years and increase the salaries, if the idea meets with general approval.

Members of the board of directors learned a great many things about the duties of the city fathers during their investigation and discussion, and are of the united opinion that their idea, which they openly admit has been talked about before, should become a project toward better city government and general advancement in the community.

Those present at the meeting included Fred Z. Hetzel, president; Leslie L. Helmer, past president; James Reinhart, secretary; George Werkmeister, treasurer; Leo P. Brown, vice-president; Captain Randolph Millholland, United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett, F. Allan Weatherholt, Thomas B. Finan, Jr. and James McAlpine.

ing a crisis which far outshadowed the Civil War.

Landon himself said people everywhere should unite behind Wendell Willkie, not as a Republican primarily, but as an outstanding — a great — American who would make a truly great president."

Stephen Douglas, he said, was a "great Democrat" and it was fitting that his grandson should support a "great American."

There was a growing indication that a majority of Maryland's G. O. P. national convention delegation would be on the Willkie bandwagon after the pledged first-ballot vote for Thomas E. Dewey.

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that former Gov. Harry W. Nice, nominal head of the delegation, would be the deciding factor in the switch-over, and it was known that at least two of his closest advisers and party leaders were working actively to win him around.

Switzerland Not

Rome and Bern, had been guarded on both sides by mere token troop formations.

It was learned tonight that the army command now has issued orders applying frontier restrictions keeping all non-resident civilians and foreigners out of the zone near the Italian border.

Informed sources said Italy's entrance into the war had in no way changed Switzerland's position as of last night, when virtually all foreign sources seemed to think the country was in greater danger of invasion than ever before.

Concentration of German troops remained in the Black Forest across the border. Only the German high command knew why they were there.

The famous French Orient express failed to pass through the Simplon tunnel at the frontier tonight. It has been the only through passenger train from Italy recently.

Italy's Airforce May Prove To Be Principal Weapon

Bombers Said To Be Capable of Round Trip to London

By DEVON FRANCIS

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Much of the effectiveness of Italy against the Allies will lie in the use which Premier Mussolini makes of its 6,000 to 8,000 combat airplanes, some of them designed for bombing missions as far away as London.

Next to Germany, Italy probably has the most highly trained air force in Europe, Mussolini's military fliers number no less than 18,000.

It will be contrary to the often-publicized Italian military strategy if, tomorrow, Italian planes do not make mass attacks on "strategic objectives" coupled with assaults by medium-weight bombers on the French troops massed on the Italian border.

Mussolini may also strike with air power at auxiliary units of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Italian startegy, as set forth in the writings of the nation's military experts, is predicted on the establishment of immediate air superiority, heavy bombing attacks and the use of fast strafing planes to demoralize and disperse enemy ground troops.

The Fascist editor Virginio Gayda last year disclosed that the air force was grouped in squadrons of 400 bombing and pursuit planes which could "reach any point in the Mediterranean and Europe or to London, dump their bombs and return to their bases for new loads."

Rhineland Bombed By Allied Planes

COLOGNE, GERMANY, June 10 —(AP via Radio)—Allied planes rained scores of bombs on the Rhineland and German held military objectives in Belgium the past two nights but did little damage, the newspaper West Deutsche Beobachter reported today.

Godesberg, scene of the historic pre-Munich conference between former British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Adolf Hitler, was one of the towns bombed.

Venereal Diseases Head the List

The report of the City Health Department, presented to council yesterday by Dr. Joseph P. Franklin, showed twenty-two cases of communicable diseases in May. Venereal diseases headed the list with twelve cases, followed by scarlet fever, four; tuberculosis, three; pneumonia, two, and erysipelas, one.

A total of 1,214 school children were inspected during the month, the nurse's report showed.

Youth Electrocuted

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 10 (AP)—Earl Harrison Roach, 26-year-old tipple employe of the Hatfield-Campbell's Creek Coal company at Plymouth, was electrocuted today when he accidentally contacted a trolley wire while shifting empty mine cars.

Turkish Cabinet Delays Action in Entering the War

Actual Declaration Will Await Developments in Mediterranean Area

ISTANBUL, Turkey, June 10 (AP)—The Turkish cabinet met tonight to consider the question of war or peace for Turkey as a result of Italy's entrance into the conflict today against Britain and France.

A meeting of the national assembly and partial mobilization which will increase greatly the 400,000 men Turkey already has under arms is expected tomorrow.

Any move toward an actual declaration of war in fulfillment of Turkey's mutual assistance pact with the Allies will, however, wait on developments, chiefly whether Italy's action brings the fighting to Turkey's doorstep in the Eastern Mediterranean, informed quarters said.

planes battered the French lines, but with small gains.

But France, besieged on two sides by Germans driving on Paris from the north and the Italians entering the war on the south, proclaimed her grim determination to carry on the fight.

The main combats were centered in the Seine valley to the west of Paris, with the high command declaring that some German elements have crossed the Seine river at certain points, and in the Ourco river valley to the northeast of the capital.

The communique, however, said the "enemy is held everywhere by vigorous counter-attacks."

(There was no amplification of the reports that German tanks finally had reached the Paris region.

(German sources in Berlin said the Nazi were within thirty to thirty-five miles of Paris and that some tanks had reached the Seine river, which flows through Paris.)

The French communique was filed from Paris but was issued "somewhere in France." The regular press conference of the war office was not held this morning as only a few attaches were in the office. At the same time, part of the Associated Press staff moved to a point "somewhere in France."

French to Continue

Premier Reynaud, speaking to his people an hour and forty-five minutes after Premier Mussolini announced that Italy had cast her lot with Nazi Germany, voiced the nation's grim determination to fight against whatever might come.

"The Allies are strong," he said.

He emphasized the Allied intention to continue the war "for the independence of all other countries."

"France has been through even greater difficulties and it has always been at that moment that she has astonished the entire world," Reynaud said.

The high command reported that a German break-through to the Seine resulted from increased pressure applied by the Nazis between the route from Amiens to Rouen and from Amiens to Vernon as far as the lower Seine. Vernon is on the Seine about forty miles west of Paris.

In the other principal area of combat, east of the Oise river, German columns coming down from the region of Soissons have resumed their attack toward the Oureq river. The Oureq at one point is about twelve miles north of the Marne river.

Offensive Resumed

The German offensive in the Champagne area was resumed at dawn on both sides of Rethel, the high command said. This push was supported by new divisions and detachments of tanks and bombing planes.

However, the French said the best German efforts in that combat gained only the extension of a bridgehead that the Nazis created the day before in pushing up to La Returnes.

Earlier, a military spokesman had said the center of the Weygand line had fallen back to meet the German threat to its left flank, arising from the penetration of the tank column to the Seine, but that the right flank was actively striking back in the Argonne district.

The bulk of the German infantry was said to be bearing down on the west, trying to cut around the forests which protect Paris from the north.

The night communique indicated that, however, the French were counter-attacking at numerous points along the long front.

French Fight Bitterly

Although the French had dropped back yesterday to a main line along the wooded Bresle river—a line extending through the Oise valley to the Marne plains south of the Aisne, the French had fought bitterly, the war office said.

A communique said seventy-five tons of bombs were dropped on German formations yesterday and last night, and that thirty German planes had been brought down.

In the areas of Soissons, Pontavert, Bourg and Comin, German troops and armored columns had been particularly harassed, and the French made "very important breaks in the communication lines," wrecking several bridges over the Oise.

One French pursuit squadron, the communique said, brought down twelve planes in the Oise sector without loss to itself.

Italian Troops

vers" and the holders of "all the riches and gold on earth."

Italy cheered his decision, and wept, too; but mostly it cheered.

Attacks on French possessions in the Mediterranean were considered imminent—in response to the continual cries for Italian conquest of such prizes as Corsica and Tunisia.

Mussolini defined his principal war aim at control of the Mediterranean and warned his non-belligerent neighbors to rigidly preserve neutrality, lest the war spread to the Balkans and to Egypt and Turkey.

Military circles intimated Italian forces would strike at a French or Bhitish outpost in the Mediterranean rather than directly against France.

That would entail an attempt to seize Tunisia, Corsica or Malin.

The hate which had been hammered into minds in a five-year propaganda campaign was epitomized in Mussolini's asertion that recent history might be summarized in "phrases, promises, threats of blackmail x x x and the League of Nations' seige." This was in reference to the sanctions imposed on Italy during its conquest of Ethiopia.

Italy finally took the field with Germany, Mussolini said, "to smash the territorial military chains suffocating us in our own sea."

Behind his words lay the burning determination of Fascists to achieve territorial expansion which they said France and England always have blocked.

Italian Rights Proclaimed

Posters on walls of every Italian community proclaim Italian rights to Nice, Savoia, Corsica, Malta, Tunisia, Jibuti and the Suez Canal.

In fighting for them, Mussolini asserted, Italy will keep her pledge to Germany to "march to the end with friends."

Scenes of mild confusion followed the war announcement in the streets of Rome. Several hundred troops rushed to turn away a mob of sailors and civilians from the British consulate in the Piazza Espana. Firemen held one end of the Piazza with hoses attached to fireplugs ready to put down any rioting.

Students and Fascists roamed the streets for hours shouting and singing and speaking at demonstrations against what Mussolini called the "western plutocratic and reactionary democracies."

Mussolini opened his war statement by saying the declarations already had been handed to the Allied ambassadors.

The formal welding of the Rome-Berlin axis in the steel of war was set officially for tomorrow, but Berlin reports said Italian troops already had entered hard-pressed France through the Riviera.

Mussolini's announcement of the long-deferred decision from his balcony above blackshirted thousands packed in the square, and to millions at loudspeakers over the kingdom came as a partial surprise.

It long had been anticipated that open hostilities would signify the Italian plunge after nine months of threatful non-belligerency.

Seeks Control of Sea

The Italian war aim as outlined by Mussolini is control of the Mediterranean by Italy, translation of "mare nostrum" literally into "our sea" for Italy.

He held out the promise of non-entanglement to Italy's neighbor nations—but only if they rigidly retain their neutrality—and he made an oratorical attempt to wean away Egypt and Turkey from their pledges to the Allies.

All Italy and the annexed Balkan state of Albania was ordered to "lend their ears" to the moment—to listen!

Clustered and jamming about loudspeakers rigged up wherever Fascist ears might hear, the millions heard their leader, Il Duce, declare war on the "plutocratic reactionary democracies..."

"Our will," he told them, "is that Italy does not intend to bring other people into the conflict.

"Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Egypt will take notice of this fact."

Refers to Switzerland

He also mentioned Switzerland, which recently has been involved in aerial skirmishes with German bombers infringing on Swiss neutrality while cutting corners on their return from attacks on France.

Last-minute efforts were made by British and French ambassadors to avert the entry of Italy and the sandwiching of Paris between attacks from the hard-pressed north and the new southern front.

(The Italian foreign minister, Count Ciano, was quoted in Paris as saying "Italy's entry was only the fulfillment of her "axis obligations.")

Mussolini's war aim, as outlined between cheers that punctuated every sentence as he spoke from the familiar balcony of the Palazzo Venezia, clearly was based on Mediterranean control.

Gibraltar for Spain

It conformed with the often-expressed Italian hope of wresting Gibraltar from Britain and placing Spain in nominal control of the great fortified rock at the west, and of opening the eastern end at Suez with the acquiescence of Turkey.

The bottlenecks of the Mediterranean are the potential trouble spots as the war spreads to the southern shores of Europe.

Italian-controlled passage into the eastern Mediterranean would add a flourishing climax to the Italian conquest of Ethiopia in 1935 and 1936 and the riches that wait to be added to the lifeline linking Italy with Africa.

Rejecting all appeals to stay out, Mussolini overrode the beseechments of both the Pope and President Roosevelt in their vain effort to prevent the spread of bloodshed.

North Enders Protest Plans To Tear Down Footbridge over B&O

Forty-three residents and property owners of North Cumberland have petitioned the mayor and council not to close or remove the foot bridge spanning the B&O railroad from Piedmont avenue to U. S. Route 40, but to have it painted and repaired and placed in a safe condition so that it may remain in use.

Included among the signers of the petition were twenty-four persons residing on Piedmont avenue and six on Columbia avenue.

A check on the number of persons using the bridge has been made by the city engineering department and a report will be made to the council next Monday by City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer.

Several weeks ago the council reported that the cost of maintaing the bridge was too high and removal of the structure was favored, provided traffic did not warrant its upkeep.

Salvation Army Plans Daily Bible Schools

Brigadier Brice L. Phillipson and workers are arranging to operate two Daily Vacation Bible schools again this year, beginning next Monday. He will have charge of one in the Salvation Army Citadel building, and Captain Emma Myers will conduct one in the South Cumberland Army hall on Virginia avenue.

The schools will be operated for two weeks, with sessions every morning from 9 to 11:30 o'clock Monday through Friday. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cooper, county supervisor of the WPA recreational project, is supplying an instructor to have charge of the recreational and craft work at each school. Members of the Salvation Army will assist the leaders in the various classes and departments.

A meeting of all leaders and instructors has been called for tomorrow at 1:30 p. m., at the Citadel, to make plans for the conducting of the school. Any child, between the ages of four and sixteen is eligible to attend.

Capital Getting

no amendments except those offered by the Ways and Means committee.

House consideration, scheduled to start tomorrow, is expected to require one to two days.

The effect of the procedure is to expedite the bill's expected passage and to prevent any major reduction in any of the various tax increases proposed.

The capital echoed, too, to denunciations of Italy's course in entering the war, and predictions that the event would serve principally to stiffen American determination to give all possible help to the Allies.

There were these other developments:

President Roosevelt sent Congress a request for legislation authorizing the navy to build three lighter-than-air craft of 1,000,000 cubic feet capacity each for experimental purposes and coast patrol work.

The army was reported preparing to trade in about 150 combat training planes, mostly bombers, to manufacturers who would be free to sell them to the Allies.

The Senate Judiciary Committee urged the Senate to approve legislation requiring that aliens be registered and fingerprinted, as an anti-fifth column measure.

Old Guns for New

Consideration of a series of administration amendments, including one to permit the army to trade in old guns for new, delayed a final Senate vote on legislation granting broad powers to the President and war department to speed up the defense program.

Chairman Sheppard (D-Tex) offered the amendments. Minority leader McNary (R-Ore) obtained a postponement of final action to give the chamber time to study the proposals.

Among other things the pending measure would suspend for one year all restrictions on the size of the army air corps, would give the army authority to construct and least for manufacture of munitions, or provide government facilities at private plants and would provide a special fund of $66,000,000 plus $66,000,000 in contract authorizations for use of the president in meeting defense emergencies.

One provision would give the president authority to restrict or prohibit the export of war materials whenever he found it to be in the interest of national defense.

Hyndman Sound Truck Banned by Council

A request for a permit to operate a sound truck in Cumberland advertising Bantly's All-American Shows now featured at Hyndman, Pa., in conjunction with the town's Centennial Celebration, was flatly rejected by a vote of 5 to 0 yesterday by the mayor and city council.

L. C. Miller, general agent for the shows, had requested that the city permit the sound truck to operate between the hours of three and four o'clock every day this week.

The application of Miss Helen Heacox, trading as Webb's Shoe Store, for a license to conduct a retail men and women's shoe business at 83 North Centre street, was tabled to await further investigation.

Text of Roosevelt's Speech on Grave International Situation

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., June 10 (AP) — President Roosevelt's address today at graduation exercises of the University of Virginia:

"Every generation of young men and women in America has questions to ask the world. Most of the time they are the simple but nevertheless difficult questions of work to do, opportunities to find, ambitions to satisfy.

"But every now and again in the history of the republic a different kind of question presents itself—a question which asks, not about the future of the individual or even of a generation, but about the future of the country, the future of the American people.

"There was such a time at the beginning of our history as a nation. Young people asked themselves in those days what lay ahead, not for themselves, but for the new United States.

"There was such a time in the seemingly endless years of the war between the states. Young men and young women on both sides of the line asked themselves, not what trades or professions they would enter, what lives they would make, but what was to become of the country they had known.

Young People Concerned

There is such a time again today. Again today the young men and the young women of America ask themselves with earnestness and with deep concern this same question. 'What is to become of the country we know?'

"Now they ask it with even greater anxiety than before. They ask, not only what the future holds for this republic, but what the future holds for all peoples and all nations that have been living under democratic forms of government—under the free institutions of a free people.

"It is understandable that they would ask this question. They read the words of those who are telling them that the ideal of individual liberty, the ideal of free franchise, the ideal of peace through justice is a decadent ideal.

"They read the word and hear the boast of those who say that a belief in force—force directed by self chosen leaders—is the new and vigorous system which will overrun the earth. They have seen the ascendancy of this philosophy of force in country after country where free institutions and individual liberties were once maintained.

"It is natural and understandable, therefore, that the younger generation should first ask itself what the extension of the philosophy of force to all the world lead to ultimately. We see today in stark reality some of the consequences of the machine age.

Machines Misused

"Where control of machines has been retained in the hands of mankind as a whole, untold benefits have accrued to mankind. For mankind was then the master; the machine was the servant.

"But, in this new system of force the mastery of the machine is not in the hands of mankind. It is in the control of infinitely small groups of individuals who rule without a single one of the democratic sanctions.

"The machine in hands of irresponsible conquerors becomes the master; mankind is not only the servant but the victim. Such mastery abandons with deliberate contempt all of the normal values to which even this young continent for more than 300 years has been accustomed and dedicated.

"Surely the new philosophy proves from month to month that it could have no concept of the way of life or the way of thought of a nation whose origins go back to Jamestown and Plymouth Rock.

"Conversely, neither those who spring from that stock nor those who have come hiter in later years can be indifferent to the destruction of freedom in their ancestral lands across the sea.

"Perception of danger to our institutions may come slowly or it may come with a rush and shock as it has to the people of the United States in the past few months. This perception of danger has come to us clearly and overwhelmingly; and we perceive the peril in a worldwide arena—an arena which may become so narrowed that only the Americas would retain the ancient faiths.

"Some indeed still hold to the now obvious delusion that we of the United States can safely permit the United States to become a lone island in a world dominated by the philosophy of force.

Against Isolation

"Such an island may be the dream of those who still talk and vote as isolationists. Such an island represents to me and to the overwhelming majority of Americas today a helpless nightmare of a people without freedom, a people lodged in prison, handcuffed, hungry, and fed through the bars from day to day by the contemptuous, unpitying masters of other continents.

"It is natural also that we should ask ourselves how now we can prevent the building of that prison and the placing of ourselves in the midst of it.

"Let us not hesitate—all of us—to proclaim certain truths. Overwhelmingly we, as a nation, and this applies to all the other American nations, are convinced that military and naval victory for the gods of force and hate would endanger the institutions of democracy in the western world—and that equally, therefore, the whole of our sympathies lie with those nations which are giving their life blood in combat against those forces.

"The people and government of the United States have seen with the utmost regret and with grave disquiet the decision of the Italian government to engage in the hostilities now raging in Europe.

"More than three months ago the chief of the Italian government sent me word that because of the determination of Italy to limit, so far as might be possible, the spread of the European conflict, more than 200,000,000 of people in the region of the Mediterranean had been enabled to escape the suffering and the devastation of war.

"I informed the chief of the Italian government that this desire on the part of Italy to prevent the war from spreading met with sympathy and response on the part of the government and the people of the United States, and I expressed the earnest hope of this government that this policy on the part of Italy might be continued. I made it clear that in the opinion of the government of the United States any extension of the hostilities in the region of the Mediterranean might result in a still greater enlargement of the scene of the conflict in the Near East and in Africa and that if this came to pass no one could foretell how much greater the extension of the war might eventually become.

Sought Discussions

Again upon a subsequent occasion, recognizing that certain aspirations of Italy might form the basis of discussions between the powers most specifically concerned, I offered, in a message addressed to the chief of the Italian government, to send to the governments of France and of Great Britain such specific indications of the desires of Italy to obtain readjustments with regard to her position as the chief of the Italian government might desire to transmit through me. While making it clear that the government of the United States in such event could not and will not assume responsibility for the nature of the proposals submitted nor for agreements which might thereafter be reached, I proposed that if Italy would refrain from entering the war I would be willing to ask assurances from the other powers concerned that they would faithfully execute any agreement so reached and that Italy's voice in any future peace conference would have the same authority as if Italy had actually taken part in the war as a belligerent.

"Unfortunately, the chief of the Italian government was unwilling to accept the procedure suggested.

"The efforts of this government have been directed to doing what it could to work for the preservation of peace in the Mediterranean area, and it likewise expressed its willingness to endeavor to cooperate with the government of Italy when the appropriate occasion arose for the creation of a stable world order, through the reduction of armaments, and through the construction of a more liberal international economic system which would assure to all powers equality of opportunity in the world's markets and in the securing of raw materials on equal terms.

United States Concerned

"I have likewise, of course, felt it necessary in my communications to Signor Mussolini to express the concern of the government of the United States because of the fact that any extension of the war in the region of the Mediterranean would inevitably result in great prejudice to the ways of life and government and to the trade and commerce of all the American republics.

"The government of Italy has now chosen to preserve what it terms its "freedom of action" and to fulfill what it states are its promises to Germany. In so doing it has manifested disregard for the rights and security of other nations, for the lives of the peoples of those nations which are directly threatened by this spread of the war; and has evidenced its unwillingness to find the means through pacific negotiations for the satisfaction of what it believes are its legitimate aspirations.

"On this tenth day of June, 1940, in this university founded by the first great American teacher of democracy, we send forth our prayers and our hopes to those beyond the seas who are maintaining with magnificent valor their battle for freedom.

"In our American unity, we will pursue two obvious and simultaneous courses: We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation and at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to the task of any emergency and every defense.

"All roads leading to the accomplishment of these objectives must be kept clear of obstructions. We will not slow down or detour. Signs and signals call for speed—full speed ahead.

It is right that each new generation should ask questions. But in recent months the principal question has been greatly simplified. Once more the future of the nation and of the American people is at stake.

"We need not and we will not, in any way, abandon our continuing effort to make democracy work within our own borders. We still insist on the need for vast improvements in our own social and economic life.

"But that is a component part of national defense itself.

"The program unfolds swiftly and into it will fit the responsibility and the opportunity of every man and woman to preserve our heritage in days of peril.

"I call for effort, courage, sacrifice, devotion. Granting the love of freedom, all of these are possible.

"And the love of freedom is still fierce and steady in the nation today."

Council Bickers About Reports.

Conlon Cuts Loose, Mayor Answers Back

Thomas F. Conlon, finance commissioner, hung his washing out on the line yesterday at city hall.

A firm believer in the saying, "It will all come out in the wash", Mr. Conlon picked "Wash Day" to loose his verbal blast at Mayor Harry Irvine and City Auditor Arthur B. Gibson.

Conlon's failure to receive a statement showing expenditures and balances remaining in the various accounts, as stipulated in a recent order passed by the council, resulted in a heated debate between the commissioner and mayor.

While the report was not available at the council session, Mr. Irvine insisted that Mr. Gibson had prepared it.

Time To Wake Up

"If I don't get it, I'll see why," fired back Conlon. "It is time the citizens wake up and demand things."

"It's your duty as finance commissioner to have the reports printed," shouted Irvine, as he gave the desk a healthy pounding with his hands.

After Conlon had accused the mayor of trying to avoid the presentation of reports and that Irvine was "trying to embarrass him," the city's chief executive said nothing is wrong and that the accounting system is up to date.

Just Contrariness

"It is just contrariness," declared Conlon, "I want the report next week".

Then the commissioner said the report should be prepared before any more tax bills are sent out.

When Irvine asked the finance commissioner if he had told the auditor, he replied, "I don't sleep with him".

Digging into "ancient" history, Conlon insinuated there were some irregularities in the payment for a steam shovel in 1939, that certain members of the administration had worked against him in the recent election and he even revived his altercation with a newspaper reporter in the mayor's office more than a year ago. The commissioner was peeved about the latter incident because the members of the council at that time, including the present mayor, had signed a statement to prove that the reporter was correct in his account of a story regarding Jehovah's Witnesses.

The Steam Shovel Deal

Regarding the steam shovel matter, Irvine said that it had been handled in the proper manner. The mayor stated that the city had received a bill for approximately $3,400 for the use of a steam shovel for cutting through streets in the section of the city known as "Egypt". Irvine said he objected when the bill was presented and that a compromise figure of $2,000 was reached. "This order was passed unanimously by the council, including Conlon," declared Irvine. The bill had been held up almost a year before the city paid it.

"Conlon has been on the warpath since I objected to putting his two 'stimulators' to work to speed up collections," the mayor said last night. "In my opinion I don't think his men were responsible for more than thirty cents in collections made by the city."

"The story that Conlon has been circulating to the effect that we worked against him in the election is just another one of his brainstorms," the mayor asserted.

Getting back to financial reports Mayor Irvine put emphasis on the fact that "Accounts at the city hall are open to the public at any time."

Italian, Nazi Agents Confer in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, June 10, (AP)—A foreign intelligence officer reported today that Italian agents in Mexico, acting simultaneously with Italy's entrance into the war, conferred this afternoon with several leaders of German "fifth column" activity here.

Five Fascist secret agents reportedly arrived for an entended conference with Nazi propaganda representatives.

found evidence to support complaints of "vote buying" and turned it over to state authorities for action. Gillette said that complaints involved some of the authorities to whom the evidence was presented, but that the committee felt it properly should be considered by state officials. He said it was possible that West Virginia criminal statutes had been violated, but declined to name the candidates involved.

Maryland—The committee found that expenditures in both the Democratic and Republican senatorial primaries were "too large for the public interest." Declining to name candidates Gillette said that there "should be some check on such expenditures so as not to preclude a poor man or a man of moderate income from running for the Senate."

Missouri investigators have filed voluminous reports on their inquiry into the Missouri Democratic senatorial primary, but these have not yet been studied by the committee.

Ohio—Charges of irregularities in the Republican senatorial campaign, the nature of which Gillette did not specify, were found to be without foundation.

Roar of Planes Heard over Paris

PARIS, June 11—(Tuesday)—(AP)—The roar of airplanes and the thunder of French anti-aircraft guns were heard over Paris early today but no alarm was sounded immediately.

Informal Truce in France Permits Both Sides To Bury Dead

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—Fighting so fierce that both sides entered into an informal truce to bring in their dead and wounded was described tonight in eyewitness accounts of clashes between the British expeditionary force and the Germans in France.

These accounts said the British were fighting "subborn rearguard actions against steadily advancing German tanks and infantry."

But all their courage and stubborness has not been able to stop the tide of the accelerated German advance," it was declared.

could be used to increase the salaries of the councilmen and mayor.

Further salary increases might be possible as the result of savings made to more efficient organization which should result from a four-year term of office.

Each councilman heads one of the four departments of the city government. Their duties require long study and careful supervision. Most councilmen find, after election, that they have full-time jobs on their hands. In return for these long hours of service and responsibility, they receive only $100 a month. The mayor who acts as president or chairman of the council and must watch over all departments and the administration of them, receives $1500 dollars of $125 a month. He, too, works long hours and has little time for outside activity.

Plan Further Action

It is the general opinion of the young men who are attempting to remedy this condition that it has existed too long, and that something should be done about it. The matter will be discussed further at the general meeting of the association June 17, at which time members will be informed of the action of their board of directors and the question will be thrown open for discussion. It is the plan of the board of directors to obtain a hundred per cent endorsement of the resolution, from the members and then begin a campaign to have proper legislation enacted to extend the term to four years and increase the salaries, if the idea meets with general approval.

Members of the board of directors learned a great many things about the duties of the city fathers during their investigation and discussion, and are of the united opinion that their idea, which they openly admit has been talked about before, should become a project toward better city government and general advancement in the community.

Those present at the meeting included Fred Z. Hetzel, president; Leslie L. Helmer, past president; James Reinhart, secretary; George Werkmeister, treasurer; Leo P. Brown, vice-president; Captain Randolph Millholland, United States Commissioner James Alfred Avirett, F. Allan Weatherholt, Thomas B. Finan, Jr. and James McAlpine.

ing a crisis which far outshadowed the Civil War.

Landon himself said people everywhere should unite behind Wendell Willkie, not as a Republican primarily, but as an outstanding — a great — American who would make a truly great president."

Stephen Douglas, he said, was a "great Democrat" and it was fitting that his grandson should support a "great American."

There was a growing indication that a majority of Maryland's G. O. P. national convention delegation would be on the Willkie bandwagon after the pledged first-ballot vote for Thomas E. Dewey.

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that former Gov. Harry W. Nice, nominal head of the delegation, would be the deciding factor in the switch-over, and it was known that at least two of his closest advisers and party leaders were working actively to win him around.

Switzerland Not

Rome and Bern, had been guarded on both sides by mere token troop formations.

It was learned tonight that the army command now has issued orders applying frontier restrictions keeping all non-resident civilians and foreigners out of the zone near the Italian border.

Informed sources said Italy's entrance into the war had in no way changed Switzerland's position as of last night, when virtually all foreign sources seemed to think the country was in greater danger of invasion than ever before.

Concentration of German troops remained in the Black Forest across the border. Only the German high command knew why they were there.

The famous French Orient express failed to pass through the Simplon tunnel at the frontier tonight. It has been the only through passenger train from Italy recently.

Italy's Airforce May Prove To Be Principal Weapon

Bombers Said To Be Capable of Round Trip to London

By DEVON FRANCIS

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Mussolini of the effectiveness of Italy's air force against the Allies will lie in the use which Premier Mussolini makes of his 6,000 to 8,000 combat airplanes, some of them designed for bombing missions as far away as London.

Next to Germany, Italy probably has the most highly trained air force in Europe. Mussolini's military fliers number no less than 18,000.

It will be contrary to the often publicized Italian military strategy if, tomorrow, Italian planes do not make mass attacks on "strategic objectives" coupled with assaults by medium-weight bombers on French troops massed on the Italian border.

Mussolini may also strike with air power at auxiliary units of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

Italian startegy, as set forth in the writings of the nation's military experts, is predicted on the establishment of immediate air superiority, heavy bombing attacks and the use of fast strafing planes to demoralize and disperse enemy ground troops.

The Fascist editor Virginio Gayda last year disclosed that the air force was grouped in squadrons of 400 bombing and pursuit planes which could "reach any point of the Mediterranean and Europe up to London, dump their bombs and return to their bases for new loads."

LaFollette Asks Tax upon Profits From War Supplies

Senator Says He Will Soon Introduce New Revenue Bill

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—Mid reports that Republican senators would support efforts to tax excess profits from the manufacturer of war supplies, Senator La Follette (Prog.-Wis) said that he was preparing such legislation.

La Follette told reporters that he had asked the treasury for information concerning the amount of revenue that might be raised by varying percentages of taxes. If he received it in time, he said, he would submit it to the Senate Finance Committee when it takes up the administration's $1,044,000,000 defense tax bill approved by the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

The House is expected to pass the measure this week. It will go then to the Senate committee.

Study Excess Profits

In approving the bill, the House committee ordered a study of excess profits taxation with a view to enactment of restrictive legislation at the next session of Congress. It said in a statement that there should not be an opportunitw for the creation of new war millionaires, or the further substantial enrichment of already wealthy persons because of the rearmament program."

La Follette said he did not see what objection a business concern could have, if it appears that it is going to make an unusual profit from a defense contract, to turning back at least a portion that profit to the government."

Senate Republicans were understood to have agreed to back any "reasonable" proposals to return to the government a share of abnormal profits by concerns filling contracts for airplanes, machine tools, and other armament equipment needed for the defense program.

The La Follette proposal encountered opposition, however, from Senator Harrison (D-Miss), chairman of the Finance Committee. Senator George (D-Ga) another committee member, and Senator Adams (D-Colo.).

"We are not in war yet and I see no need for a 'war profits' tax now," Harrison said.

Adams said he was opposed to levying any additional taxes on business, above one per cent corporation impost and the ten per cent" "supertax" proposed in the House bill for both individual and corporation incomes.

Final Action Soon

Harrison said he expected the finance committee would hold brief hearings on the tax bill, and predicted that final Senate action could be obtained in time for congressional adjournment June 22, if no major controversies developed.

As approved by the House committee, the emergency measure would increase by 2,050,000 the number of persons paying federal income taxes, largely through reductions in exemptions to $800 for single persons and $2,000 for married persons. Corporation taxes would be boosted 1 per cent, excise levies generally would be increased 10 per cent and surtaxes would be raised on individual incomes from $6,000 to $100,000.

Although the tax measure was the center of interest, Congress pushed ahead with other defense measures.

The Senate will have an unfinished business tomorrow a bill to lift present restrictions on the number of airplanes that may be acquired by the army, and to authorize the president to spend $132,000,000, half in cash and half in contract authority, for emergency defense purposes.

Once this measure is disposed of, the Senate is expected to act speedily on a $1,073,548,916 relief bill, appropriation $975,650,000 for the WPA for eight months.

Although few expected much controversy over their measure, Senator Byrd (D-Va.) asserted that an additional $508,000,080 appropriation was almost sure to be requested for relief after Congress returned in January.

Urging a ten per cent reduction in Federal expenditures outside those for defense purposes, Byrd proposed an immediate increase of $1,500,000,0000 in taxes, instead of the $1,004,000,000 contemplated in this tax bill.

The House is scheduled to debate tomorrow the enlarged army appropriations bill, carrying $1,500,024,000 in direct appropriations and $323,229,636 in contract authority. On Tuesday, the House is expected to take up a $1,312,000,000 emergency defense bill, carrying funds for the army, navy, FBI, Civil Aeronautics Authority and other agencies to speed up the military construction program.

War Turns Back Wheels of Progress

ROMANSHORN, Switzerland (AP)—War has taken four modern, oil-engined, streamlined lake steamers off Lake Konstanz and the ancient old sidewheelers, retired three years ago after a quarter century of operation, are back again in service.

The German navigation company, which operates two lines between Meersburg and Konstanz, both German, and Friedrichshafen, Germany, and Romanshorn, Switzerland, has taken its new ships out of service because of Germany's need of oil for war purposes.

U. S. Army Officials Not Worried Over Frontal Attacks by Hitler

But They Are Concerned Over Danger via Latin Americas

By MAX BOYD

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — Army officials aren't losing much sleep over the possibility of a frontal attack by Adolf Hitler upon the United States.

They aren't ruling it out, because nothing is being ruled out in a world where the fortunes of possible allies and enemies are shifting with breath-taking speed.

But the stated first concern of army planners is not to repel an invading army of millions but to prevent any foreign aggressor from obtaining a foothold in the Western Hemisphere from which he might array Latin American nations against this country, strike at the Panama Canal, prey on American shipping and even bomb American cities.

Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, the general staff's director of war plans, has put it this way:

"Under present conditions and in view of the present development of weapons, this hemisphere is safe from any aggression from abroad just as long as two conditions maintain:

"1. That the Panama Canal is open for the transit of the United States fleet, and

"2. That an aggressor from abroad has no bases in this hemisphere from which to operate."

Panama Canal Vulnerable

Acknowledging that one lucky bomb hit might put the Panama Canal out of operation and make it impossible for the navy to provide its present brand of protection in both the Atlantic and Pacific, officials are intent upon keeping any enemy aircraft carriers or land bases well over a thousand miles from the canal. At the same time they are striving to devise means of hastening completion of a new set of locks, to be built at a distance from the present ones. Under present plans, the new locks would not be ready for use until 1945 or 1946.

Greatly increased Nazi activity in South America is expected officially if Germany defeats Britain and France, and some authorities fear that such activity might eventually give the Nazis new world bases. These officials say that if any American republic feels itself unable to cope with such activity alone, the United States and the remainder of pan-America should provide assistance.

Would Not Permit Transfers

Another line of apprehension concerning the immediate future is indicated plainly by the pending administration - approved legislation against any non-American power transferring possessions in this hemisphere to another non-American power. Enforcement of such a policy would forestal any attempt by a victorious Germany to take over such potential bases as Newfoundand, the Banamas or Trinidad.

Military men agree that a frontal attack upon the United States would be a tremendous undertaking, even in the army's present state of acknowledged unpreparedness to fight a "real war."

It appears incredible to them that such a campaign would be given any consideration whatever unless the British fleet should fall into the hands of an enemy power and, in turn, be supported by another hostile fleet of formidable proportions.

Even then, as long as the Panama canal was kept open, the United States fleet might be able to seek out the enemy flotillas one at a time and defeat them.

Frontal Attack Unlikely

Everything considered, most experts agree, a frontal attack is unlikely for several years at least, by which time the United States is scheduled to have a greatly expanded navy, army and air force.

What the country must do now, in the words of General Strong, is to maintain a highly-mobile and well-equipped force "capable of acting instantly in the event of an emergency." Once an enemy establishes a base in the western hemisphere, he contends, it will take long and costly operations to dislodge him.

"We must be prepared," the army planner says, "to out-blitz the blitzkrieg."

Complete Movie Is Produced by W. Va. High School

OAKVALE, W. Va., June 10. (AP)—Upon a home-size canvas screen graduation night was thrown the animated fruits of three months work before and behind the cameras by Oakvale high school seniors--one of the first complete movies ever produced by any West Virginia high school.

Since early March Senior English students have been mixing continuity and scenarios with their metaphors and essays. The science class has been concerned primarily with safety research—all dedicated to the common end of "Life's Too Short."

Oakvale was one of ten schools in the entire country chosen by Dr. Edgar Dale of Ohio State university, for an experiment in visual safety education. Funds were made available by the Highway Educational board.

One other West Virginia school was included in the experiment, Roosevelt Elementary school at Parkersburg.

The Tenor Fails With One Blonde

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP)—They say that John Carter, dark, handsome and romantic Metropolitan opera tenor, sets women's hearts aflutter. But he failed with one Pueblo blonde.

"Oh come," said Carter in his most persuasive manner as he tried to get the blonde to sit on a grand piano and pose with him for a picture. "Don't you want to talk to me? Won't you take my hand? Won't you have your picture taken?"

"No, I won't!" said the young lady. "Leave me alone. Boo-hoo-hoo."

So Carter posed with an unprotesting harp.

And the three-year-old blonde nestled in her mother's arms.

Hardly Call It A Public Demand

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Mayor Walter Chandler was chagrined when he found the only picture postcards of City Hall on sale were some showing a 1910 model car parked in front. "People might think Memphis is an unprogressive city," he complained.

A postcard salesman called at City Hall. The mayor's face was redder than ever afterwards.

The salesman said the mayor was about the only customer who wanted a postcard of City Hall, so it wasn't worth printing up a batch of new ones.

54,474 Individual Income Tax Returns Filed in W. Va.

WASHINGTON, June 10. (AP)—The treasury has announced that 54,474 individual income tax returns were filed in West Virginia in 1939.

There were 6,250,793 individual returns from all states during that year, the treasury said, compared with 6,398,541 in 1938. In making public the number of returns by states, counties, cities and towns with a population of 1,000 or more, the treasury did not disclose the amount of tax paid.

The ommission of certain localities of 1,000 population or larger, the treasury said, was attributable to the fact that an individual might file his return in the collection district of which he was a resident, or in which his principal place of business was located.

In West Virginia, the largest number of returns came from Kanawha county, which had 10,323 while second was the city of Charleston with 7,559.

Ohio county was third with 5,710, Wheeling had 5,293, Cabell county 4,238 and Huntingdon 4,110.

Other returns by counties and municipalities included:

Berkeley county 656, Martinsburg 610.

Grant county 41, Petersburg 33.

Hampshire county 81, Romney 64, Springfield 4.

Hardy county 43.

Mineral county 408, Keyser 227, Piedmont 88, Ridgeley 64.

Morgan county 74, Berkeley Springs 49.

Fish Saved from Drowning and Wake Is Held for a Living Man

By GLADWIN HILL

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Ever hear the one about the fisherman who saved a fish from drowning?

Or the safety signs that had to be taken down because they were so dangerous?

Well, if you can untangle yourself from those communiques for a minute, you'll find the curioddities right here in your Goofy Gazette, the dizzy digest of last week's cockeyed occurrences.

The humane fisherman was a San Francisco man named John Woo. Mr. Woo caught a smelt. The smelt was wearing, for an unannounced reason, a rubber band around its neck. Its breath was coming in short pants and its eyes were bulging something fierce.

Mr. Woo removed the rubber band, put the smelt back in the water, and the smelt swam happily away, minus its pants.

Then there was another fisherman down in Manteo, N. C., who tugged and tugged and finally pulled in a 250-pound bear, dead as a dead 250-pound bear. They're still trying to figure out how he got on the hook.

And speaking of bears, the Navajo Indians' grand council meeting in Gallup, N. M., refused to abolish the ancient belief that bears are just the reincarnation of mothers-in-law.

The California state police decided to abolish roadside safety dummies because they startled too many motorists into running into real people . . . and the sheriff of Sparta, N. C., discovered a still operating on his own farm.

Runs, hit and errors: . . . after some Pittsburg, Calif., people held a three-hour wake, they discovered the deceased was alive and kicking a few blocks away . . . and some Roanoke, Va., people, answering a questionnaire query about their "marital state," replied: "Virginia."

Political news: . . . The Democratic candidate for governor of North Carolina made his initial campaign speech at the opening of his small son's lemonade stand . . . and the daughter of Socialist Presidential Candidate Norman Thomas announced she would spend her honeymoon campaigning for him.

And a 290-pound Oklahoma City man ran for county weigher on the slogan: "The only man who can balance the scales."

About thirty-eight percent of the population of France ordinarily engage in agriculture.

LaFollette Asks Tax upon Profits From War Supplies

Senator Says He Will Soon Introduce New Revenue Bill

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—Mid reports that Republican senators would support efforts to tax excess profits from the manufacturer of war supplies, Senator La Follette (Prog.-Wis) said that he was preparing such legislation.

La Follette told reporters that he had asked the treasury for information concerning the amount of revenue that might be raised by varying percentages of taxes. If he received it in time, he said, he would submit it to the Senate Finance Committee when it takes up the administration's $1,044,000,000 defense tax bill approved by the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

The House is expected to pass the measure this week. It will go then to the Senate committee.

Study Excess Profits

In approving the bill, the House committee ordered a study of excess profits taxation with a view to enactment of restrictive legislation in the next session of Congress. It said in a statement that there should not be an opportunitw for the creation of new war millionaires, or the further substantial enrichment of already wealthy persons because of the rearmament program."

La Follette said he did not see what objection a business concern could have, if it appears that it is going to make an unusual profit from a defense contract, to turning back at least a portion that profit to the government."

Senate Republicans were understood to have agreed to back any "reasonable" proposals to return to the government a share of abnormal profits by concerns filling contracts for airplanes, machine tools, and other armament equipment needed for the defense program.

The La Follette proposal encountered opposition, however, from Senator Harrison (D-Miss, chairman of the Finance Committee. Senator George (D-Ga) another committee member, and Senator Adams (D-Colo.)

"We are not in war yet and I see no need for a 'war profits' tax now," Harrison said.

Adams said he was opposed to applying any additional taxes on business, above one per cent corporation impost and the ten per cent "supertax" proposed in the house bill for both individual and corporation incomes.

Final Action Soon

Harrison said he expected the finance committee would hold brief hearings on the tax bill, and predicted that final Senate action could be obtained in time for congressional adjournment June 22, if no major controversies developed.

As approved by the House committee, the emergency measure would increase by 2,050,000 the number of persons paying federal income taxes, largely through reductions in exemptions to $800 for single persons and $2,000 for married persons. Corporation taxes would be boosted 1 per cent, excess levies generally would be increased 10 per cent and surtaxes would be raised on individual incomes from $6,000 to $100,000.

Although the tax measure was the center of interest, Congress pushed ahead with other defense measures. The Senate will have an unfinished business tomorrow a bill to suspend present restrictions on the number of airplanes that may been acquired by the army, and to authorize the president to spend $132,000,000 half in cash and half in contract authority, for emergency defense purposes.

Once this measure is disposed of, the Senate is expected to act speedily on a $1,073,548,916 relief bill, appropriation $975,650,000 for the WPA for eight months.

Although few expected much controversy over their measure, Senator Byrd (D-Va.) asserted that an additional $508,000,080 appropriation was almost sure to be requested for soon after Congress returned in January.

Urging a ten per cent reduction in federal expenditures outside those for defense purposes, Byrd predicted an immediate increase of $1,000,000,000 in taxes, instead of the $2,000,000,000 contemplated in this bill.

The House is scheduled to debate tomorrow the enlarged army appropriations bill, carrying $1,500,024,000 in direct appropriations and $29,636 in contract authority. On Tuesday, the House is expected to take up a $1,312,000,000 emergency defense bill, carrying funds for the army, navy, FBI, Civil Aeronautics Authority and other agencies to speed up the military production program.

U. S. Army Officials Not Worried Over Frontal Attacks by Hitler

By MAX BOYD

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP) — Army officials aren't losing much sleep over the possibility of a frontal attack by Adolf Hitler upon the United States.

They aren't ruling it out, because nothing is being ruled out in a world where the fortunes of possible allies and enemies are shifting with breath-taking speed.

But the stated first concern of army planners is not to repel an invading army of millions but to prevent any foreign aggressor from obtaining a foothold in the Western Hemisphere from which he might array Latin American nations against this country, strike at the Panama Canal, prey on American shipping and even bomb American cities.

Brig. Gen. George V. Strong, the general staff's director of war plans, has put it this way:

"Under present conditions and in view of the present development of weapons, this hemisphere is safe from any aggression from abroad just as long as two conditions maintain:

"1. That the Panama Canal is open for the transit of the United States fleet, and

"2. That an aggressor from abroad has no bases in this hemisphere from which to operate."

Panama Canal Vulnerable

Acknowledging that one lucky bomb hit might put the Panama Canal out of operation and make it impossible for the navy to provide its present brand of protection in both the Atlantic and Pacific, officials are intent upon keeping any enemy aircraft carriers or land bases well over a thousand miles from the canal. At the same time they are striving to devise means of hastening completion of a new set of locks, to be built at a distance from the present ones. Under present plans, the new locks would not be ready for use until 1945 or 1946.

Greatly increased Nazi activity in South America is expected officially if Germany defeats Britain and France, and some authorities fear that such activity might eventually give the Nazis new world bases. These officials say that if any American republic feels itself unable to cope with such activity alone, the United States and the remainder of pan-America should provide assistance.

Would Not Permit Transfers

Another line of apprehension concerning the immediate future is indicated plainly by the pending administration - approved legislation against any non-American power transferring possessions in this hemisphere to another non-American power. Enforcement of such a policy would forestal any attempt by a victorious Germany to take over such potential bases as Newfoundand, the Bahamas or Trinidad.

Military men agree that a frontal attack upon the United States would be a tremendous undertaking, even in the army's present state of acknowledged unpreparedness to fight a "real war."

It appears incredible to them that such a campaign would be given any consideration whatever unless the British flee should fall into the hands of an enemy power and, in turn, be supported by another hostile fleet of formidable proportions.

Even then, as long as the Panama canal was kept open, the United States fleet might be able to seek out the enemy flotillas one at a time and defeat them.

Frontal Attack Unlikely

Everything considered, most experts agree, a frontal attack is unlikely for several years at least, by which time the United States is scheduled to have a greatly expanded navy, army and air force.

What the country must do now, in the words of General Strong, is to maintain a highly-mobile and well-equipped force "capable of acting instantly in the event of an emergency." Once an enemy establishes a base in the western hemisphere, he contends, it will take long and costly operations to dislodge him.

"We must be prepared," the army planner says, "to out-blitz the blitzkrieg."

Complete Movie Is Produced by W. Va. High School

OAKVALE, W. Va., June 10. (AP)—Upon a home-size canvas screen graduation night was thrown the animated fruits of three months work before and behind the cameras by Oakvale high school seniors—one of the first complete movies ever produced by any West Virginia high school.

Since early March Senior English students have been mixing continuity and scenarios with their metaphors and essays. The science class has been concerned primarily with safety research—all dedicated to the common end of "Life's Too Short."

Oakvale was one of ten schools in the entire country chosen by Dr. Edgar Dale of Ohio State university, for an experiment in visual safety education. Funds were made available by the Highway Educational board.

One other West Virginia school was included in the experiment, Roosevelt Elementary school at Parkersburg.

The Tenor Fails With One Blonde

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP)—They say that John Carter, dark, handsome and romantic Metropolitan opera tenor, sets women's hearts aflutter. But he failed with one Pueblo blonde.

"Oh come," said Carter in his most persuasive manner as he tried to get the blonde to sit on a grand piano and pose with him for a picture. "Don't you want to talk to me? Won't you take my hand? Won't you have your picture taken?"

"No, I won't!" said the young lady. "Leave me alone. Boo-hoo-hoo."

So Carter posed with an unprotesting harp.

And the three-year-old blonde nestled in her mother's arms.

Blitzkrieg Means Lightning That Strikes in the Night

PROPAGANDA

Advance agents of army drop from skies to take strategic points — or are landed in transport planes if airports have been won. Dutch charged that sky soldiers wore Dutch army uniforms.

BOMBERS

AIR SOLDIERS

Timed with traditional German precision, land forces strike in motorized columns. These roar ahead swiftly to catch defenders by surprise, to reinforce the advance agents, and to mop up opposition. While Nazi air soldiers were battling far in the interior of Holland, the land forces tried to clear a way to them by striking across the border at various points. To be successful, these forces have to break through fortified lines.

WHEELED BATTALIONS

Zero hour, between midnight and dawn, brings out swarms of bombers which try to paralyze opposition by striking at communication lines. A major objective during the first hours of the invasion of Holland was the Rotterdam airport. Usually the defense has been weakened by activities of Nazi agents or sympathizers. Excuse for action against lowlands was that the Allies had planned to attack Germany through them.

Big Town Series Will Be Resumed On Radio Chain

Associated Press Radio Editor

NEW YORK, June 10—After a period of dramatic broadcasts of different types of plays, Edward G. Robinson is returning to his Big Town series on the WABC-CBS network at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening. He is doing so as the request of the listeners who by their letters indicated they much preferred his Steve Wilson roles. The particular story will be "We Americans," a patriotic script.

National Guardsmen Will Study New War Methods

Charleston, W. Va., June 10. (AP)—West Virginia national guardsmen going with the second field army into maneuvers in August will see action in a "lightning war," the knock-out kind of battle now stunning Europe.

Problems unknown before "blitzkrieg" shelled itself the military vernacular are under study of the officers who will head approximately 2,300 West Virginians into the maneuvers as part of the 38th division.

In the same army games—simulating all the conditions of actual warfare, except for the shot and shell—will be 65,000 guardsmen from seven states, plus units of the regular army.

Officers at second army headquarters in Chicago say that it will be the largest troop concentration in the middle west since the World war.

Mock war will be fought over 500 square miles of hilly Wisconsin country, about seventy miles northwest of Milwaukee, from August 11 until August 31.

Lessons taught by the war in Europe will be translated into American terms, and Lieut. General Stanley H. Ford and his staff have announced they will stress speed and mobility to a degree unprecedented in the Unites States.

Chassisless Cars, Better Gasoline, Seen by Expert

Puncture Proof Tires Also Coming, David Beecroft Says

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., June 10 (AP)—Chassisless automobiles with smaller engines and better gasoline mileage, air-conditioning and puncture-proof tires were envisioned for the future tonight by David Beecroft of the Bendix Aviation Corporation.

But there will be no increases in speed capacities, Beecroft told the Society of Automotive Engineers at the thirty-fifth anniversary banquet opening the annual summer meeting.

"Possible speeds of today are quite beyond the mental alertness and responsiveness of even good drivers," he declared.

As for highways, instead of new ones there will be modernized roads made into express highways and bypasses around cities, he forecast.

Will Discuss Defense

As Beecroft spoke to the SAE's "big family party," arrangements were pronounced complete for the introduction of national defense discussions into the convention, which had taken for its theme, "the next thirty-five years."

The program for tomorrow has been changed to permit five officers of the U. S. army to tell what the government may expect from the engineering profession when the preparedness program gets under way. Lieut. Col. Edward MacMorland of the clearance committee of the army and navy munitions board will speak tomorrow night at a banquet.

Four other officers will accompany him to handle round table discussion on defense matters.

Army Has Exhibit

The U. S. Army Ordnance Division has set up an exhibit for delegates which includes a light tank, scout car, half track truck, 37 mm. anti-tank gun, 37 mm. anti-aircraft gun, .50 caliber anti-aircraft machine gun and .30 caliber semi-automatic rifle.

Beecroft said little of the future for aviation, but pointed out that newer fuel developments have made possible power increases of seventy per cent with the same piston displacement.

"The sun in motion pictures" was discussed by Dr. Robert R. McMath of the McMath-Hulbert Observatory and Motors Metal Manufacturing Company.

One Slip Too Many

WELCH, W. Va. (AP)—Constable M. M. Day, Jr., picked up a hitch hiker who, after learning Day married, reached into his suitcase and said, "Here, give this to your wife." It was a silk slip.

"Where did you get it?" asked Day.

"Oh, I snitched it at a store in Welch. It's easy. They never watch you closely," was the reply.

Whereupon Day took charge. In the suitcase, the constable said, were articles valued at $36.

One Month of Nazi Blitzkrieg Goes Against Allies

By The Associated Press

One month ago Adolf Hitler unleashed his blitzkrieg upon the low countries and the Allies. Since then he has:

1. Crushed Holland and forced her queen, Wilhelmina, to flee.
2. Overrun Belgium and accepted the surrender of her king, Leopold III.
3. Conquered the little duchy of Luxembourg with little effort and chased the ruler, Grand Duchess Charlotte, into France.
4. Seized the English channel ports from Abbeville north to Holland.
5. Launched the battle of France in a titanic struggle to capture Paris and destroy the Franch armies.
6. Apparently forced Norway to capitulate.

Smith Reports Drive To Identify Labor with 'Fifth Column' Group

Van Zandt and Thomas Demand FDR Oust Communists from Jobs

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Edwin S. Smith, national labor board member, asserted here that a "drive to identify American labor with a 'fifth column'" had been instituted by "those persons in and out of government who have vigorously opposed all forms of progressive legislation for the protection of labor."

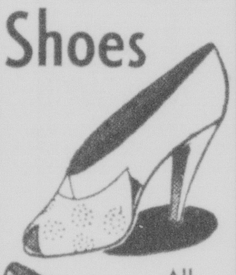

He spoke before the national conference on constitutional liberties. Almost simultaneously two Republican members of Congress—Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania, and Thomas of New Jersey—demanded that President Roosevelt discharge Communist and Nazis employed by the federal government.

Van Zandt issued a statement recalling that the Dies Committee had published a list of government employes which it said was affiliated with the American League for Peace and Democracy, termed by the committee a Communist front organization. "Since then," he said "Congress has been waiting hopefully for some action in the executive branch to check and discourage such Communist front activities in Washington. More than seven months having passed, I hold it urgent that this matter be presented now for the earnest attention of Congress and the nation."

The American Civil Liberties Union, meanwhile, called for the formation of small "vigilance committees" to act against "outbreaks of civil liberties violations and hysteria aimed at 'fifth columns, Trojan horses, Communists, German-American Bundists and others." Such committees, it said in a statement, were necessary to "combat the present case of jitters in the United States unparalleled since the World War."

Study of Early Travel by River Is Being Made

MALTA, O., June 10. (AP)—Commemoration of the halcyon days of travel by river steamboat is the object of a search now underway in West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Pennsylvania for a site for a river museum.

A committee was appointed at a meeting here this week to determine the spot for the museum, which would house pictures, and paintings of well-known river boats, along with such objects as bells of some of the packets, logs and other data pertaining to the old side and sternwheelers and the men and women who operated them.

The committee was designated by officers of the sons and daughters of pioneer rivermen, and includes such well known names as:

Liner Roosevelt Brings American Refugees to N. Y.

Seven Hundred Arrive from Various Countries in Europe

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Nosing her way down a rain-pelted bay, the United States liner President Roosevelt returned to the safe haven of their homeland approximately 700 American refugees fleeing the terror of Europe's modern warfare.

Delayed by fog for an hour as she reached Fire Island, the ship carried a majority of women and children who boarded the vessel last Sunday at Galway, Ireland, when she was ordered by the state department May 24.

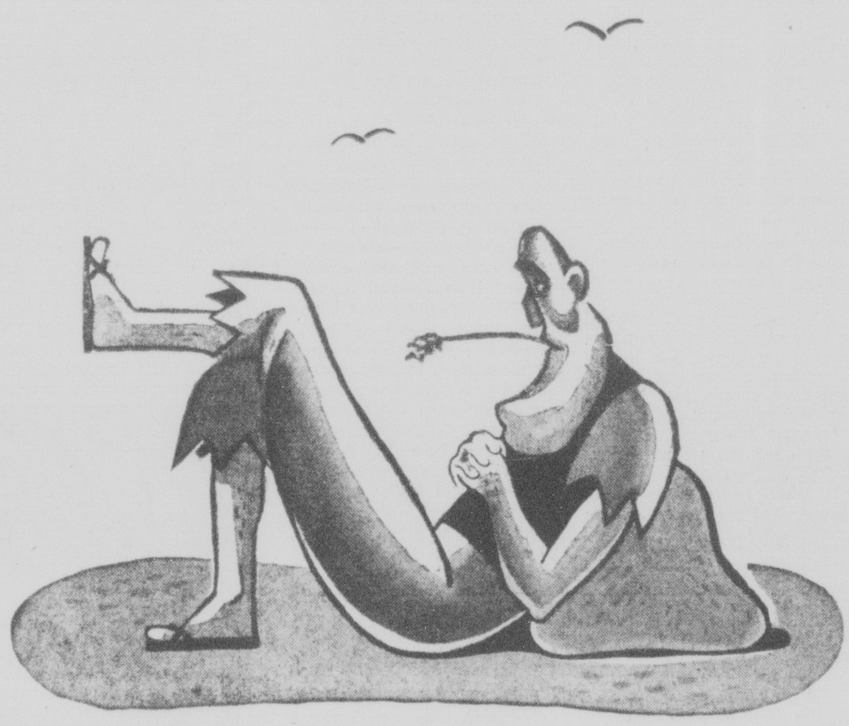

Making up the human cargo were Rhodes scholars, students who had been studying for the priesthood in Italy, relatives of consular officials and American business men who had been seeking contracts from the Allies.

A Red Cross ambulance, four nurses and nine other volunteers were on hand to aid those who might be without funds, and to speed children to the homes of relatives.

As the crowded ship nosed into the dock, the gay, light-hearted passengers crushed to the side of the vessel, shouting greetings to an estimated 800 friends, relatives and spectators on the pier.

Fifty alien refugees were among those aboard.

Excepting Hermits

HERMITS are people who think two's a crowd.

They live in caves or huts, wear long gray beards and eat everything from berries to nuts. They don't, as a rule, buy anything.

Self-respecting hermits spend most of their time meditating, contemplating and talking to themselves. Their minds are hermit-ically sealed to anything going on in the world. In fact, what really puts hermits in a class by themselves is that they don't care a hang about the news.

But for everyone excepting hermits, news is a vital necessity of everyday life. Since the day Eve told Adam about the apple, news has been the leading topic of conversation all day long.

And today the craving for the news is stronger than ever before . . . because never before has the individual's welfare and happiness been so intimately affected by events at home and abroad.

That's why your daily newspapers draw a larger and more intensely interested audience . . . day after day . . . than any other medium. And that, in turn, is the fundamental reason why your advertising in newspapers inevitably hits harder, works faster and brings more immediate results.

Blitzkrieg Means Lightning That Strikes in the Night

PROPAGANDA

Advance agents of army drop from skies to take strategic points — or are landed in transport planes if airports have been won. Dutch charged that sky soldiers wore Dutch army uniforms.

BOMBERS

AIR SOLDIERS

Timed with traditional German precision, land forces strike in motorized columns. These roar ahead swiftly to catch defenders by surprise, to reinforce the advance agents, and to mop up opposition. While Nazi air soldiers were battling far in the interior of Holland, the land forces tried to clear a way to them by striking across the border at various points. To be successful, these forces have to break through fortified lines.

WHEELED BATTALIONS

Zero hour, between midnight and dawn, brings out swarms of bombers which try to paralyze opposition by striking at communication lines. A major objective during the first hours of the invasion of Holland was the Rotterdam airport. Usually the defense has been weakened by activities of Nazi agents or sympathizers. Excuse for action against lowlands was that the Allies had planned to attack Germany through them.

National Guardsmen Will Study New War Methods

Charleston, W. Va., June 10. (AP)—West Virginia national guardsmen going with the second field army into maneuvers in August will see action in a "lightning war," the knock-out kind of battle now stunning Europe.

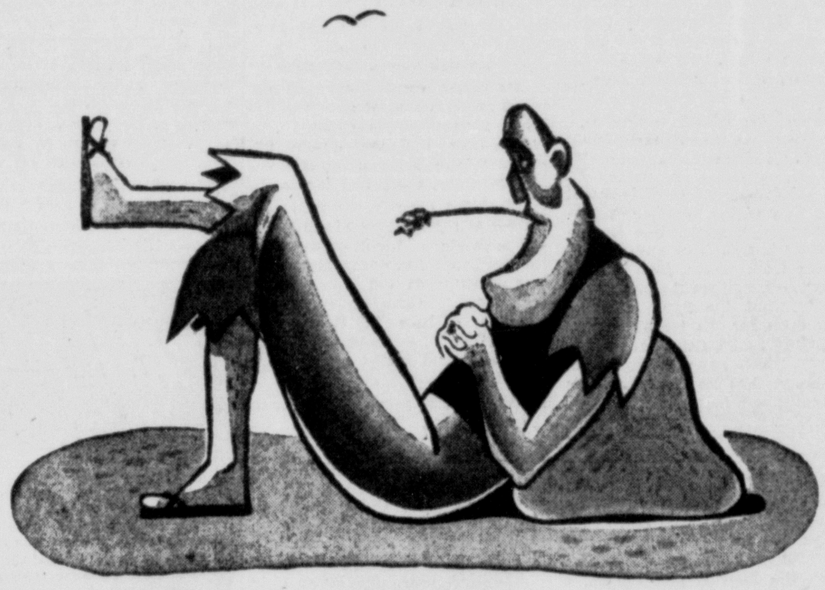

Problems unknown before "blitzkrieg" shelled itself the military vernacular are under study of the officers who will head approximately 2,300 West Virginians into the maneuvers as part of the 38th division.

In the same army games—simulating all the conditions of actual warfare, except for the shot and shell—will be 65,000 guardsmen from seven states, plus units of the regular army.

Officers at second army headquarters in Chicago say that it will be the largest troop concentration in the middle west since the World war.

Mock war will be fought over 500 square miles of hilly Wisconsin country, about seventy miles northwest of Milwaukee, from August 11 until August 31.

Lessons taught by the war in Europe will be translated into American terms, and Lieut. General Stanley H. Ford and his staff have announced they will stress speed and mobility to a degree unprecedented in the Unites States.

Excepting Hermits

HERMITS are people who think two's a crowd.

They live in caves or huts, wear long gray beards and eat everything from berries to nuts. They don't, as a rule, buy anything.

Self-respecting hermits spend most of their time meditating, contemplating and talking to themselves. Their minds are hermit-ically sealed to anything going on in the world. In fact, what really puts hermits in a class by themselves is that they don't care a hang about the news.

But for everyone excepting hermits, news is a vital necessity of everyday life. Since the day Eve told Adam about the apple, news has been the leading topic of conversation all day long.

And today the craving for the news is stronger than ever before . . . because never before has the individual's welfare and happiness been so intimately affected by events at home and abroad.

That's why your daily newspapers draw a larger and more intensely interested audience . . . day after day . . . than any other medium. And that, in turn, is the fundamental reason why your advertising in newspapers inevitably hits harder, works faster and brings more immediate results.

Commencement Speaker Expresses Faith in Democracy

Meyersdale To Observe Flag Day on Friday

Celebration Is Sponsored by American Legion and V. F. W.

MEYERSDALE, Pa., June 10 — Preparations are under way for the proper celebration of Flag Day on Friday. The event is sponsored by Kelly Post of the American Legion and Tressler Post Veterans of Foreign Wars and their auxiliaries, with other patriotic and civic societies.

There will be a parade of pupils of the public schools and of Sunday school pupils and other organizations of the town. Music will be furnished by the American Legion Community Band and the High School Band. Every business place and every home in town is urged to display an American flag, no matter how small.

A fine program of music and speaking is planned to take place at the band pavilion in Monument Square at the close of the parade. Prominent speakers will be present to present the issues of the times and the upholding of pure and unadulterated Americanism.

Drama Presented

There was a large audience in the Church of the Brethren at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when a drama, "Drunk Drivers", was presented by Judge and Mrs. M. Somers, of LaVerne, Calif., under the sponsorship of the Federated Christian Women and the W. C. T. U. organizations of Meyersdale.

Keyser Negro Pleads Guilty To Indictment

Will Be Sentenced Today for Criminally Assaulting Teacher

KEYSER, W. Va., June 10 — Against his counsel's advice, Paul Tross, 41-year-old Keyser negro, at a special session of circuit court here today entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging criminal assault upon Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins.

Tross entered the plea after a ten-minute private conference with Attorneys Lester Reynolds and Harry R. Taylor, appointed to represent him, shortly after 1:30 this afternoon. When Judge Robert McV. Drane asked the negro's counsel if they had advised Tross to enter the plea of guilty, Reynolds replied they had not.

Judge Drane, reluctant to accept the plea, repeatedly asked the negro if he realized the consequences of pleading guilty to the indictment. Tross mumblingly indicated that he did.

"You are ready to enter the plea with the full and thorough understanding that you may be hung?" the judge insisted.

Although a tense hush had fallen over the crowded courtroom, the husky negro's reply was unintelligible eight feet away. He apparently replied in the affirmative, muttering something about "mercy."

Confers with Attorneys

At this point Judge Drane took time out to confer with Tross' counsel and Prosecuting Attorney Vernon E. Rankin and Attorney Emory L. Tyler, associate prosecutor in the case.

Returning to the bench ten minutes later, the judge addressed the negro:

"I ask you once more if you realize you can be hung if you want your plea of guilty to stand?"

Tross, whom Judge Drane had told to stand, replied that he did.

"All right, I'll accept the plea," the judge said, ending one of the tensest periods in recent years in the high-windowed courtroom.

Tross was remanded to jail to await sentence tomorrow. Tross can be sentenced to life imprisonment or to death by hanging.

Defense attorneys this morning fought on technicalities at every turn, asking continuation of the case until the next regular term of court. This motion was overruled.

Also overruled was a petition for a change of venue.

Said Judge Drane: "The court of its own motion would change the venue of this trial from one county to another," if he thought it impossible for the accused to be given a fair trial. "Every man who comes into this court house shall get a fair and honest trial.

"This court is not swayed by feelings of his own—nor is he swayed by the feelings of the community."

Criticizes Newspapers

The judge then criticized the newspapers for playing up rumors of alleged intended mob violence. (Extracts from two Keyser papers had been read by Reynolds when petitioning for a change of venue, the attorney claiming the stories indicated undue feeling in the community.)

The papers, Judge Drane continued, have been responsible for "a lot of undue publicity in this matter. I am rather inclined to condemn the newspapers in the publishing of these headlines" crying violence. "I never thought there was occasion for alarm. The fact that there has been no violence bears me out."

When the court opened this morning the judge said only those who could find seats would be allowed in the courtroom. He said he would tolerate "no disorder, no indications of feeling of any character and no outbursts." The crowd, cramming every bench, was orderly.

Petit jurors reported, but no jury was impaneled, the morning being occupied with the arguing of technicalities. After the noon recess, court reconvened at one this afternoon, and Tross entered his plea of guilty little more than a half hour afterward.

After accepting Tross' plea, Judge Drane dismissed the jurymen.

The indictment returned against Tross by a special grand jury Thursday charges the negro with criminally assaulting Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins, Piedmont school teacher, while she was asleep in her Main street apartment here early on the morning of Sunday, June 2. Tross, an employe of Dr. W. J. Koelz, dentist, owner of the apartment in which Miss Stebbins' apartment is located, was said to have had a key to the front door of the building.

Miss Stebbins, a patient at Potomac Valley hospital, was said to be "improved."

Graduates of State Teachers Hear Benjamin

Maryland Educator Believes Democracy Will Win over Autocracy

FROSTBURG, June 10—Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of the school of education, University of Maryland, who delivered the address to the graduates at the thirty-seventh annual commencement of State Teachers College this morning, expressed optimism in the outcome of the present struggle between Autocracy and Democracy. He said in part:

"Like the seeker after the wealth of the Indies in the old Spanish proverb, he who would find democracy, must carry democracy with him. This is merely to repeat what every man who would defend or extend the principles of democracy successfully must come to know. Somewhere in the heat and dust of the arena he must lift his eyes above the details of the conflict and envisage clearly the thing for which he is fighting, or he may wake up and find that he has nothing left for which to fight. Denied this vision he sinks to the level of one who quarrels over tools he does not know how to use. Granted this vision he sees that he is fighting for a thing of the spirit which transends its tools to give them meaning and power.

Solid Foundation

"The democratic spirit does not originate in a political system or a particular pattern of social privilege. It does not emerge from a ballot box or a bill of rights. It is not a creature of courts and congresses. It does not spring full-panoplied from the folds of a national banner. It comes instead from the hearts of millions of men who are willing to suffer something of inconvenience or weariness, something of hunger or pain, that the other fellow's burden of those ills may thereby be somewhat lightened.

"The democratic spirit seems to some men of today to be confronting dangers so overwhelmingly powerful that it can hardly hope to prevail against them; it has confronted many such dangers in the past. It may seem today to be facing a blackly forbidding future; it has always faced such a future. The oldest thing about democracy is its ancient tradition of being new and young, but the secret thing about it is its solid foundation on a characteristic of behavior which came to the world with humanity and will never leave this world until the last man dies childless."

O'Conor Presents Diplomas

Governor O'Conor, who presented the diplomas, stated in his greetings to the class, that the future success of the public educational system will depend upon the wisdom of boards of education, faculty leaders and teachers who instruct the children in democratic ideals in these difficult times. He warned of subversive elements who are trying to tear down our democracy and stated that school teachers and other patriotic citizens should work just as hard to build it up.

The program was as follows: Emperor Waltz and Processional Triumphal March, college orchestra; America, audience; prayer, the Rev. Henry D. Little, D. D.; Tambourine from "Cephale and Procris", Maryland Singers, under direction of Prof. Maurice Matteson; address, Dr. Benjamin; Chorus of Harvesters, Maryland Singers; Conferring of Degrees, President J. L. Dunkle; awarding of diplomas, Governor O'Conor; piano solo with orchestra, Miss Mary Frances Heckler; State Teachers College song, the college, and recessional, Soldiers' Chorus, college orchestra.

Grantsville High School Class Attends Baccalaureate Service

Auditorium Is Filled for Annual Commencement Sermon

GRANTSVILLE, June 10 — Every available seat in the school auditorium was filled at the baccalaureate services held Sunday morning for the graduating class of 1940. The seniors made a fine appearance as they marched down the aisle, the girls attractively attired in white caps and gowns and the boys in dark blue suits.

The Rev. A. C. Curran, pastor of the Bittinger Lutheran church, delivered the sermon and made an interesting address. The theme of his talk was "Fear God—Keep His Commandments, For This is the Whole Duty of Man."

The Rev. Alvin J. Forry, pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed church, gave the scripture reading and offered prayer. Music was furnished by the senior class, with Mrs. Evangeline Glenn, instructor of music, at the piano. The Rev. D. R. Carder, pastor of the Methodist church, pronounced the benediction. Several members of the junior class served as ushers.

Game Warden Meets

The non-salaried game wardens of Garrett county met at the Railey Stone Tavern, at Deep Creek Lake, for the purpose of organizing. Officers elected were: Wiley Welling, Mt. Lake Park, president; Raymond Houck, Oakland, vice president; Daniel W. Hershberger, Grantsville, secretary. Following the election of officers, the group decided to adopt the by-laws of the Allegany County Game Wardens' Association. The purpose of the organization is to furnish adequate protection to fish and game in accordance with the conservation laws of Maryland and to instill the idea of more protection in the minds of all citizens.

The warens of Allegany county, who organized some time ago, were the originators of the idea and the plan was found to be so successful that several other counties in the state have since followed with a similar organization.

Meyersdale To Observe Flag Day on Friday

Celebration Is Sponsored by American Legion and V. F. W.

MEYERSDALE, Pa., June 10 — Preparations are under way for the proper celebration of Flag Day on Friday. The event is sponsored by Elly Post of the American Legion and Tressler Post Veterans of Foreign Wars and their auxiliaries, with other patriotic and civic societies.

There will be a parade of pupils of the public schools and of Sunday school pupils and other organizations of the town. Music will be furnished by the American Legion Community Band and the High School Band. Every business place and every home in town is urged to display an American flag, no matter how small.

A fine program of music and speaking is planned to take place at the band pavilion in Monument Square at the close of the parade. Prominent speakers will be present to represent the issues of the times and the upholding of pure and unadulterated Americanism.

Drama Presented

There was a large audience in the Church of the Brethren at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the drama, "Drunk Drivers", was presented by Judge and Mrs. M. Somers, of LaVerne, Calif., under the sponsorship of the Federated Christian Women and the W. C. T. U. organizations of Meyersdale.

Keyser Negro Pleads Guilty To Indictment

Will Be Sentenced Today for Criminally Assaulting Teacher

KEYSER, W. Va., June 10 — Against his counsel's advice, Paul Tross, 41-year-old Keyser negro, at a special session of circuit court here today entered a plea of guilty to an indictment charging criminal assault upon Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins.

Tross entered the plea after a ten-minute private conference with Attorneys Lester Reynolds and Harry R. Taylor, appointed to represent him, shortly after 1:30 this afternoon. When Judge Robert McV. Drane asked the negro's counsel if they had advised Tross to enter the plea of guilty, Reynolds replied they had not.

Judge Drane, reluctant to accept the plea, repeatedly asked the negro if he realized the consequences of pleading guilty to the indictment. Tross mumblingly indicated that he did.

"You are ready to enter the plea with the full and thorough understanding that you may be hung?" the judge insisted.

Although a tense hush had fallen over the crowded courtroom, the husky negro's reply was unintelligible eight feet away. He apparently replied in the affirmative, muttering something about "mercy."

Confers with Attorneys

At this point Judge Drane took time out to confer with Tross' counsel and Prosecuting Attorney Vernon E. Rankin and Attorney Emory L. Tyler, associate prosecutor in the case.

Returning to the bench ten minutes later, the judge addressed the negro:

"I ask you once more if you realize you can be hung if you want your plea of guilty to stand?"

Tross, whom Judge Drane had told to stand, replied that he did.

"All right, I'll accept the plea," the judge said, ending one of the tensest periods in recent years in the high-windowed courtroom.

Tross was remanded to jail to await sentence tomorrow. Tross can be sentenced to life imprisonment or to death by hanging.

Defense attorneys this morning fought on technicalities at every turn, asking continuation of the case until the next regular term of court. This motion was overruled.

Also overruled was a petition for a change of venue.

Said Judge Drane: "The court of its own motion would change the venue of this trial from one county to another," if he thought it impossible for the accused to be given a fair trial. "Every man who comes into this court house shall get a fair and honest trial.

"This court is not swayed by feelings of his own—nor is he swayed by the feelings of the community."

Criticizes Newspapers

The judge then criticized the newspapers for playing up rumors of alleged intended mob violence. (Extracts from two Keyser papers had been read by Reynolds when petitioning for a change of venue, the attorney claiming the stories indicated undue feeling in the community.)

The papers, Judge Drane continued, have been responsible for "a lot of undue publicity in this matter. I am rather inclined to condemn the newspapers in the publishing of these headlines" crying violence, "I never thought there was occasion for alarm. The fact that there has been no violence bears me out."

When the court opened this morning the judge said only those who could find seats would be allowed in the courtroom. He said he would tolerate "no disorder, no indications of feeling of any character and no outbursts." The crowd, cramming every bench, was orderly.

Petit jurors reported, but no jury was impanelled, the morning being occupied with the arguing of technicalities. After the noon recess, court reconvened at one this afternoon, and Tross entered his plea of guilty little more than a half hour afterward.

After accepting Tross' plea, Judge Drane dismissed the jurymen.

The indictment returned against Tross by a special grand jury Thursday charges the negro with criminally assaulting Miss Mary Lynn Stebbins, Piedmont school teacher, while she was asleep in her Main street apartment here early on the morning of Sunday, June 2. Tross, an employe of Dr. W. J. Koelz, dentist, owner of the apartment in which Miss Stebbins' apartment is located, was said to have had a key to the front door of the building.

Miss Stebbins, a patient at Potomac Valley hospital, was said to be "improved."

Graduates of State Teachers Hear Benjamin

Maryland Educator Believes Democracy Will Win over Autocracy

FROSTBURG, June 10—Dr. Harold Benjamin, dean of the school of education, University of Maryland, who delivered the address to the graduates at the thirty-seventh annual commencement of State Teachers College this morning, expressed optimism in the outcome of the present struggle between Autocracy and Democracy. He said in part:

"Like the seeker after the wealth of the Indies in the old Spanish proverb, he who would find democracy, must carry democracy with him. This is merely to repeat what every man who would defend or extend the principles of democracy successfully must come to know. Somewhere in the heat and dust of the arena he must lift his eyes above the details of the conflict and envisage clearly the thing for which he is fighting, or he may wake up and find that he has nothing left for which to fight. Denied this vision he sinks to the level of one who quarrels over tools he does not know how to use. Granted this vision he sees that he is fighting for a thing of the spirit which transends its tools to give them meaning and power.

Solid Foundation

"The democratic spirit does not originate in a political system or a particular pattern of social privilege. It does not emerge from a ballot box or a bill of rights. It is not a creature of courts and congresses. It does not spring full-panoplied from the folds of a national banner. It comes instead from the hearts of millions of men who are willing to suffer something of inconvenience or weariness, something of hunger or pain, that the other fellow's burden of those ills may thereby be somewhat lightened.

"The democratic spirit seems to some men of today to be confronting dangers so overwhelmingly powerful that it an hardly hope to prevail against them; it has confronted many such dangers in the past. It may seem today to be facing a blackly forbidding future; it has always faced such a future. The oldest thing about democracy is its ancient tradition of being new and young, but the secret thing about it is its solid foundation on a characteristic of behavior which came to the world with humanity and will never leave this world until the last man dies childless."

O'Conor Presents Diplomas

Governor O'Conor, who presented the diplomas, stated in his greetings to the class, that the future success of the public educational system will depend upon the wisdom of boards of education, faculty leaders and teachers who instruct the children in democratic ideals in these difficult times. He warned of subversive elements who are trying to tear down our democracy and stated that school teachers and other patriotic citizens should work just as hard to build it up.

The program was as follows: Emperor Waltz and Processional Triumphal March, college orchestra; America, audience; prayer, the Rev. Henry D. Little, D. D.; Tambourine from "Cephale and Procris", Maryland Singers, under direction of Prof. Maurice Matteson; address, Dr. Benjamin; Chorus of Harvesters, Maryland Singers; Conferring of Degrees, President J. L. Dunkle; awarding of diplomas, Governor O'Conor; piano solo with orchestra, Miss Mary Frances Heckler; State Teachers College son, the college, and recessional, Soldiers' Chorus, college orchestra.

Grantsville High School Class Attends Baccalaureate Service

Auditorium Is Filled for Annual Commencement Sermon

GRANTSVILLE, June 10 — Every available seat in the school auditorium was filled at the baccalaureate services held Sunday morning for the graduating class of 1940. The seniors made a fine appearance as they marched down the aisle, the girls attractively attired in white caps and gowns and the boys in dark blue suits.

The Rev. A. C. Curran, pastor of the Bittinger Lutheran church, delivered the sermon and made an interesting address. The theme of his talk was "Fear God—Keep His Commandments, For This is the Whole Duty of Man."

The Rev. Alvin J. Forry, pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed church, gave the scripture reading and offered prayer. Music was furnished by the senior class, with Mrs. Evangeline Glenn, instructor of music, at the piano. The Rev. D. R. Carder, pastor of the Methodist church, pronounced the benediction. Several members of the junior class served as ushers.

Game Warden Meets

The non-salaried game wardens of Garrett county met at the Railey Stone Tavern, at Deep Creek Lake, for the purpose of organizing. Officers elected were: Wiley Welling, Mt. Lake Park, president; Raymond Houck, Oakland, vice president; Daniel W. Hershberger, Grantsville, secretary. Following the election of officers, the group decided to adopt the by-laws of the Allegany County Game Wardens' Association. The purpose of the organization is to furnish adequate protection to fish and game in accordance with the conservation laws of Maryland and to instill the idea of more protection in the minds of all citizens.

The warens of Allegany county, who organized some time ago, were the originators of the idea and the plan was found to be so successful that several other counties in the state have since followed with a similar organization.

Hearing on Abandoning Railroad To Be Heard June 12

Friendsville To Send Delegation To Washington

Coal Company and Others Oppose Move To Abandon Branch Line

FRIENDSVILLE, June 10—A continuation of the hearing held April 11, in Cumberland, before examiner Lyle of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the petition of the B. & O. railroad for abandonment of its branch line running from Confluence, Pa., to Kendall, has been called for June 12 at 10 a. m. before the Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D. C.

Hundreds of protests by individuals and business interests have been filed with Joseph Sherbow, peoples council for the state of Maryland imploring him to intercede in their behalf before the commission. The governor of Maryland, likewise, has received numerous protests coming from this section. He has written Mr. Sherbow directing him to appear before the commission for the purpose of protecting the interests of the people directly affected by the proposed move for the abandonment of the rail service.

The mayor and town council of Friendsville are sending Senator Clifford Friend, Q. A. Murphy and Merle Frantz as representatives to appear before the commission for the purpose of showing how this move will affect the welfare and progress of this community.

The First National Bank, Friendsville is sending one of its directors, W. J. Glenn, to present its case before the commission. He will, likewise, presen a brief for the Friendsville schools which will be adversely affected by the abandonment of the rail service and the consequent closing of the McCullough mine.

The Garrett County Commissioners have also protested the move to abandon the rail service because of the affect it will have on property values in this section. It is reliably reported that they will be represented by counsel at the hearing.

The McCullough Coal Company will be represented by their attorneys, Miles and O'Brien, Baltimore. Since the first hearing the engineering firm of Day and Zimmerman, Philadelphia, Pa., make an extensive study of coal company property. Their report will figure prominently in the new testimony to be presented by the company.

Buy New Hose

At a special meeting of the town council called to order by vice-president Donald Chisholm, an order was passed to purchase for the Friendsville Volunteer Fire Company 400 feet two and one-half inch hose costing approximately $400. According to Q. A. Murphy, member of the company, this extra hose is necessary to take care of a section of town not provided with fire plugs. Numerous tax-payers and members of the fire company were present at this meeting for the purpose of urging the council to adopt this measure.

Ladies Aid Meets

Mrs. Orval Rush was hostess to members of the Methodist Ladies' Aid and their husbands Thursday night at which time there was also a house warming party given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Rush, who received many useful gifts. Mrs. Iva Rush conducted the business and devotional meeting, and Mrs. Howard Skidmore directed the social activities.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Holman, Mrs. Q. A. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Friend, Shirley and Edward Friend, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Black, Mrs. Edward Dixon, Mrs. Theodore Wheeler, Mrs. Basil Garletts, Miss Eileen Frazee, Mrs. John Dye, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Friend, Howard Skidmore, Mrs. James Friend, Mrs. Minnie Hook and son Charles, Mrs. R. L. Greynolds, Mrs. Belcher, Mrs. Hattie Casteel, and Mrs. Ryan.

The next meeting of the ladies aid will meet at the home of Mrs. Theodore Wheeler Thursday July 11.

Seniors Hear Sprague

Seniors of Oakland High school last night heard the Rev. Minor Sprague, Methodist pastor, deliver the sermon to the graduates at the Methodist church, at 7:30. Practically the entire graduating class of 103 were present.

The junior-sophomore chorus sang "Praise Ye the Father" and led procession of seniors into the auditorium of the church. A special chorus of ten seniors, Dixie Lee McNemar, Roseanna White, Eleanor Sincell, Vauda Paugh, Mildred Bennett, Isolde Boening, Harold Green, John Grant, Condon Browning and Maurice Davis, rendered the selection, "But the Lord is Mindful of His Own."

Commencement will be Thursday, when Dr. Richard Aspinall, West Virginia University, Morgantown, will speak. The entire senior body will join in singing a "Night in June" after which diplomas will be presented by Walter W. Dawson, president of the Board of Education.

Plans Changed

A few changes in the proposed plans for the community building have been presented to the Mayor and Town Council and the changes approved, which completes another step in the preliminary work leading up to the beginning of actual construction.

Space for storage is provided under the stage in the new plans, changes are to be made in the locker rooms and the entrance to the building will be from the side, according to the new layout.

The auditorium space shows a basketball court 48x84 feet, with 12 feet more on each side for convertible bleachers which will seat 1,200 people. A small balcony is also to be provided in rear of the auditorium, which can be used as a projection room for slides or moving pictures.

The changes were presented by Fred L. W. Moehle and Associates, architects and engineers, Baltimore.

The amount of the purchase price for the community building site, recently purchased from the Harry Helbig estate, has been paid over to the owners. This amount was $8,000.

Just when work on the building will actually commence, has not been stated by members of council. The project is one under WPA, whereby the town furnished $25,000 and the federal government the balacne. The citizens authorized a bond issue in that amount at an election some time ago. The building is to cost $75,000.

Barton Civic Club Is Sponsoring Flower Show

BARTON, June 10 — The Barton Civic Club has perfected plans for the flower show to be held in the high school auditorium Friday, June 14, at 7 o'clock.

Hearing on Abandoning Railroad To Be Heard June 12

Friendsville To Send Delegation To Washington

Coal Company and Others Oppose Move To Abandon Branch Line

FRIENDSVILLE, June 10—A continuation of the hearing held April 11, in Cumberland, before examiner Lyle of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the petition of the B & O railroad for abandonment of its branch line running from Confluence, Pa., to Kendall, has been called for June 12 at 10 a. m. before the Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D. C.

Hundreds of protests by individuals and business interests have been filed with Joseph Sherbow, peoples council for the state of Maryland imploring him to intercede in their behalf before the commission. The governor of Maryland, likewise, has received numerous protests coming from this section. He has written Mr. Sherbow directing him to appear before the commission for the purpose of protecting the interests of the people directly affected by the proposed move for the abandonment of the rail service.

The mayor and town council of Friendsville are sending Senator Clifford Friend, Q. A. Murphy and Merle Frantz as representatives to appear before the commission for the purpose of showing how this move will affect the welfare and progress of this community.

The First National Bank, Friendsville is sending one of its directors, W. J. Glenn, to present its case before the commission. He will, likewise, presen a brief for the Friendsville schools which will be adversely affected by the abandonment of the rail service and the consequent closing of the McCullough mine.

The Garrett County Commissioners have also protested the move to abandon the rail service because of the affect it will have on property values in this section. It is reliably reported that they will be represented by counsel at the hearing.

The McCullough Coal Company will be represented by their attorneys, Miles and O'Brien, Baltimore. Since the first hearing the engineering firm of Day and Zimmerman, Philadelphia, Pa., make an extensive study of coal company property. Their report will figure prominently in the new testimony to be presented by the company.

Buy New Hose

At a special meeting of the town council called to order by vice-president Donald Chisholm, an order was passed to purchase for the Friendsville Volunteer Fire Company 400 feet two and one-half inch hose costing approximately $400. According to Q. A. Murphy, member of the company, this extra hose is necessary to take care of a section of town not provided with fire plugs. Numerous tax-payers and members of the fire company were present at this meeting for the purpose of urging the council to adopt this measure.

Ladies Aid Meets

Mrs. Orval Rush was hostess to members of the Methodist Ladies' Aid and their husbands Thursday night at which time there was also a house warming party given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Rush, who received many useful gifts. Seniors Hear Sprague

Seniors of Oakland High school last night heard the Rev. Minor Sprague, Methodist pastor, deliver the sermon to the graduates at the Methodist church, at 7:30. Practically the entire graduating class of 103 were present.

The junior-sophomore chorus sang "Praise Ye the Father" and led procession of seniors into the auditorium of the church. A special chorus of ten seniors, Dixie Lee McNemar, Roseanna White, Eleanor Sincell, Vauda Paugh, Mildred Bennett, Isolde Boening, Harold Green, John Grant, Condon Browning and Maurice Davis, rendered the selection, "But the Lord is Mindful of His Own."

Commencement will be Thursday, when Dr. Richard Aspinall, West Virginia University, Morgantown, will speak. The entire senior body will join in singing a "Night in June" after which diplomas will be presented by Walter W. Dawson, president of the Board of Education.

Plans Changed

A few changes in the proposed plans for the community building have been presented to the Mayor and Town Council and the changes approved, which completes another step in the preliminary work leading up to the beginning of actual construction.

Space for storage is provided under the stage in the new plans, changes are to be made in the locker rooms and the entrance to the building will be from the side, according to the new layout.

The auditorium space shows a basketball court 48x84 feet, with 12 feet more on each side for convertible bleachers which will seat 1,200 people. A small balcony is also to be provided in rear of the auditorium, which can be used as a projection room for slides or moving pictures.

The changes were presented by Fred L. W. Moehle and Associates, architects and engineers, Baltimore.

The amount of the purchase price for the community building site, recently purchased from the Harry Heibig estate, has been paid over to the owners. This amount was $8,000.

Just when work on the building will actually commence, has not been stated by members of council. The project is one under WPA, whereby the town furnished $25,000 and the federal government the balacne. The citizens authorized a bond issue in that amount at an election some time ago. The building is to cost $75,000.

Barton Civic Club Is Sponsoring Flower Show

BARTON, June 10 — The Barton Civic Club has perfected plans for the flower show to be held in the high school auditorium Friday, June 14, at 7 o'clock.

There will be a beautiful door prize as well as fine prizes for displays both commercial and amateur. A fine entertainment of music and dancing and refreshments will be features of the evening. The Barton girl scouts will assist the ladies of the Civic Club.

This is the first project undertaken by the new president, Mrs. Arthur P. Hoffa and as all garden and women's clubs as well as individual gardeners are asked to exhibit, it is growing to large proportions.

The admission is free but a silver collection will go toward the Red Cross drive.

Instructor and Pupil Killed in Airplane Crash

Ship Crashes in Cheat Mountains Near Morgantown, W. Va.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 10. (AP)—A training plane crashed in the mountains beyond Morgantown's million-dollar airport today, killed Paul L. McKeel, Jr., 26, pilot, and Harold Lawson, 27, instructor, at the airport.

McKeel, member of a prominent family here and a pupil of one week, and Lawson started on a flight about noon.

Residents of a rugged Cheat mountain section three miles east of the airport reported seeing the plane flying at about 2,000 feet, executed a "double loop," they said, went into a tailspin and nosed down in a cornfield on top of a mountain.

Lawson, a bridegroom of three weeks, and his student were killed instantly.

A guard was placed over the shattered ship until officials of the CAA and the State Aeronautics Board could make an investigation. Airport officials declined comment on the probable cause of the accident.

Lawson, who was married May 14, had been an instructor for the Pioneer Flying Service for about a year. A native of Greensburg, Pa., he attended Bethany college.

McKeel, known as "Dinty," was an officer and student instructor in the Reserve Officers Training Corps at West Virginia University.

Adverse War News Sends Stocks to The Lowest Average in Two Years

Entrance of Italy Has Bad Effect on Prices

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—More adverse war news, topped off by Italy's long awaited plunge into the conflict, hit the stock market today and many issues dipped to the lowest levels in two years or longer.

It was an orderly downswing, with selling never getting out of hand. Leaders, off 1 to 4 points at one time—a few inactives were in arrears as much as 10 — cut their losses at the close.

Transfers totaled 971,440 shares against 469,410 last Friday.

Prominent losers of the day were Wright Aeronautical and Norfolk & Western, off 7 each; Eastman Kodak, 6½; Allied Chemical, 4½, and Union Pacific 4¼.

Falling 1 to more than 3 were Douglas Aircraft, Lockheed, Sperry, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Du Pont, American Can, Standard Oil of N. J. and others.

Among curb losers of 1 to 8 were Aluminum of America, Aluminum Ltd., American Gas, Bell Aircraft and Brewster Aero.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, June 10 (AP)—Italy's entry into the war churned up a brisk trade in wheat futures for a time today, but most of a net advance of about three cents was lost before the close.

Final quotations were ¾-1⅛ higher than Saturday, July 80⅞-81, September 81¾-⅞. Earlier prices had sagged later, however, this loss was wiped out.

Wife's Complex Of Superiority Causes Trouble

By Beatrice Fairfax, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Sometimes when letters come to this column, I would give a good deal to know the other side of the case. Writing under the spur of what they regard as just anger, persons state only their side of the case, and state it sometimes all too well. What would the other fellow have to say in his behalf?

Here is a lady writing to me that her husband is "mean" to her for no reason at all but that he knows she is "superior." However, as this man pays all the household expenses and gives her an allowance as well, and doesn't object when her mother and other in-laws come to visit, it seems to me that he's a pretty good sort of husband.

The lady doesn't tell me in what her superiority consists — whether she has done original research work, written books, painted pictures which have been exhibited, or whether some of her forebears came over on the Mayflower. Be that as it may, she has a conviction that it was this superiority which made them quarrel during their two-year engagement.

Would Return Ring

She would get so angry she would return his ring, and after a few weeks he'd come crawling back with it. She'd return it again. Back and forth it would go, like a ball over a tennis net. Once the diamond actually fell out, but that was when, in a rage, she threw it at him and it went through the open window. They spent the rest of the evening hunting for it. When they finally found it, they kissed and made up and vowed never to quarrel again.

So they were married. They quarreled on their honeymoon. He wanted to go to Niagara, because his mother and father had gone there and lived happily ever after. Poor man, he must have thought everlasting balm was to be found in listening to the raging waterfall. But she would have none of Niagara and insisted on Atlantic City.

When they returned home from Atlantic City, they set up housekeeping. They now have two children, but that only seems to raise more argument and contention. He claims she raises them out of books, and says his mother raised him with love and understanding.

Mirror Held Up

They had a sudden shock the other day, when they overheard their five-year-old daughter and six-year-old son, playing mother and father, quarreling horribly, even to the extent of using cuss words. This held the mirror up to their unhappy domestic life, as nothing else would have done, the lady wrote to me. I hoped I might get a letter from the husband, but haven't.

I'm afraid the worm in the peach is that the wife lets herself feel superior. The obvious suggestion it the lady must conquer this attitude, even if she writes splendid club papers and her ancestors came over in the Mayflower. I'm hazarding these two guesses, as she hasn't confessed in what the superiority consists, and why her husband resents her for having it.

I hope if this reaches the husband's eye, he'll send me his side of the story, for in these days of bitter economic struggle a man who pays all the household expenses and adequately supports his wife strikes me as having a good deal of superiority on his side of the argument.

STARRED IN HAL ROACH'S "TURNABOUT"

Carole Landis, the heroine of "Turnabout," Hal Roach comedy filmed from a Thorne Smith novel, which will be offered Thursday at the Maryland theater.

SINISTER FOREBODINGS

Theaters Today

Liberty Feature Has Trio of Stars

"Tear Gas Squad," starring John Payne, Gloria Dickson and Dennis Morgan, opens at the New Liberty theater tomorrow.

Cast in the story's three leading roles are a trio of young, promising players. There is handsome Dennis Morgan, whose baritone voice first demanded Hollywood's attention, in a role in which he has his first opportunity to sing for the films. John Payne is a young husky rapidly rising to prominence. And beautiful, blonde Gloria Dickson has the feminine lead.

The plot starts with Dennis Morgan, as Tommy McCabe, a cocky night club singer, showering unwanted attention on Jerry Sullivan, played by Gloria Dickson. Tommy's having ridiculed the police force has offended Jerry, whose father is a police lieutenant and whose whole family reeks with police department tradition. It is Sergeant Bill Morrissey's, played by John Payne, fine record on the force that has made him win her affections.

As a lark, Tommy joins the department, and his prankishness causes much friction between him and his rival, Bill.

Carroll and Fairbanks Are Starred at Strand

Madeleine Carroll is co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in Paramount's romantic drama," "Safari", which continues today and tomorrow at the Strand.

Born in England, Madeline's father was Irish, her mother French. She majored among other things, in theatricals, in Birmingham University, and toured in the English provinces, finally to appear in London. Success followed success, both on the stage and in the films, in England and in America. Her screen debut in America was in "The Case against Mrs. Ames". Later she appeared with Gary Cooper in "The General Died at Dawn."

Among Miss Carroll's recent Paramount pictures have been "Cafe Society" and "Honeymoon in Bali."

Thursday the Strand will present another big name band, Maurice Spitalny and his Design for Romance orchestra. With the maestro is also his radio revue including Fay Parker, Billy Leech, Sidney and Ames and the Top-Time Rythmakers.

Friday and Saturday, Slim Gaillard and his Flat-Foot Floogie Boys, and the five Cabin Kids will be on the stage. On the screen will be Zorina and Richard Greene in "I Was an Adventuress," a Twentieth Centry-Fox picture.

Adventure Drama Is Billed at Embassy

The Embassy theater has scheduled another double bill for tomorrow.

One feature will be James Dunn in the adventure drama, "Mercy Plane" with Frances Gifford, Matty Fain and William Frawley in the supporting roles.

The second feature will be Ronald Colman in a return showing of "The Prisoner of Zenda", with Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Madeleine Carroll, Mary Astor and David Niven.

In addition to the two features there will be another chapter of "Buck Rogers".

Maryland Schedules A Roach Comedy

Carole Landis, who made her bow under the Hal Roach banner as a prehistoric debutante, is co-starred with John Hubbard in Roach's streamlined comedy, "Turnabout," filmed from a Thorne Smith novel, which is slated for Thursday at the Maryland theater. Miss Landis and Hubbard are supported by Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan, Verree Teasdale, Mary Astor, Donald Meek and Margaret Roach.

Playing through tomorrow at the Maryland theater will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Waterloo Bridge" starring Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor. Virginia Field and C. Aubrey Smith are also in the cast. "Waterloo Bridge" is Vivien Leigh's first starring role since her performance as Scarlett in "Gone with the Windw."

Two Features Are Offered at Garden

Featured with Greene are Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray and Brenda Joyce, with Andy Devine, Henry Stephenson and Fritz Feld included in the cast.

Linda Darnell, Twentieth Century-Fox film is to be seen in "Star Dust" at the Garden.

The picture is a story of two plucky small-town youngsters in love and fighting for fame in Hollywood.

Entrance of Italy Has Bad Effect on Prices

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—More adverse war news, topped off by Italy's long awaited plunge into the conflict, hit the stock market today and many issues dipped to the lowest levels in two years or longer.

It was an orderly downswing, with selling never getting out of hand. Leaders, off 1 to 4 points at one time—a few inactives were in arrears as much as 10 — cut their losses at the close.

Transfers totaled 971,440 shares against 469,410 last Friday.

Prominent losers of the day were Wright Aeronautical and Norfolk & Western, off 7 each; Eastman Kodak, 6½; Allied Chemical, 4½, and Union Pacific 4¼.

Falling 1 to more than 3 were Douglas Aircraft, Lockheed, Sperry, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Du Pont, American Can, Standard Oil of N. J. and others.

Among curb losers of 1 to 8 were Aluminum of America, Aluminum Ltd., American Gas, Bell Aircraft and Brewster Aero.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, June 10 (AP)—Italy's entry into the war churned up a violent trade in wheat futures for a time today, but most of a net advance of about three cents was lost before the close.

Final quotations were ¾-1⅛ higher than Saturday, July 80⅞-81, September 81¾-⅞. Earlier prices had sagged later, however, this loss was wiped out.

Wife's Complex Of Superiority Causes Trouble

By Beatrice Fairfax, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Sometimes when letters come to this column, I would give a good deal to know the other side of the case. Writing under the spur of what they regard as just anger, persons state only their side of the case, and state it sometimes all too well. What would the other fellow have to say in his behalf?

Here is a lady writing to me that her husband is "mean" to her for no reason at all but that he knows she is "superior." However, as this man pays all the household expenses and gives her an allowance as well, and doesn't object when her mother and other in-laws come to visit, it seems to me that he's a pretty good sort of husband.

The lady doesn't tell me in what her superiority consists — whether she has done original research work, written books, painted pictures which have been exhibited, or whether some of her forebears came over on the Mayflower. Be that as it may, she has a conviction that it was this superiority which made them quarrel during their two-year engagement.

Would Return Ring

She would get so angry she would return his ring, and after a few weeks he'd come crawling back with it. She'd return it again. Back and forth it would go, like a ball over a tennis net. Once the diamond actually fell out, but that was when, in a rage, she threw it at him and it went through the open window. They spent the rest of the evening hunting for it. When they finally found it, they kissed and made up and vowed never to quarrel again.

So they were married. They quarreled on their honeymoon. He wanted to go to Niagara, because his mother and father had gone there and lived happily ever after. Poor man, he must have thought everlasting balm was to be found in listening to the raging waterfall. But she would have none of Niagara and insisted on Atlantic City.

When they returned home from Atlantic City, they set up housekeeping. They now have two children, but that only seems to raise more argument and contention. He claims she raises them out of books, and says his mother raised him with love and understanding.

Mirror Held Up

They had a sudden shock the other day, when they overheard their five-year-old daughter and six-year-old son, playing mother and father, quarreling horribly, even to the extent of using cuss words. This held the mirror up to their unhappy domestic life, as nothing else would have done, the lady wrote to me. I hoped I might get a letter from the husband, but haven't.

I'm afraid the worm in the peach is that the wife lets herself feel superior. The obvious suggestion it the lady must conquer this attitude, even if she writes splendid club papers and her ancestors came over in the Mayflower. I'm hazarding these two guesses, as she hasn't confessed in what the superiority consists, and why her husband resents her for having it.

I hope if this reaches the husband's eye, he'll send me his side of the story, for in these days of bitter economic struggle a man who pays all the household expenses and adequately supports his wife strikes me as having a good deal of superiority on his side of the argument.

STARRED IN HAL ROACH'S "TURNABOUT"

Carole Landis, the heroine of "Turnabout," Hal Roach comedy filmed from a Thorne Smith novel, which will be offered Thursday at the Maryland theater.

SINISTER FOREBODINGS

Theaters Today

"Tear Gas Squad," starring John Payne, Gloria Dickson and Dennis Morgan, opens at the New Liberty theater tomorrow.

Cast in the story's three leading roles are a trio of young, promising players. There is handsome Dennis Morgan, whose baritone voice first demanded Hollywood's attention, in a role in which he has his first opportunity to sing for the films. John Payne is a young husky rapidly rising to prominineence. And beautiful, blonde Gloria Dickson has the feminine lead.

The plot starts with Dennis Morgan, as Tommy McCabe, a cocky night club singer, showering unwanted attention on Jerry Sullivan, played by Gloria Dickson. Tommy's having ridiculed the police force has offended Jerry, whose father is a police lieutenant and whose whole family reeks with police department tradition. It is Sergeant Bill Morrissey's, played by John Payne, fine record on the force that has made him win her affections.

As a lark, Tommy joins the department, and his prankishness causes much friction between him and his rival, Bill.

Carroll and Fairbanks Are Starred at Strand

Madeleine Carroll is co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in Paramount's romantic drama," "Safari", which continues today and tomorrow at the Strand.

Born in England, Madeline's father was Irish, her mother French. She majored among other things, in theatricals, in Birmingham University, and toured in the English provinces, finally to appear in London. Success followed success, both on the stage and in the films, in England and in America. Her screen debut in America was in "The Case against Mrs. Ames". Later she appeared with Gary Cooper in "The General Died at Dawn."

Among Miss Carroll's recent Paramount pictures have been "Cafe Society" and "Honeymoon in Bali."

Thursday the Strand will present another big name band, Maurice Spitalny and his Design for Romance orchestra. With the maestro is also his radio revue including Fay Parker, Billy Leech, Sidney and Ames and the Top-Time Rythmakers.

Friday and Saturday, Slim Gaillard and his Flat-Foot Floogie Boys, and the five Cabin Kids will be on the stage. On the screen will be Zorina and Richard Greene in "I Was on Adventuress," a Twentieth Centry-Fox picture.

Adventure Drama Is Billed at Embassy

The Embassy theater has scheduled another double bill for tomorrow.

One feature will be James Dunn in the adventure drama, "Mercy Plane" with Frances Gifford, Matty Fain and William Frawley in the supporting roles.

The second feature will be Ronald Colman in a return showing of "The Prisoner of Zenda", with Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Madeleine Carroll, Mary Astor and David Niven.

In addition to the two features there will be another chapter of "Buck Rogers".

Maryland Schedules A Roach Comedy

Carole Landis, who made her bow under the Hal Roach banner as a prehistoric debutante, is co-starred with John Hubbard in Roach's streamlined comedy, "Turnabout," filmed from a Thorne Smith novel, which is slated for Thursday at the Maryland theater. Miss Landis and Hubbard are supported by Adolphe Menjou, William Gargan, Verree Teasdale, Mary Astor, Donald Meek and Margaret Roach.

Playing through tomorrow at the Maryland theater will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Waterloo Bridge" starring Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor. Virginia Field and C. Aubrey Smith are also in the cast. "Waterloo Bridge" is Vivien Leigh's first starring role since her performance as Scarlett in "Gone with the Windw."

Featured with Greene are Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray and Brenda Joyce, with Andy Devine, Henry Stephenson and Fritz Feld included in the cast.

Linda Darnell, Twentieth Century-Fox film is to be seen in "Star Dust" at the Garden.

The picture is a story of two plucky small-town youngsters in love and fighting for fame in Hollywood.

Allegany Defeats Fort Hill High by 6 to 1

Gaffney Allows Only One Hit in Final AHS Chore

Scholastic Circuit Ends in Three Way Tie as Season Ends

Campers Get Only Four Hits Off Frey and Miller

Allegany high school's baseball team took a title off the shelf of Fort Hill high yesterday when the Blue and White baseball team defeated the Sentinels at Campobello, 6 to 1, in the last scheduled game of the City Scholastic Circuit, and threw the final standings into a three-way tie with LaSalle high sharing the spotlight and the honors.

Big Jim Gaffney, in what will be his final athletic chore for the Campers, pitched no-hit ball until the fifth when the lone bingle obtained off his offerings was made by Calhoun; Fort Hill also scoring its lone run in the same session.

Allegany got only four safeties off the slants of Miller but came through in the fourth with a four run rally that put the game on ice. Gaffney accounted for the only extra base blow of the game, a double. Klien had two safeties and Mont the other bingle nicked off the Sentinel slinger.

Fort Hill pulled a fast double play when Mont hit to Cook who threw Klien out at second, with Carnell doubling Mont at first on a peg to Reed.

Clippings About Baseball Hobby of Store Clerk

One of Grover Cleveland Alexander's masterful performances fourteen years ago started a youth of eleven on an unusual hobby. The youth, Bruce B. Foster, of Philadelphia, now a twenty-five-year-old shipping clerk, was sitting in the stand when the great Alexander struck out Tony Lazzeri in the last game of the World Series between the Yankees and the Cardinals in 1926.

The feat inspired Foster and he started compiling baseball statistics. He cut clippings and scores from the newspapers and collected books on baseball. Now he has a sports library of nearly 400 volumes and is still adding to it.

Foster has one prize in his collection. It is a book on "American Pastimes" by Charles A. Peverelly. Published in 1886, it gives an early history of baseball.

The stationer's clerk, however, does not confine his fact-finding journeys to newspapers and magazines. In 1939 alone Foster saw sixty-three major league and sixty-two semi-pro games, the All-Star game and one of the World Series games, and was present on Lou Gehrig Day at the Yankee Stadium.

Day of Million Dollar Day in Football Gone

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 10 (AP)—Ogden D. Miller, Yale's newly-appointed athletic chairman, said today he believed "the day of the million dollar gate in football is gone."

In his first interview since his surprise appointment to the post recently vacated by Malcolm Farmer, Miller said he did not think that professional football and other factors would eventually relegate the intercollegiate sport to the relatively minor position now held by college baseball. But, he added, "we ought to study trends and be ready to scale down if necessary."

Miller does not agree with those who feel that charges of subsidization and professionalism on the part of some schools will kill the sport. He said he felt that eventually there would be a "leveling off" after completion of the cycle that started many years ago.

He is against the principle of subsidization of athletes and the principle of "big time" football, "the necessary factors in building strong intercollegiate relationships."

Marquette university trackmen have won fifteen dual meets in a row for one of the best seasons in its history.

Here's Much Ado About Dempsey-Luttrell Feud

NEW YORK, June 10—Averse though he is to all forms of publicity and build-up, Jack Dempsey says he plans to go through with a fight in Atlanta on July 1 with a blot on the body politic named Cowboy Luttrell. This coarse character hit old John on the nose, not long ago, and aroused the dormant wrath of the Dempseys to such a pitch that Jack could hardly wait for the cameramen to focus their instruments before striking back.

When the boys were ready to take the picture, Mr. Dempsey scowled and threw an impulsive punch at the cowboy, who had waited patiently till the scene was set. The punch hurt Mr. Luttrell beyond the shadow of a doubt, for one minute later, when the cameramen had changed their plates and were prepared for the next shot, a look of horrible pain appeared on the cowboy's face and remained there for three minutes, right profile, left profile, and head-on.

Thus the foundation was laid for one of the most natural and convincing grudge fights we've heard of since Strangler Lewis stuck his thumb in Jim Londos's eye.

His Dignity Outraged

"My dignity has been outraged," groaned Cowboy Luttrell.

"What did you say?" asked a reporter.

"An outrage," explained the cowboy carefully, "has been committed upon the dignity of Cowboy Luttrell, L-U-T-T-R-E-L-L, popular wrestling villain, available for public exhibitions or private parties from $25 an evening up transportation extra. Write in care of general delivery or telephone Main 2020 (after 8 p. m., Main 3456). Got the name? Luttrell, with a capital L. I hate Dempsey," concluded the cowboy, and gnashed his teeth as an afterthought.

"You can say for me," adding Mr Dempsey, shyly elbowing his way into the middle of the gathering, "that I will never rest until I have avenged the name of Dempsey, capital D-E-M-P-S-E-Y. Keep this under your hat, but I can be reached at Jack Dempsey's bar, 1619 Broadway, New York City, or at Dempsey's Punch Bowl Inc., same address, or in care of Billy Taub, Natty gents' clothing, 1435 Broadway, we fit you while wait and have a complete line of new Summer gaberdines and seersuckers; telephone for fittings. Mr. Dempsey is available for refereeing engagements on fairly short notice and will punch your local wrestling villain in the course of the evening for a slight extra fee. Boy, do I hate this cowboy Littell!" snarled Mr. Dempsey.

"Not Littell!" yelled the cowboy. "Make that Luttrell. Two T's and two L's.

"Make it Luttrell," agreed Mr. Dempsey. "Tickets may now be obtained at the boxoffice."

Thus, Atlanta is in for the fight of its life, and if anybody wants to bet a dollar on Mr. Luttrell, I will wager a hundred dollars on Dempsey. For some reason or other, I think Dempsey is going to win.

Of course, if the advance sale does not come up to expectations, Mr. Dempsey may forget his grudge and Mr. Luttrell may be persuaded to forgive Mr. Dempsey and punch some other referee. The average fellow counts ten before fighting. Mr. Dempsey usually counts as high as one thousand, and then counts over again to make sure that none of the small bills were stuck together.

If you feel it is degrading for a once-great champion and American idol to be hustling around the country refereeing wrestling shows, and staging fake fights on request, you have to remember that Jack Dempsey has been a free, wide spender all his life, a buyer for the house and a soft touch for deadbeats, and he needs capital as much as the next man, if not a little more so.

Mr. Dempsey has been an ex-athlete for ten years, during which time he has lived very heartily. His frame is getting corpulent, and his jowls are plump as well as blue. Against a conditioned athlete less than thirty years of age, old John would be hopelessly outclassed in any kind of contest, including one with fists.

But do not be alarmed for his safety in the coming bitter grudge match with Cowboy Luttrell, ten rounds or less. Business interests would suffer if Mr. Dempsey lost, and I don't think business interests are going to suffer.

It's too bad Monsieur Jack Curley, the old freak promoter, is dead. He might do something with this situation, at that. Monsieur Curley could persuade you that Mount Whitney was on the level.

Boston Bees Turn On Cardinals for 21 Hits and 12-2 Win

Wallop Three St. Louis Hurlers--Mize Gets Homer

ST. LOUIS, June 10 (AP)—The eighth place Boston Bees walloped three Cardinals pitchers for twenty-one hits today, winning the first of a series of two games, 12 to 2.

Johnny Mize of the Cardinals got the only home run — his seventeenth of the season in the sixth inning.

Nick Strincevich, Bos[illegible]cher, was hit on the head [illegible] ball thrown by a teammate, Bi[illegible]osedel, in practice before the game but recovered after being carried into the club-house.

Billy Southworth, the Cardinals' new manager, arrived just before game time but will not take charge of the team until tomorrow night's game with the Bees.

Pirates and A's Increase Their Farm Systems

Benswanger and Mack Add Several Units to Baseball Chains

Both the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Philadelphia Athletics have realized the need for farm clubs to feed their major league teams and have added several units to their chain. Connie Mack, dean of American League managers, never had owned a minor league club outright or felt the need of one, but during the 1939-40 winter—at the same time he predicted the New York Yankees would finish third in the American League flag fight—Mack purchased the Wilmington franchise of the Interstate League and tied up with the Toronto Maple Leafs, of the International League.

The Interstate League is under the supervision of Harold G. Hoffman, former Governor of New Jersey, and after operating as a Class C circuit in 1939 was admitted to the Class B brackets at the Cincinnati minor league meeting. The fact that Tony Lazzeri, the former Yankee infielder who has often drawn praise from Mack as to his baseball acumen, pilots the Montreal club, apparently led to the A's Toronto deal.

Pittsburgh has established connections with eight minor league clubs, the most extensive farm system the Pirates have ever enjoyed, and has teams operating in all classes except the Southern Association. Under their agreement the Pirates have first choice of talent unearther in the system, but not until 1941 will there be any hopefuls ready to don Pirate uniforms.

Genial Pie Traynor, former manager of the Pirates, serves as assistant to Sam Benswanger, president, in charge of the minor league setup, the complete list of which follows: Syracuse, International League, class AA; Albany, Eastern League; Gadsden, Ala., Southeastern League, Class B; Hutchinson, Kan., Western Association, Class C; McKeesport, Pennsylvania State Association, Class D; Jamestown N. Y., Pony League, Class D; Carthage, Mo., Arkansas-Missouri League, Class D, and Valdosta, Ga., Georgia-Florida League, Class D.

Little Pays Caddy's College Tuition Fee

Cleveland, June 10 (AP)—It'll be college next fall for 18-year-old Henry Eickhoff who caddied Lawson Little to his National Open golf championship.

The youth received $200 of the $1,000 purse Little captured along with the title—enough to pay a year's tuition at Fenn College where he will study metallurgy.

"You're the swellest guy I know," he said soberly as the new champion handed him two crisp $100 bills. "I wouldn't be going to school if it wasn't for this."

Little thought his caddy was "pretty swell," too.

"I asked and followed his advice on a lot of shots in this tournament and he didn't let me down once—He won the title for me."

Little, strangely, was 17th choice among the caddies who selected players for whom they worked according to numbers based on seniority.

"I was holding my breath 'till they got down to my number," Caddy Eickhoff said, "and a lot of them laughed when I picked Little I've got a laugh on them now."

Mrs. Dixon-Mrs. Hodges In CCC Golf Title Match

Mrs. A. P. Dixon and Mrs. Royce Hodges will meet in the championship round of the annual spring tournament of the Cumberland Country Club. They won their semi-final matches and the right to play for the title by taking their semi-final rounds yesterday. Mrs. Dixon defeated Mrs. Arden Lowndes two up on the eighteenth and Mrs. Hodges won from Mrs. W. C. Capper five and four.

Allegany Defeats Fort Hill High by 6 to 1

Gaffney Allows Only One Hit in Final AHS Chore

Scholastic Circuit Ends in Three Way Tie as Season Ends

Campers Get Only Four Hits Off Frey and Miller

Allegany high school's baseball team took a title off the shelf of Fort Hill high yesterday when the Blue and White baseball team defeated the Sentinels at Campobello, 6 to 1, in the last scheduled game of the City Scholastic Circuit, and threw the final standings into a three-way tie with LaSalle high sharing the spotlight and the honors.

Big Jim Gaffney, in what will be his final athletic chore for the Campers, pitched no-hit ball until the fifth when the lone bingle obtained off his offerings was made by Calhoun; Fort Hill also scoring its lone run in the same session.

Allegany got only four safeties off the slants of Miller but came through in the fourth with a four run rally that put the game on ice. Gaffney accounted for the only extra base blow of the game, a double. Klien had two safeties and Mont the other bingle nicked off the Sentinel slinger.

Fort Hill pulled a fast double play when Mont hit to Cook who threw Klien out at second, with Carnell doubling Mont at first on a peg to Reed.

Clippings About Baseball Hobby of Store Clerk

One of Grover Cleveland Alexander's masterful performances fourteen years ago started a youth of eleven on an unusual hobby. The youth, Bruce B. Foster, of Philadelphia, now a twenty-five-year-old shipping clerk, was sitting in the stand when the great Alexander struck out Tony Lazzeri in the last game of the World Series between the Yankees and the Cardinals in 1926.

The feat inspired Foster and he started compiling baseball statistics. He cut clippings and scores from the newspapers and collected books on baseball. Now he has a sports library of nearly 400 volumes and is still adding to it.

Foster has one prize in his collection. It is a book on "American Pastimes" by Charles A. Peverelly. Published in 1886, it gives an early history of baseball.

The stationer's clerk, however, does not confine his fact-finding journeys to newspapers and magazines. In 1939 alone Foster saw sixty-three major league and sixty-two semi-pro games, the All-Star game and one of the World Series games, and was present on Lou Gehrig Day at the Yankee Stadium.

Day of Million Dollar Day in Football Gone

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 10 (AP)—Ogden D. Miller, Yale's newly-appointed athletic chairman, said today he believed "the day of the million dollar gate in football is gone."

In his first interview since his surprise appointment to the post recently vacated by Malcolm Farmer, Miller said he did not think that professional football and other factors would eventually relegate the intercollegiate sport to the relatively minor position now held by college baseball. But, he added, "we ought to study trends and be ready to scale down if necessary."

Miller does not agree with those who feel that charges of subsidization and professionalism on the part of some schools will kill the sport. He said he felt that eventually there would be a "leveling off" after completion of the cycle that started many years ago.

He is against the principle of subsidization of athletes and the principle of "big time" football, "the necessary factors in building strong intercollegiate relationships."

Marquette university trackmen have won fifteen dual meets in a row for one of the best seasons in its history.

Here's Much Ado About Dempsey-Luttrell Feud

NEW YORK, June 10—Averse though he is to all forms of publicity and build-up, Jack Dempsey says he plans to go through with a fight in Atlanta on July 1 with a blot on the body politic named Cowboy Luttrell. This coarse character hit old John on the nose, not long ago, and aroused the dormant wrath of the Dempseys to such a pitch that Jack could hardly wait for the cameramen to focus their instruments before striking back.

When the boys were ready to take the picture, Mr. Dempsey scowled and threw an impulsive punch at the cowboy, who had waited patiently till the scene was set. The punch hurt Mr. Luttrell beyond the shadow of a doubt, for one minute later, when the cameramen had changed their plates and were prepared for the next shot, a look of horrible pain appeared on the cowboy's face and remained there for three minutes, right profile, left profile, and head-on.

Thus the foundation was laid for one of the most natural and convincing grudge fights we've heard of since Strangler Lewis stuck his thumb in Jim Londos's eye.

His Dignity Outraged

"My dignity has been outraged," groaned Cowboy Luttrell.

"What did you say?" asked a reporter.

"An outrage," explained the cowboy carefully, "has been committed upon the dignity of Cowboy Luttrell, L-U-T-T-R-E-L-L, popular wrestling villain, available for public exhibitions or private parties from $25 an evening up transportation extra. Write in care of general delivery or telephone Main 2020 (after 8 p. m., Main 3456). Got the name? Luttrell, with a capital L. I hate Dempsey," concluded the cowboy, and gnashed his teeth as an afterthought.

"You can say for me," adding Mr. Dempsey, shyly elbowing his way into the middle of the gathering, "that I will never rest until I have avenged the name of Dempsey, capital D-E-M-P-S-E-Y. Keep this under your hat, but I can be reached at Jack Dempsey's bar, 1619 Broadway, New York City, or at Dempsey's Punch Bowl Inc., same address, or in care of Billy Taub, Natty gents' clothing, 1435 Broadway, we fit you while wait and have a complete line of new Summer gaberdines and seersuckers; telephone for fittings. Mr. Dempsey is available for refereeing engagements on fairly short notice and will punch your local wrestling villain in the course of the evening for a slight extra fee. Boy, do I hate this cowboy Littell!" snarled Mr. Dempsey.

"Not Littell!" yelled the cowboy. "Make that Luttrell. Two T's and two L's.

"Make it Luttrell," agreed Mr. Dempsey. "Tickets may now be obtained at the boxoffice."

Thus, Atlanta is in for the fight of its life, and if anybody wants to bet a dollar on Mr. Luttrell, I will wager a hundred dollars on Dempsey. For some reason or other, I think Dempsey is going to win.

Of course, if the advance sale does not come up to expectations, Mr. Dempsey may forget his grudge and Mr. Luttrell may be persuaded to forgive Mr. Dempsey and punch some other referee. The average fellow counts ten before fighting. Mr. Dempsey usually counts as high as one thousand, and then counts over again to make sure that none of the small bills were stuck together.

If you feel it is degrading for a once-great champion and American idol to be hustling around the country refereeing wrestling shows, and staging fake fights on request, you have to remember that Jack Dempsey has been a free, wide spender all his life, a buyer for the house and a soft touch for deadbeats, and he needs capital as much as the next man, if not a little more so.

Mr. Dempsey has been an ex-athlete for ten years, during which time he has lived very heartily. His frame is getting corpulent, and his jowls are plump as well as blue. Against a conditioned athlete less than thirty years of age, old John would be hopelessly outclassed in any kind of contest, including one with fists.

But do not be alarmed for his safety in the coming bitter grudge match with Cowboy Luttrell, ten rounds or less. Business interests would suffer if Mr. Dempsey lost, and I don't think business interests are going to suffer.

It's too bad Monsieur Jack Curley, the old freak promoter, is dead. He might do something with this situation, at that. Monsieur Curley could persuade you that Mount Whitney was on the level.

Boston Bees Turn On Cardinals for 21 Hits and 12-2 Win

Wallop Three St. Louis Hurlers--Mize Gets Homer

ST. LOUIS, June 10 (AP)—The eighth place Boston Bees walloped three Cardinals pitchers for twenty-one hits today, winning the first of a series of two games, 12 to 2.

Johnny Mize of the Cardinals got the only home run — his seventeenth of the season in the sixth inning.

Nick Strincevich, Bost[illegible]atcher, was hit on the head [illegible] ball thrown by a teammate, Bi[illegible] Rosedel, in practice before the game but recovered after being carried into the club-house.

Billy Southworth, the Cardinals' new manager, arrived just before game time but will not take charge of the team until tomorrow night's game with the Bees.

Pirates and A's Increase Their Farm Systems

Benswanger and Mack Add Several Units to Baseball Chains

Both the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Philadelphia Athletics have realized the need for farm clubs to feed their major league teams and have added several units to their chain. Connie Mack, dean of American League managers, never had owned a minor league club outright or felt the need of one, but during the 1939-40 winter—at the same time he predicted the New York Yankees would finish third in the American League flag fight—Mack purchased the Wilmington franchise of the Interstate League and tied up with the Toronto Maple Leafs, of the International League.

The Interstate League is under the supervision of Harold G. Hoffman, former Governor of New Jersey, and after operating as a Class C circuit in 1939 was admitted to the Class B brackets at the Cincinnati minor league meeting. The fact that Tony Lazzeri, the former Yankee infielder who has often drawn praise from Mack as to his baseball acumen, pilots the Montreal club, apparently led to the A's Toronto deal.

Pittsburgh has established connections with eight minor league clubs, the most extensive farm system the Pirates have ever enjoyed, and has teams operating in all classes except the Southern Association. Under their agreement the Pirates have first choice of talent unearther in the system, but not until 1941 will there be any hopefuls ready to don Pirate uniforms.

Genial Pie Traynor, former manager of the Pirates, serves as assistant to Sam Benswanger, president, in charge of the minor league setup, the complete list of which follows: Syracuse, International League, class AA; Albany, Eastern League; Gadsden, Ala., Southeastern League, Class B; Hutchinson, Kan., Western Association, Class C; McKeesport, Pennsylvania State Association, Class D; Jamestown N. Y., Pony League, Class D; Carthage, Mo., Arkansas-Missouri League, Class D, and Valdosta, Ga., Georgia-Florida League, Class D.

Little Pays Caddy's College Tuition Fee

Cleveland, June 10 (AP)—It'll be college next fall for 18-year-old Henry Eickhoff who caddied Lawson Little to his National Open golf championship.

The youth received $200 of the $1,000 purse Little captured along with the title—enough to pay a year's tuition at Fenn College where he will study metallurgy.

"You're the swellest guy I know," he said soberly as the new champion handed him two crisp $100 bills. "I wouldn't be going to school if it wasn't for this."

Little thought his caddy was "pretty swell," too.

"I asked and followed his advice on a lot of shots in this tournament and he didn't let me down once—He won the title for me."

Little, strangely, was 17th choice among the caddies who selected players for whom they worked according to numbers based on seniority.

"I was holding my breath 'till they got down to my number," Caddy Eickhoff said, "and a lot of them laughed when I picked Little I've got a laugh on them now."

Mrs. Dixon-Mrs. Hodges In CCC Golf Title Match

Mrs. A. P. Dixon and Mrs. Royce Hodges will meet in the championship round of the annual spring tournament of the Cumberland Country Club. They won their semi-final matches and the right to play for the title by taking their semi-final rounds yesterday. Mrs. Dixon defeated Mrs. Arden Lowndes two up on the eighteenth and Mrs. Hodges won from Mrs. W. C. Capper, five and four.

Dodgers Beat Pirates To Take League Lead

Percentage Point Ahead of Reds but Actually in Ruck

Come from Behind To Win Over Pittsburgh by 8-7 Score

Freddy Fitzsimmons Holds Bucs in Check in Relief Role

PITTSBURGH, June 10. (AP) — Squeezing past the Pirates 8 to 7 today, the Brooklyn Dodgers climbed into first place in the National League by a single percentage point and put the pennant race back in exactly the same spot it was on May 27.

That was the day that the Cincinnati Reds moved past the Dodgers by half a game in won-lost reckoning but trailed in percentage. Today the idle Reds were half a game in front but they had .689 for 31 games won and 14 lost while the Dodgers had .690 for 29 games won and 13 lost.

The Dodgers spurted out in front with three runs in the first inning, batting Rip Sewell out of the box before he could get a batter out. The Pirates teed off on Luke Hamlin with three tallies in the second, when Elbie Fletcher led off with his sixth home run of the season.

Brooklyn scored twice in both the fifth and sixth and then the Pirates rallied again to tie the score with four runs in the seventh on a walk, two singles, a double by Fletcher and another single.

They couldn't do anything with Fred Fitzsimmons, last of Brooklyn's five pitchers, however, and Fitz got credit for his fifth victory against one defeat.

Pigeons Finish 500-Mile Race before Nightfall

MIDLAND, Md., June 10—For the first time in the history of the Algonquin Racing Pigeon Club a 500-mile event was finished in a day-time period. Heretofore, birds liberated in the long race would have to stop for nightfall and finish the race the next day. Not only was it the first time that any bird made it in a day but of the seventy birds in the event sixty-three were in their lofts before nightfall. Another unique occurrence in the race was the fact that the winner and second place had only the meager time of 22 seconds between them. In a 500 mile race this is very rare. Samuel Gardner's "Record Breaker" literally lived up to its name in winning the event in 12 hours 35 minutes and 38 seconds. "Dark Horse", the entry of McKenzie and Garlitz was second and third place went to "Bean Beetle", entered by Frances Hughes. The birds were liberated from Olney, Illinois, at 6:25 a. m. aSturday morning and the winner was clocked at its loft at seventeen minutes after six p. m. "Record Breaker" averaged 1145.91 yards per minute, second place averaged 1145.13 and third place averaged 1137.59.

Other entries finished in the following order: Arch Cameron, Bernard Seib, Joseph Meyers, and Yates and Yates. The next race will be held from Mitchell, Indiana, a distance of 400 miles, next Sunday. It will be a yearling event only for birds born since January 1 of this year.

TO THE LAST OF ALL

"Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The vdliant never taste of death but once."
Shakespeare.

Whether it's Heaven—or whether it's Hell—
Or whether it's merely sleep;
Or whether it's Something in Between
Where ghosts of the half-gods creep—

Since it comes but once—and it comes to all—
On the one fixed, certain date—
Why drink of the dregs till the Cup arrives
On the gray date set by Fate?

Is life so dear—are dreams so sure?
Are love and strife so strong,
That one should shrink from the fated step
To a road that is new and long?

The soul—the grave—and the after-trail—
The Mystic River's flow—
How have the living earned their guess
Where only the dead may know?

Who is there left to raise a hand
And send his will to God,
That he should live where others know
The song of spade and clod?

One by one till the line has passed—
The gutter-born—and the crown—
So what is a day—or a year or two—
Since the answer's written down?

What is a day to a million years
When the last winds sound their call?
So here's to the days that rest between—
And here's to the last of all!

It Is Godoy's Second Chance, Too

Arturo Godoy, going through his training grind at Carmel, N. Y., isn't exactly appalled by Joe Louis's record in return engagements with fighters who have confounded him. He adheres strictly to the thought that this is going to be his second crack at Joe and that, all things considered, he should do better than he did the first time, when he managed not only to go fifteen rounds but to get the nod from one of the judges. In other words, if either of them is going to profit as a result of the experience gained in the February fight he, and not Louis, is the one.

This — and nobody can question the sincerity of the Chilean—is in keeping with his record and character. Even if he should confuse Louis again and scrape through and win the title, Arturo never is going to go down in the books as one of the great fighters of all time. But he is a dead game fighter who never ducked a fight with anybody and never entered the ring without believing implicity he was going to win.

That was true of his first fight with Louis. He had been out of sight of American fight crowds for a year or so and he never had been particularly impressive before, and the general idea was that Louis wouldn't have any trouble with him.

But he didn't share that idea. Unlike Paulino, hauled back from nowhere in similar circumstances to fight Louis, Arturo wasn't at all impressed with the prowess of the champion, went calmly about his training, came through an attack of the grip with his confidence unimpaired and then proceeded to startle everybody by weaving, bobbing, clowning and mugging through fifteen rounds when, on past performances he didn't figure to last ten.

A Crafty Manager

Behind Godoy in his impending second assault on the title lurks the rotund Al Weill, a little fat man who smokes big cigars and is rated as one of the smartest managers who ever squatted in a fighter's corner. Weill never threw a punch in his life — not in a ring, at any rate — but he is one of the sport's soundest students of form and style.

He had a notion — when almost everybody else had forgotten all about Godoy — that the Chilean was just the man to foil Louis. But not in his usual style of fighting, a straight-up, headlong style. That was he would be a perfect target for the Bomber. And so he worked over Godoy and changed his style and now he is working him over again at Carmel.

Weill developed his theory of style through long years as matchmaker for fight clubs. He produced thrilling fights unexpectedly sometimes just by pairing off two men on the basis of conflicting styles. And then, managing fighters of his own, he brought them along simply by matching them on style — tossing them in against fighters of one type, carefully steering them away from others.

The result he got with Godoy in the Louis fight was not a particularly exciting one from the viewpoint of the cash customers, but it was another triumph for his theory. This time he is gambling on an even greater triumph. He didn't have to send Godoy right back against Louis. He could have cleaned up with him against lesser foes, particularly in South America where—whatever else he may have been in this country—he was hailed as hero for his feat of standing off the champion.

But that first fight was only a preliminary move in his campaign for the title. The big push comes on the night of June 20.

An Angry Louis

Meanwhile, at Greenwood Lake, Louis is getting ready for the fight, too. If he and his managers, Black and Roxborough, and his trainer, Jack Blackburn, didn't know what to expect of Godoy the first time, they know now. They know that Godoy, big and rough and strong and game, has had his wits sharpened by Weill and will resort to cunning — a quality he didn't have in the days when he was fighting around here before, outroughing Tony Galento and most of his other opponents.

Louis's punching power, properly applied, is sufficient to more than offset any amount of cunning. Its proper application, however, demands a real urge for fighting on the part of Louis, which is something he didn't have in the first fight. He expected to knock Godoy out quickly, was bewildered by the Chilean's abrupt switch in style and then was content to dawdle along and pull out a decision.

There are signs at Greenwood Lake that he no longer is complacent about Godoy — signs he is kindling a fine rage against him, such as he built up against Schmeling. If this is so, and I believe it is, he may take the fight so quickly and so savagely to Godoy that Arturo will have no chance to follow the carefully plotted campaign for which Weill is drilling him now.

An angry Louis doesn't wait but goes out punching, and hardy and strong as Godoy is, I don't think even he can take many of Joe's best shots around the head and still keep his mind on the strategy with which he now is so much concerned.

Ballarosa Seeks Big Suffolk Purse

DELAWARE PARK, June 10. — Joe Serio, Jr., the young Baltimore trainer who is leading his rank here at the Stanton course with seven victories to his credit, will send Jouett Shouse's Ballarosa to Suffolk Downs to run in the $5,000-added Betsy Ross Stakes on Saturday.

The most valuable 2-year-old filly stake of the New England Spring season is to be run over the five-furlong route, the same distance as the Polly Drummond Stakes here last Saturday, in which Ballarosa was third.

In the Betsy Ross, Ballarosa will attempt to duplicate the feat of her stablemate, Arden Lass, which won the valuable purse last year with a comparatively easy victory. Arden Lass is still going strong and will be a favorite for the $4,000-added Delaware Oaks on Thursday.

Beaten By Four Lengths

Although Ballarosa, a daughter of Balladier and Fair Rosalind, was beaten four lengths for the winner's share in the Polly Drummond Stakes, she turned in a good race while finishing in front of such young gals as Becomly, Charmful and Sparrow Chirp.

She was rushed under a strong ride during the sprint up the backstretch and then held on gamely in the lane and refused to let any of the speed horses go by despite the fact that she couldn't menace the leaders, Strange Device and Hardy Bud.

When the students of form study that race and Ballarosa's winning effort over this track May 29, they are sure to make the Shouse lass one of the favorites in the Betsy Ross, which has attracted a very large field, according to word from Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan.

Gallahadion Doubtful Starter

Ballarosa was not the only horse which Serio saddled for the Polly Drummond on Saturday. He sent forth Ella K. Bryson's Nannykins, which was pulled up by Jockey Albert Shelhamer when she bore out and the saddle slipped.

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion was back in the No. 1 stall of the Roy Waldron-trained stable here today and looked none the worse for his trip to Belmont Park and his run in the mile-and-a-half Belmont Stakes on Saturday.

Mrs. Mars and Waldron have not yet decided whether to start Gallahadion, the Derby winner, in the $10,000-added Kent Handicap here on Saturday.

Elks Will Battle K. of C. Team Today

The Rocking Chair Softball League's first half race continues today on the Fort Hill high diamond at 5:30 with the pace-setting B. P. O. Elks outfit meeting Knights of Columbus tossers, tied with City Police for the runnerup position.

The Casey crew has won its last two starts, defeating Junior Association of Commerce and City Police last week, after losing its first two engagements, while the Elks won three in a row, including an 8-5 decision over K. of C.

John Joyce of Spartansburg, S. C., is the new captain of the 1941 Notre Dame golf team.

The SPORT TRAIL
By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 10. (AP)—He did better than anyone, himself included, expected, so Gene Sarazen will not be hunting up a length of stout hanging rope as a result of his defeat by Lawson Little in the playoff for the national open championship.

One of our favorite citizens, is the sturdy squire from Brookfield Center, where he is more interested in his rolling acres than rolling putts. He's flagged down about every honor golf can offer a professional, and what happens from now on is just more icing on his cake.

Sure, he'd like to have won. But he realizes his 38-year-old legs do well to carry him through a sprint, much less a marathon like the open.

Our last glimpse of him was when he was walking from the 18th green after the second round of his qualifying play at the Mount Vernon Country Club. It was the first time he had to qualify in 21 years, and his first round score had left him greatly perturbed. Now he was grinning like a Cheshire cat.

"One forty-six," he said cheerfully, then added hopefully: "I think maybe I'll do pretty well in the open."

He did "pretty well," and now won't have to worry about qualifying for his 22nd consecutive event next year.

However, more astonishing than the performance of the veteran was that of Little, who swept the amateur ranks clean and then, except for occasional flashes of brilliance, was pretty much a dud as a pro.

His game seemed to deteriorate rather than improve, and he came to be regarded as just another entry, seldom a threat.

Little realized his position more than anyone else. His once-grooved swing had become a rut. A month ago he himself was a classic example of all the "don'ts" of his "do and don't" instructions to pupils.

The Goodall round robin tournament at Fresh Meadow was a turning point. He was talking with Alex Morrison, told him his troubles and said he would try anything Morrison suggested as a cure.

Morrison is probably the game's greatest scientist. Claims made for him concerning his methods and the scope of his teaching have created wide controversy, but the fact remains that no man goes deeper into the fundamentals of cause and effect in the golf swing than he.

Morrison diagnosed Little's swing, suggested a remedy, and sent him on his way. Probably it's more than a coincidence that Little abruptly improved to the extent that he was the nation's low scorer in the qualifying rounds, and now is the champion.

At any rate, the National Open offered the odd picture of two of the game's most widely known players competing in the playoff as dark horses—one, Sarazen, because everyone thought his best days were behind him, and the other, Little, because the touch which served him so well as an amateur apparently had deserted him forever after he joined the pros.

The only sour note in the tournament was the disqualification of Ed Oliver, who finished with a 287, which should have entitled him to a place in the playoff. He was ousted for teeing off on his final round before the specified time.

The rule quoted was to the effect that competitors shall start at the specified time under penalty of disqualification.

But Walter Hagen was 10 minutes behind the time specified for his first round, yet was allowed to play. It would have been bad enough to disqualify the Haig, who wasn't going anywhere anyway. Oliver was just heading for the championship when it was decided that what is fair for one can't be fair for everybody.

Police Boys Club Upsets Merchants

The Police Boys Club defeated the North End Merchants at the North End Playground yesterday, 9 to 7, as Jim Wilkinson hurled seven hit ball to stop his old Merchant mates.

Twigg took the mound for the Merchants but couldn't get anywhere as the Boys Club found him easy and started a parade of runs. When the inning was over, and after Wolz had taken over the throwing toil, the Boys Club had five runs in the basket.

Three more were added in the second to put the game on ice as Wilkinson, Police Club pilot, spaced out the markers charged against him. Shearer of the Boys Club and Boyer of the Merchants had homers.

Line score:

N. E. MERCHANTS .... 310 101 1—7 7 2
POLICE BOYS ..... 530 010 x—9 7 3
Twigg (1), Wolz and Phillips; Wilkinson and Morrissey.

"FROM HERO TO HAS-BEEN"--- THE STORY OF 'DIZZY' DEAN

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 10 — So the "Great One" passes.

Jerome Hanna (Dizzy) Dean, one of the most unusual, likeable, disliked, eccentric and egotistical of baseball players in history has made his exit from the majors, perhaps never to come back.

Dean, the hero of the St. Louis Cardinals. Dean, the "bum" of the Chicago Cubs. Dean, the man who boasted, slurred the umpires, challenged his own teammates, laughed at discipline. Dean, one of the greatest righthanders of all time. This Dean — he's been waived out of the majors.

Baseball fans everywhere knew it had to come. The man with the $185,000 arm which failed to function is believed to have tossed his last for the Chicago Cubs, with which club he wound up his major league career.

Great in 1934

Baseball is going to miss "The Great One." Deans don't come along every day. And pitchers like Diz are scarce.

Dean tossed his way right out of the cow country of Oklahoma and Texas into the majors. At once he was a sensation, front page news and the hero of all baseball followers.

He reached his greatest heights in 1934, when he pitched the St. Louis Cardinals into first place and the pennant in the closing days of the season, and then knocked off two games in the world series. Dean won 30 ball games against seven defeats that season.

He commanded big salaries for his pitching feats and his crowd appeal. He received $20,000 last year and won only six games. His 1940 salary was $10,000, even though he was considered a has-been at the time of signing.

Dean received his nickname from a coach of the Chicago White Sox, who, seeing him strike out several White Sox batters during spring training with Houston, back in 1930, kept telling his players "that kid makes you look dizzy."

Develops Sore Arm

Born at Lucas, Ark. (by one record book), and at Holdenville, Okla. (by another), Dean broke into baseball with St. Joseph of the Western league in 1930. He won 17 games and went to Houston. After 14 games with Houston, the St. Louis Cards gave him a try. But he needed seasoning, so he returned to Houston, and there won 26 games to lead the loop.

In his first season with the Cards, Dean won 18 games. He followed with 20 the next year, then 30, 28, 24 and 13. With Chicago Dean won seven in 1938 and six last year.

A sore arm led to Dean's downfall and the $185,000 beauty never could make it up. He has pitched occasionally in brilliant fashion, but of late he has been knocked out of the box at each try.

Dean is now with Tulsa of the Texas league. There he will attempt to pitch more often. If his arm responds, perhaps "The Great One" will be back. He won his first game there Sunday, allowing six hits, two of them homers.

Microphobia Pays $80 at Aqueduct

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., June 10 (AP)—The Queens County Jockey Club today threw open the gates for an eighteen-day meeting, the third of the New York season under the new mutuels wagering system. The weather was cloudy and the track had not dried out, but water seldom makes the local strip slower because of its peculiar composition.

A new clubhouse looked somewhat strange alongside the old, rambling grandstand. The race track itself is now a mile, a reduction of approximately a quarter mile from the old strip.

Gelding Pays $9.20

W. H. Gallagher's Hoof Heart proved the first winner of the new session. The gelding, a $9.20-for-$2 shot in the field of fourteen maiden juveniles, lasted to beat Maevic by a scant half length, while Cavu lost the place by a length and a half. Wenuit was a sluggish choice. Hoof Heart opened up daylight before running a quarter mile, but was hard pressed to maintain the lead to the end. The time for the five furlongs was 1.00 3-5.

It did not take long for a real old-fashioned long shot to find his way home. A. G. C. Sage's Microphobia, with Wayne Wright in the saddle, broke last in the second race, but the plater ran over the entire field when he found his racing legs and scored by a length and a half to pay $80.70 for $2. The favored Essjaytee, a factor throughout the running, saved the place by a length. Modern Age and Soigne, the next two to finish, both raced wide into the stretch.

Major Upset In Third

A major upset came in the five-furlong third race. Robert Morris, a well-regarded colt from the J. F. Byers barn, went postward a 1-to-3 choice. He finished third in the field of five.

Hy-Cop, paying $9.90, set his own pace by daylight and clicked by three lengths under Basil James, leading jockey at Belmont Park's meeting. Cuantos held Robert Morris safe through the stretch and beat the choice by a length and a half for the runnerup award.

St. Louis Browns Defeat Senators In Opener by 7-4

Take First Game of Series On Two Big Inning Rallies

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—Scoring two runs in the first inning and five more in the seventh, the St. Louis Browns took the opener of a three-game series from Washington today, 7 to 4.

The Senators scored all their runs in the seventh when they drove Jack Kramer from the box. Until then he had held them to four hits.

Roxie Lawson reliever Kramer and, pitching a single to pinch-hitter Sammy West and a double to George Case, went on to stop the Senators.

Dodgers Beat Pirates To Take League Lead

Percentage Point Ahead of Reds but Actually in Ruck

Come from Behind To Win Over Pittsburgh by 8-7 Score

Freddy Fitzsimmons Holds Bucs in Check in Relief Role

PITTSBURGH, June 10. (AP) — Squeezing past the Pirates 8 to 7 today, the Brooklyn Dodgers climbed into first place in the National League by a single percentage point and put the pennant race back in exactly the same spot it was on May 27.

That was the day that the Cincinnati Reds moved past the Dodgers by half a game in won-lost reckoning but trailed in percentage. Today the idle Reds were half a game in front but they had .689 for 31 games won and 14 lost while the Dodgers had .690 for 29 games won and 13 lost.

The Dodgers spurted out in front with three runs in the first inning, batting Rip Sewell out of the box before he could get a batter out. The Pirates teed off on Luke Hamlin with three tallies in the second, when Elbie Fletcher led off with his sixth home run of the season.

Brooklyn scored twice in both the fifth and sixth and then the Pirates rallied again to tie the score with four runs in the seventh on a walk, two singles, a double by Fletcher and another single.

They couldn't do anything with Fred Fitzsimmons, last of Brooklyn's five pitchers, however, and Fitz got credit for his fifth victory against one defeat.

Pigeons Finish 500-Mile Race before Nightfall

MIDLAND, Md., June 10—For the first time in the history of the Alleghanquin Racing Pigeon Club a 500-mile event was finished in a day-time period. Heretofore, birds liberated in the long race would have to stop for nightfall and finish the race the next day. Not only was it the first time that any bird made it in a day but of the seventy birds in the event sixty-three were in their lofts before nightfall. Another unique occurrence in the race was the fact that the winner and second place had only the meager time of 22 seconds between them. For a 500 mile race this is very rare. Samuel Gardner's "Record Breaker" literally lived up to its name in winning the event in 12 hours 35 minutes and 38 seconds. "Dark Horse", the entry of McKenzie and Blitz was second and third place went to "Bean Beetle", entered by Frances Hughes. The birds were liberated from Olney, Illinois, at 6 a. m. aSturday morning and the winner was clocked at its loft seventeen minutes after six p. m. "Record Breaker" averaged 1191 yards per minute, second place averaged 1145.13 and third place averaged 1137.59.

Other entries finished in the following order: Arch Cameron, Bern-Seib, Joseph Meyers, and Yates Yates. The next race will be from Mitchell, Indiana, a distance of 400 miles, next Sunday. It will be a yearling event only for birds born since January 1 of this year.

TO THE LAST OF ALL

"Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The vdliant never taste of death but once."
Shakespeare.

Whether it's Heaven—or whether it's Hell—
Or whether it's merely sleep;
Or whether it's Something in Between
Where ghosts of the half-gods creep—

Since it comes but once—and it comes to all—
On the one fixed, certain date—
Why drink of the dregs till the Cup arrives
On the gray date set by Fate?

Is life so dear—are dreams so sure?
Are love and strife so strong,
That one should shrink from the fated step
To a road that is new and long?

The soul—the grave—and the after-trail—
The Mystic River's flow—
How have the living earned their guess
Where only the dead may know?

Who is there left to raise a hand
And send his will to God,
That he should live where others know
The song of spade and clod?

One by one till the line has passed—
The gutter-born—and the crown—
So what is a day—or a year or two—
Since the answer's written down?

What is a day to a million years
When the last winds sound their call?
So here's to the days that rest between—
And here's to the last of all!

It Is Godoy's Second Chance, Too

Arturo Godoy, going through his training grind at Carmel, N. Y., isn't exactly appalled by Joe Louis's record in return engagements with fighters who have confounded him. He adheres strictly to the thought that this is going to be his second crack at Joe and that, all things considered, he should do better than he did the first time, when he managed not only to go fifteen rounds but to get the nod from one of the judges. In other words, if either of them is going to profit as a result of the experience gained in the February fight he, and not Louis, is the one.

This — and nobody can question the sincerity of the Chilean—is in keeping with his record and character. Even if he should confuse Louis again and scrape through and win the title, Arturo never is going to go down in the books as one of the great fighters of all time. But he is a dead game fighter who never ducked a fight with anybody and never entered the ring without believing implicity he was going to win.

That was true of his first fight with Louis. He had been out of sight of American fight crowds for a year or so and he never had been particularly impressive before, and the general idea was that Louis wouldn't have any trouble with him.

But he didn't share that idea. Unlike Paulino, hauled back from nowhere in similar circumstances to fight Louis, Arturo wasn't at all impressed with the prowess of the champion, went calmly about his training, came through an attack of the grip with his confidence unimpaired and then proceeded to startle everybody by weaving, bobbing, clowning and mugging through fifteen rounds when, on past performances he didn't figure to last ten.

A Crafty Manager

Behind Godoy in his impending second assault on the title lurks the rotund Al Weill, a little fat man who smokes big cigars and is rated as one of the smartest managers who ever squatted in a fighter's corner. Weill never threw a punch in his life — not in a ring, at any rate — but he is one of the sport's soundest students of form and style.

He had a notion — when almost everybody else had forgotten all about Godoy — that the Chilean was just the man to foil Louis. But not in his usual style of fighting, a straight-up, headlong style. That was he would be a perfect target for the Bomber. And so he worked over Godoy and changed his style and now he is working him over again at Carmel.

Weill developed his theory of style through long years as matchmaker for fight clubs. He produced thrilling fights unexpectedly sometimes just by pairing off two men on the basis of conflicting styles. And then, managing fighters of his own, he brought them along simply by matching them on style — tossing them in against fighters of one type, carefully steering them away from others.

The result he got with Godoy in the Louis fight was not a particularly exciting one from the viewpoint of the cash customers, but it was another triump for his theory. This time he is gambling on an even greater triumph. He didn't have to send Godoy right back against Louis. He could have cleaned up with him against lesser foes, particularly in South America where—whatever else he may have been in this country—he was hailed as hero for his feat of standing off the champion.

But that first fight was only a preliminary move in his campaign for the title. The big push comes on the night of June 20.

An Angry Louis

Meanwhile, at Greenwood Lake, Louis is getting ready for the fight, too. If he and his managers, Black and Roxborough, and his trainer, Jack Blackburn, didn't know what to expect of Godoy the first time, they know now. They know that Godoy, big and rough and strong and game, has had his wits sharpened by Weill and will resort to cunning — a quality he didn't have in the days when he was fighting around here before, outroughing Tony Galento and most of his other opponents.

Louis's punching power, properly applied, is sufficient to more than offset any amount of cunning. Its proper application, however, demands a real urge for fighting on the part of Louis, which is something he didn't have in the first fight. He expected to knock Godoy out quickly, was bewildered by the Chilean's abrupt switch in style and then was content to dawdle along and pull out a decision.

There are signs at Greenwood Lake that he no longer is complacent about Godoy — signs he is kindling a fine rage against him, such as he built up against Schmeling. If this is so, and I believe it is, he may take the fight so quickly and so savagely to Godoy that Arturo will have no chance to follow the carefully plotted campaign for which Weill is drilling him now.

An angry Louis doesn't wait but goes out punching, and hardy and strong as Godoy is, I don't think even he can take many of Joe's best shots around the head and still keep his mind on the strategy with which he now is so much concerned.

Ballarosa Seeks Big Suffolk Purse

DELAWARE PARK, June 10. — Joe Serio, Jr., the young Baltimore trainer who is leading his rank here at the Stanton course with seven victories to his credit, will send Jouett Shouse's Ballarosa to Suffolk Downs to run in the $5,000-added Betsy Ross Stakes on Saturday.

The most valuable 2-year-old filly stake of the New England Spring season is to be run over the five-furlong route, the same distance as the Polly Drummond Stakes here last Saturday, in which Ballarosa was third.

In the Betsy Ross, Ballarosa will attempt to duplicate the feat of her stablemate, Arden Lass, which won the valuable purse last year with a comparatively easy victory. Arden Lass is still going strong and will be a favorite for the $4,000-added Delaware Oaks on Thursday.

Beaten By Four Lengths

Although Ballarosa, a daughter of Balladier and Fair Rosalind, was beaten four lengths for the winner's share in the Polly Drummond Stakes, she turned in a good race while finishing in front of such young gals as Becomly, Charmful and Sparrow Chirp.

She was rushed under a strong ride during the sprint up the backstretch and then held on gamely in the lane and refused to let any of the speed horses go by despite the fact that she couldn't menace the leaders, Strange Device and Hardy Bud.

When the students of form study that race and Ballarosa's winning effort over this track May 29, they are sure to make the Shouse lass one of the favorites in the Betsy Ross, which has attracted a very large field, according to word from Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan.

Gallahadion Doubtful Starter

Ballarosa was not the only horse which Serio saddled for the Polly Drummond on Saturday. He sent forth Ella K. Bryson's Nannykins, which was pulled up by Jockey Albert Shelhamer when she bore out and the saddle slipped.

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion was back in the No. 1 stall of the Roy Waldron-trained stable here today and looked none the worse for his trip to Belmont Park and his run in the mile-and-a-half Belmont Stakes on Saturday.

Mrs. Mars and Waldron have not yet decided whether to start Gallahadion, the Derby winner, in the $10,000-added Kent Handicap here on Saturday.

Bill Hixenbaugh Leads Sluggers in Allegany Circuit

Potomac Valley Tosser Has .500 Mark; Bill Kline Is Runner-Up

Bill Hixenbaugh of the Potomac Valley Club is setting the batting pace in the Allegany County Softball League, according to averages compiled and announced recently by Secretary Lloyd Smith. All games up to and including May 28 are included in th averages.

Hixenbaugh, who has stepped to the plate one more time than the minimum of 25 trips, has collected 13 hits for a .500 mark. J. Nestor of Corriganville has an average of .667 but has batted only 21 official times.

Bill Kline of Corriganville holds the runner-up spot with .484 while B. Lease of Wilkinson and Ralph Martin of Narrows Park are tied for third with .462.

Lester Shanholtz of LaVale is fifth with .452, D. George of Wilkinson sixth with .444, Middleton of LaVale seventh with .379, E. Densmore of LaVale eighth with .374, Mosser of Corriganville ninth with .367 and Dan Mattingly of Narrows Park tenth with .360.

Kline leads the loop in doubles with five. Four have poled two triples while Mosser and Nestor of Corriganville are tied in home run getting with three apiece.

In team batting, Wilkinson's Grocers are on top with .355. LaVale is second with .354, Corriganville third with .345, Clary Club fourth with .287, Stringtown fifth with .275, Ellerslie sixth with .274, Park seventh with .273 and Potomac Valley last with .239.

In games due today, Ellerslie will play at the Clary Club, Wilkinson at Narrows Park, Corriganville at LaVale and Stringtown at Potomac Valley. Friday, Clary Club will oppose Wilkinson on the latter's field, the Corgs will go to Ellerslie, Park and Potomac Valley will clash on the latter's diamond and LaVale will journey to Stringtown. Elks Will Battle K. of C. Team Today

The Rocking Chair Softball League's first half race continues today on the Fort Hill high diamond at 5:30 with the pace-setting B. P. O. Elks outfit meeting Knights of Columbus tossers, tied with City Police for the runnerup position.

The Casey crew has won its last two starts, defeating Junior Association of Commerce and City Police last week, after losing its first two engagements, while the Elks won three in a row, including an 8-5 decision over K. of C.

John Joyce of Spartansburg, S. C., is the new captain of the 1941 Notre Dame golf team.

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, June 10. (AP)—He did better than anyone, himself included, expected, so Gene Sarazen will not be hunting up a length of stout hanging rope as a result of his defeat by Lawson Little in the playoff for the national open championship.

One of our favorite citizens, is the sturdy squire from Brookfield Center, where he is more interested in his rolling acres than rolling putts. He's flagged down about every honor golf can offer a professional, and what happens from now on is just more icing on his cake.

Sure, he'd like to have won. But he realizes his 38-year-old legs do well to carry him through a sprint, much less a marathon like the open.

Our last glimpse of him was when he was walking from the 18th green after the second round of his qualifying play at the Mount Vernon Country Club. It was the first time he had to qualify in 21 years, and his first round score had left him greatly perturbed. Now he was grinning like a Cheshire cat.

"One forty-six," he said cheerfully, then added hopefully: "I think maybe I'll do pretty well in the open."

He did "pretty well," and now won't have to worry about qualifying for his 22nd consecutive event next year.

However, more astonishing than the performance of the veteran was that of Little, who swept the amateur ranks clean and then, except for occasional flashes of brilliance, was pretty much a dud as a pro.

His game seemed to deteriorate rather than improve, and he came to be regarded as just another entry, seldom a threat.

Little realized his position more than anyone else. His once-grooved swing had become a rut. A month ago he himself was a classic example of all the "don'ts" of his "do and don't" instructions to pupils.

The Goodall round robin tournament at Fresh Meadow was a turning point. He was talking with Alex Morrison, told him his troubles and said he would try anything Morrison suggested as a cure.

Morrison is probably the game's greatest scientist. Claims made for him concerning his methods and the scope of his teaching have created wide controversy, but the fact remains that no man goes deeper into the fundamentals of cause and effect in the golf swing than he.

Morrison diagnosed Little's swing, suggested a remedy, and sent him on his way. Probably it's more than a coincidence that Little abruptly improved to the extent that he was the nation's low scorer in the qualifying rounds, and now is the champion.

At any rate, the National Open offered the odd picture of two of the game's most widely known players competing in the playoff as dark horses—one, Sarazen, because everyone thought his best days were behind him, and the other, Little, because the touch which served him so well as an amateur apparently had deserted him forever after he joined the pros.

The only sour note in the tournament was the disqualification of Ed Oliver, who finished with a 287, which should have entitled him to a place in the playoff. He was ousted for teeing off on his final round before the specified time.

The rule quoted was to the effect that competitors shall start at the specified time under penalty of disqualification.

But Walter Hagen was 10 minutes behind the time specified for his first round, yet was allowed to play. It would have been bad enough to disqualify the Haig, who wasn't going anywhere anyway. Oliver was just heading for the championship when it was decided that what is fair for one can't be fair for everybody.

Police Boys Club Upsets Merchants

The Police Boys Club defeated the North End Merchants at the North End Playground yesterday, 9 to 7, as Jim Wilkinson hurled seven hit ball to stop his old Merchant mates.

Twigg took the mound for the Merchants but couldn't get anywhere as the Boys Club found him easy and started a parade of runs. When the inning was over, and after Wolz had taken over the throwing toil, the Boys Club had five runs in the basket.

Three more were added in the second to put the game on ice as Wilkinson, Police Club pilot, spaced out the markers charged against him, Shearer of the Boys Club and Boyer of the Merchants had homers.

Line score:

N. E. MERCHANTS	310 101 1—7 7 2
POLICE BOYS	530 010 x—9 7 3

Twigg (1), Wolz and Phillips; Wilkinson and Morrissey.

"FROM HERO TO HAS-BEEN"--- THE STORY OF 'DIZZY' DEAN

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, June 10 — So the "Great One" passes.

Jerome Hanna (Dizzy) Dean, one of the most unusual, likeable, disliked, eccentric and egotistical of baseball players in history has made his exit from the majors, perhaps never to come back.

Dean, the hero of the St. Louis Cardinals. Dean, the "bum" of the Chicago Cubs. Dean, the man who boasted, slurred the umpires, challenged his own teammates, laughed at discipline. Dean, one of the greatest righthanders of all time. This Dean — he's been waived out of the majors.

Baseball fans everywhere knew it had to come. The man with the $185,000 arm which failed to function is believed to have tossed his last for the Chicago Cubs, with which club he wound up his major league career.

Great in 1934

Baseball is going to miss "The Great One." Deans don't come along every day. And pitchers like Diz are scarce.

Dean tossed his way right out of the cow country of Oklahoma and Texas into the majors. At once he was a sensation, front page news and the hero of all baseball followers.

He reached his greatest heights in 1934, when he pitched the St. Louis Cardinals into first place and the pennant in the closing days of the season, and then knocked off two games in the world series. Dean won 30 ball games against seven defeats that season.

He commanded big salaries for his pitching feats and his crowd appeal. He received $20,000 last year and won only six games. His 1940 salary was $10,000, even though he was considered a has-been at the time of signing.

Dean received his nickname from a coach of the Chicago White Sox, who, seeing him strike out several White Sox batters during spring training with Houston, back in 1930, kept telling his players "that kid makes you look dizzy."

Develops Sore Arm

Born at Lucas, Ark. (by one record book), and at Holdenville, Okla. (by another), Dean broke into baseball with St. Joseph of the Western league in 1930. He won 17 games and went to Houston. After 14 games with Houston, the St. Louis Cards gave him a try. But he needed seasoning, so he returned to Houston, and there won 26 games to lead the loop.

In his first season with the Cards, Dean won 18 games. He followed with 20 the next year, then 30, 28, 24 and 13. With Chicago Dean won seven in 1938 and six last year.

A sore arm led to Dean's downfall and the $185,000 beauty never could make it up. He has pitched occasionally in brilliant fashion, but of late he has been knocked out of the box at each try.

Dean is now with Tulsa of the Texas league. There he will attempt to pitch more often. If his arm responds, perhaps "The Great One" will be back. He won his first game there Sunday, allowing six hits, two of them homers.

Microphobia Pays $80 at Aqueduct

AQUEDUCT, N. Y., June 10 (AP)—The Queens County Jockey Club today threw open the gates for an eighteen-day meeting, the third of the New York season under the new mutuels wagering system. The weather was cloudy and the track had not dried out, but water seldom makes the local strip slower because of its peculiar composition.

A new clubhouse looked somewhat strange alongside the old, rambling grandstand. The race track itself is now a mile, a reduction of approximately a quarter mile from the old strip.

Gelding Pays $9.20

W. H. Gallagher's Hoof Heart proved the first winner of the new session. The gelding, a $9.20-for-$2 shot in the field of fourteen maiden juveniles, lasted to beat Maevic by a scant half length, while Cavu lost the place by a length and a half. Wenuit was a sluggish choice. Hoof Heart opened up daylight before running a quarter mile, but was hard pressed to maintain the lead to the end. The time for the five furlongs was 1.00 3-5.

It did not take long for a real old-fashioned long shot to find his way home. A. G. C. Sage's Microphobia, with Wayne Wright in the saddle, broke last in the second race, but the plater ran over the entire field when he found his racing legs and scored by a length and a half to pay $80.70 for $2. The favored Essjaytee, a factor throughout the running, saved the place by a length. Modern Age and Soigne, the next two to finish, both raced wide into the stretch.

Major Upset In Third

A major upset came in the five-furlong third race. Robert Morris, a well-regarded colt from the J. F. Byers barn, went postward a 1-to-3 choice. He finished third in the field of five.

Hy-Cop, paying $9.90, set his own pace by daylight and clicked by three lengths under Basil James, leading jockey at Belmont Park's meeting. Cuantos held Robert Morris safe through the stretch and beat the choice by a length and a half for the runnerup award.

St. Louis Browns Defeat Senators In Opener by 7-4

Take First Game of Series On Two Big Inning Rallies

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—Scoring two runs in the first inning and five more in the seventh, the St. Louis Browns took the opener of a three-game series from Washington today, 7 to 4.

The Senators scored all their runs in the seventh when they drove Jack Kramer from the box. Until then he had held them to four hits.

Roxie Lawson reliever Kramer and, pitching a single to pinch-hitter Sammy West and a double to George Case, went on to stop the Senators.

In Memoriams

DONALDSON—In loving memory of a dear husband, Walter M. (Toots) Donaldson, who was fatally injured June 11, 1939.

I seem to see in the soft, dim light
A face I loved the best.
And think of him when the sun's last ray
Goes down in the far off west.
I miss you no less as the time passes on
Than I did on the day of your going.
For absence can never close the door of my heart
And the lamp of my love is still glowing.
Your heart was the truest in all the wide world,
Your love the best to recall,
For no one on earth could take your place,
You are still the dearest of all.

—Fondly remembered and sadly missed by his wife, JEAN.

FARM, SUMMER HOME OR HUNTING LODGE—$1600

Nestled back in the hills (2½ miles) from main highway, far enough away from noise and traffic to enjoy real nature and country-life. 90 Acres, about half of which is cleared bottom land. Stream of water running full length of the place also two never failing springs, one high enough to provide good water pressure to second floor. The dwelling is an old structure, it shows age but there are years of service in it yet, a warm home in winter and cool in summer. Present owners have lived there for years, death in family makes it necessary to sell.

In Memoriams

DONALDSON—In loving memory of a dear husband, Walter M. (Toots) Donaldson, who was fatally injured June 11, 1939.

I seem to see in the soft, dim light
A face I loved the best.
And think of him when the sun's last ray
Goes down in the far off west.
I miss you no less as the time passes on
Than I did on the day of your going.
For absence can never close the door of my heart
And the lamp of my love is still glowing.
Your heart was the truest in all the wide world,
Your love the best to recall,
For no one on earth could take your place,
You are still the dearest of all.

FARM, SUMMER HOME OR HUNTING LODGE—$1600

Nestled back in the hills (2¼ miles) from main highway, far enough away from noise and traffic to enjoy real nature and country-life. 90 Acres, about half of which is cleared bottom land. Stream of water running full length of the place also two never failing springs, one high enough to provide good water pressure to second floor. The dwelling is an old structure, it shows age but there are years of service in it yet, a warm house in winter and cool in summer. Present owners have lived there for years, death in family makes it necessary to sell.

More Pay, 4-Year Term Sought for City Council

Jr. Association Makes Proposal, Plans Campaign

Fewer Elections Would Save Money To Raise Salaries

The Board of Directors of the Junior Association of Commerce went on record last night as favoring a four-year term of office for the mayor and city council, and a salary increase for those officers.

After several weeks survey, in which members of the board studied city finances, election costs, officials' salaries, duties of the mayor and four councilmen, election laws and other matters pertinent to the question, the matter was formally presented last night at a meeting of the board of fourteen young citizens.

There was lengthy discussion on the question, during which it was shown that the salary of the mayor of Cumberland is $1,500 a year and that of each councilman, $1,200 a year, or little more than is paid semi-skilled or unskilled labor.

It was shown, too, that these salaries were established years ago, when the city was smaller, living costs were much lower, and the duties of the city fathers were considerably lighter and less involved than they are today.

Term Now Too Short

Members of the board also reached the conclusion that a two-year term of office is barely sufficient time for a councilman to acquaint himself with the duties of office.

After he serves two years, he stands the chance of being replaced in the election by another inexperienced man. This tends toward inefficiency and expensive administration, the board concluded.

It was mentioned that a four-year term would give the members of council a better opportunity to plan a progressive program and organize their departments to operate over a longer period. This, it is believed, would give ample time to become familiar with new duties and attempt more constructive, progressive and aggressive projects.

View Public Opinion

Members of the board during the past three or four weeks have discussed the idea informally with numerous people of all professions, vocations and occupations. Statements from scores of individuals indicate that the idea meets with little opposition and most people who understand the plan favor it.

By holding elections every four years instead of every two, $1,500 a year can be saved. This is based upon the figures o the past election, which, including both the primary and general balloting cost the city of Cumberland $5,943.25. This expense includes payroll of election workers and clerks, rental of polling places, printing and necessary legal advertising.

The Board of the Junior Association agreed that this $1,500 a year

Even Cap Pistols Banned Under City Cracker Law

Even the lowly cap pistol is banned under Ordinance No. 1694, relating to the sale of fireworks, firecrackers, etc., which was passed by the mayor and city council July 10, 1939. City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett informed Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman and Fire Chief C. Reid Hoenicka yesterday.

The city attorney said there were no loopholes in the ordinance and that the law must be enforced.

The subject was brought to the attention of Mr. Heskett after several local merchants had inquired if any type of fireworks could be sold here. It was said that caps and pistols and noise-making canes were being sold here in spite of the law which was put into effect after the riotous celebration here last July 4. Chief Eyerman was advised to take immediate action against those violating the ordinance.

"It srall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to display or offer for sale, sell, deliver, discharge or set off any fireworks or NOISE-MAKING explosives of any kind or description which contains powder, explosive of inflammable material within the city limits of Cumberland or for one mile beyond the limits"—is the wording of the ordinance.

Violators of any provision of the ordinance shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than $100 for each offense.

Eagles To Ask For Bids Soon On New Home

Largest Lodge Hopes To Start Work by July 1

Bids to contractors for the new building to be erected by Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles, at Bedford and North Mechanic streets will be advertised June 29, it was announced yesterday by Henry Koelker, chairman of the building committee.

According to the plans drawn by S. Russ Minter, local architect, the new building will be three stories in height and will be of steel, iron, concrete and brick construction. Measurements of the new structure are 119 by 32 feet. It will adjoin the present Eagles Home, corner of Frederick and North Mechanic streets, which is ninety feet long and thirty-five feet wide.

The cost of the new building is estimated at $45,000.

Mr. Koelker said he was hopeful that work on the new structure would be started about July 1 and that it would take about five months to complete the job.

Other members of the F. O. E. building committee in addition to Mr. Koelker are Louis Firlie, David Ogilvie, Francis H. Schultz, John H. Hager, and Walter G. Leibarnt.

Cumberland Aerie now has 1,480 members and is the largest fraternal organization in this section. The local F. O. E. membership represents almost fifty percent of the entire organization in the State of Maryland.

Driver Fined $5 For Traveling over 30 In Bowling Green

Four drivers were fined and one was acquitted in court yesterday.

William F. Morgan, 625 Princeton avenue, was fined $5 and costs in Trial Magistrate court on a charge of exceeding the speed limit of thirty miles an hour through Bowling Green, a restricted zone.

David J. Johns, 24 Laing avenue, paid $5 and costs for crossing from one lane to another when it was unsafe on the McMullen highway near The Dingle.

State Trooper George J. Miller made both arrests.

In Police court, Leon Taishoff, 1027 Bedford street, was fined $2 for driving in the wrong direction on Water street, a one-way street. Officers Carl J. Souffer and W. P. Crabtree preferred the charge.

Richard C. Dyer, of 223 Richard street, Bedford, Pa., was fined $1 on a charge of careless driving, and Henry N. Dressman, of RFD 1, Cumberland, was acquitted on a similar count. Lieut. James E. Van and Officers John G. Powers arrested both drivers.

Driver Arrested

James Q. Kenny, of Lonaconing, is scheduled to be given a hearing today in Police court on a charge of careless driving. He was arrested on the West Side by Officers Carl J. Stouffer and Walter P. Crabtree.

St. Mary's Grad, Now a Priest, To Address Class

Eight To Receive Diplomas Tomorrow; Play Tonight

A priest who received his early education in Cumberland will return to his home town tomorrow to address the seniors of the school from which he was graduated.

He is the Rev. J. Henry Hopkins, assistant pastor of St. Ambrose Catholic church in Baltimore, and he will deliver the principal address at the annual commencement exercises of St. Mary's high school tomorrow at 8 p. m. in St. Mary's auditorium on Oldtown road.

Diplomas and awards will be presented by the Rev. Lawrence P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church. The awards consist of a scholarship to Sacred Heart college, Louisville, Ky., for the outstanding girl student in the graduating class, and a five dollar cash prize for the senior with the highest average in religion.

Miss Rose Ratke will be valedictorian of the Class of 1940 and Miss Anna Danahy will give the salutatory.

St. Mary's orchestra of twenty-two members, directed by Sister Eileen, will play a number of selections appropriate to the occasion, with Miss Catherine Doerner as pianist.

Members of the graduating class are Mildred Borchert, Ann Danahy, Nancy Heckler, Betty Jane Ketzner, Marian Mason, Rita Perkins, Rose Ratke, and John Clarke, James Hovatter, and Thomas Will.

Class Night exercises scheduled for this evening at 8 o'clock will include the presentation of a play entitled "The Day We Graduate" which will be given by the senior class in the church auditorium.

Court Studies Case For Tax Adjustments On Washington St.

Washington street property owners striving to obtain reductions in tax assessments yesterday submitted their case to Circuit Court Judge D. Lindley Sloan.

The property owners, former Judge Albert A. Doub Sr., Joseph B. Finan, and the McMullen brothers, appealed their case to the Circuit Court after they were turned down by the county commissioners and the State Tax Commission.

The protestants contend that a fair property appraisal should be determined by the "best sale price which the property can be sold for at either private sale or public auction, but not forced sale."

The protestants aver that important evidence governing their case was stricken from the record by the State Tax Commission, including expert testimony.

Evidence striken included a statement by Robert E. King, real estate dealer, that there has been no market for the properties under consideration for the last ten years.

The court took the case under advisement and indicated it would study the record of the case.

Newcomer Wins Season Opener At Yacht Club

Muma Brothers Also Have Big Day

James O'Connell, of Frostburg, a newcomer to the sport of yachting, had the thrill of winning his very first start over the course of the Deep Creek Yacht Club on Sunday when his Snipe class sloop defeated five other Snipes in the opening point-score race of the season.

No small part of O'Connell's victory in his re-christened "Small Fry" was due, however, to the smart handling of his boat by Bobby Muma while the owner acted as crew. The "Small Fry," ex-"Alias," was always a dangerous contender under the hand of her former owner, Hugo Keller, but yesterday she took the best the fleet has to offer with the possible exception of Bobby and Harold Muma's "Lisbeth," not yet in commission for the season.

All in all, it was a Muma Brothers day on Deep Creek Lake. Just a few yards back of "Small Fry" came Past-Commodore John B. Mordock's Catalog II, skippered by her owner, with Harold Muma handling the headsails. What the brothers will do next Sunday when they join forces in "Lisbeth" is something all small boat sailors in Western Maryland will be waiting to see.

Disqualified for Collision

William J. Cramer and Lee Hunter in Cramer's "Leah-Louise," like "Catalog II" a former club champion and another dangerous contender, finished third in Sunday's first event, but was disqualified for colliding with Dr. Arthur P. Dixon's and Miss Georgie Dixon's "Rebel" as the field turned the first mark.

Third place then went to Dr. Donald B. Grove and Miss Gladys La-Rue in Dr. Grove's "Holiday." Richard C. Holben, another Frostburger, with George Martz as his afterguard, was fourth. John B. Steiding and William Sluss brought in Steiding's "Aloha" fifth, while "Rebel" was given sixth place.

Yesterday's Snipe race was sailed minus several stars of the fleet besides "Lisbeth." William Sluss's Deany II was missing, as was Tom Geer's Pittsburgh entry, "Lollypop." Dr. Tolson's "Windward Ho," Fred Hodd's ex-"Catalog I," another club champion, and several other boats expected to make this year's championship a wide-open affair.

Smart Sailing

In Sunday's open race John B. Mordock took advantage of every trick known to small boat sailing to win a decision from Jean Pickut's new National One Design boat "Cagey," which carries considerable more sail than the Snipe. The National was skippered by H. H. Muma and carried Miss Betty Tuebner as additional crew. Commodore Mordock outmaneuvered the bigger boat as the two neared the first turn and was never thereafter headed. David H. Murrie was Mordock's crew. Five other Snipes also took part in the open race.

At least twelve Snipes will enter next Sunday's class race, while the open event will be broadened to include Sea Gull class and several other classes of boats.

River Victim's Funeral Today

Allegany Student Drowned Saturday

The faculty of the Columbia street school and a number of teachers from Allegany high school called in a body yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lewis, Sr., 215 Valley street, parents of the 16-year-old student who drowned Saturday.

The victim, James W. Lewis Jr., was a graduate of the Columbia street school and a freshman at Allegany high. He was a model airplane enthusiast and recently won a prize for a model submitted in a local competition.

Young Lewis drowned Saturday in the Capon river, six miles south of Paw Paw, where he and his father and grandfather had been camping. The boy suffered a cramp and perished before aid could reach him.

Eight boys from his class at Allegany high will be pallbearers at the funeral today, it was announced last night.

Woman Shoos Bees, Her Car Upsets

Mrs. Sue M. Hixon's attempt to shoo a bee out of her car sent the machine plunging down a bank Sunday on Nave's Crossroad. The car upset, but Mrs. Hixon escaped serious injury.

Mrs. Hixon, widow of William T. Hixon, of 126 Virginia avenue, was helped from the wreckage by Officers J. H. Stitcher and L. E. Meister, who took her home. Mrs. Hixon had been to Hill Crest Burial Park to put flowers on the grave of her husband.

Citizen's Telegram To Senator Censored

W. A. Spruill got his dander up last night while he was listening to Senator Rush D. Holt of West Virginia make a radio speech urging America to stay out of the war.

Citizen Spruill, a local real estate man, got madder still when the telegraph company refused to call the young senator what Citizen Spruill wanted him called.

The message which was never sent was: "Dear Sir: Listening to your address tonight made me homesick, for every time I hear a jackass bray I become nauseated."

Allegany High's Commencement Program Given

Many Honors To Be Awarded Thursday

Twelve honor awards will be presented by Ralph R. Webster, principal, at the fifty-second annual commencement of Allegany high school, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the high school auditorium.

Commencement Program

Friday's commencement program will be opened with four selections by Allegany high school's thirty-piece orchestra directed by Jack E. Platt. The numbers to be played are "Echoes from Grand Opera" by Herfurth; "National Melody" by Herfurth; "Maleguena" by Luceona, and "Festival March" by Mendelssohn.

The invocation will be given by the Rev. Robert H. Parker, pastor of the Union Grove Circuit of the Methodist church.

The remainder of the program is as follows:

Class oration, by John Beckman; "The Wind's in the South," selection by the Girls' choral club of thirty voices; Address by Harry Collins Spillman, of New York; violin duet, "Evening Prelude," by Wilton Syckes and Marshall Cowers, accompanied by Mrs. John Dorn, Jr.; presentation of diplomas by William A. Gunter, president of the Board of Education of Allegany county; selection, "America, My Wondrous Land," by the Allegany high school chorus; announcement of honors, by Ralph R. Webster, principal; song, "Dear Old High School," by members of graduating class, with Jack E. Platt as accompanist at the organ.

The Allegany school song was composed by Howard C. Hill principal of the school in 1904, and was copyrighted in 1936. The composer is a brother of R. Mason Hill, assistant clerk to the county commissioners in charge of tax assessments.

Miss Dorothy Willison will direct the choral club, the school chorus, and class singing.

This year's graduating class is composed of 188 seniors. Allegany's first graduating class of 1889 had fifteen members and the exercises at that time were held in the Union street school building.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thwaites, Jr., 102 East Oldtown road, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lantz, 19 Grand avenue, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Bittner, of Sand Patch, Pa., announce the birth of a son last night at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. James Andrew Cohill Jr., Hancock, announce the birth of a son, at Mt. Airy, N. C., May 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goss, 322 Grand avenue, announce the birth of a son Saturday night at Allegany hospital.

Veteran Ball Player Up for Postmaster

One of Allegany county's most widely traveled baseball players will be the next postmaster of Westernport if Congressman William D. Byron approves the endorsement of Thomas V. McGuire, who recently was recommended for that post by the unanimous vote of Allegany county's Democratic State Central Committee.

The fact that McGuire received the full blessings of the state central committee and stands a good chance of being the successor to the late Leo Connell is of special interest in Cumberland because it was here that he starred as a pitcher and outfielder for the Cumberland Colts in the days of the Middle Atlantic League.

Has Been Busy Fellow

His escutcheon not only shows that he was a minor league ballplayer from 1920 to 1928, but he did more than play the diamond pastime to earn his doughnuts and coffee. "Tommy," as he is familiarly known to his many friends throughout the county, served as manager of Keystone Grocery B. & O. shops; timekeeper for the signal corps, B. & O. railroad, insurance agent, and for the last seven years has has been employed in the finishing room of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper company plant at Luke.

Played with Grove

It was back in 1920 that the Westernport southpaw got his start in organized baseball. He, the great Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, and Bobby Blair, of the Midland Indians, and Henry "Diddy" Stitcher, of the Cumberland Colts, started out together for their first fling at minor league ball at Martinsburg, W. Va., in the Blue Ridge League.

Grove went from there to Baltimore thence to Connie Mack at Philadelphia and finally to the Boston Red Sox, for whom he still performs. McGuire played in eight leagues in nine years before he quit as an active performer. He came back in 1937 as manager of the Midland Red Sox, of the Bi-State League and piloted a pennant winner. He repeated last year. This season he is holding the managerial reins of Westvaco in the same circuit.

Globe Trotter

During his nine seasons in the minors he played with Martinsburg and Chambersburg in the Blue Ridge; Dover, in the Eastern Shore; Scranton in the New York-Penn loop; Bristol, Tenn., in the Appalachian; Rocky Mount, N. C., in the Virginia league; Cumberland and Clarksburg in the Middle Atlantic; Okmulgee, Okla., in the Western League and last but not least Rochester, of the International circuit, the fastest company in which he ever has

Fast on Bases

A left-handed thrower and hitter, McGuire was regarded as one of the fastest baserunners ever developed in this section. His ability to beat out bunts and high bounders to the infield impressed scouts in his younger days. He started out in baseball as an outfielder and in baseball parlance he really "could carry the mail." In later years he developed into a dependable twirler.

McGuire attended Georgetown university, Washington, D. C., and left there during the war for the Field Artillery officers' Training School at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky.

He was born in Piedmont, W. Va., October 3, 1897, and he is now 42. His wife is the former Esta Fisher, of Lonaconing. They have two children, Irene and Ethel Ann.

Lloyd H. Buchanan To Get Degree

Lloyd H. Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander R. Buchanan, of Narrows Park, will graduate tomorrow from the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. Buchanan, a member of the class of 1936 at Allegany high school, will receive a Bachelor of Science degree in economics.

Legion Meets Tonight

Fort Cumberland Post No. 13 of the American Legion will hold a regular meeting tonight. A nominating committee will be appointed.

Fort Hill Ready For Class Night

Hilarious Fun Promised Tonight

Tonight the Seniors of Fort Hill High School will present for their Class Night exercises, the original and hilarious program "Excuse Us, Please," in which more than 100 Seniors transform the school auditorium into a veritable whirl of amazing activities.

With a plot abounding in clever dialogue, snappy songs and dances, and unbelievable events, the program promises to reach the peak of the year's productions. Witches, the Old Gray Mare, aspiring political candidates, Seniors avenging long-suffered wrongs, Father Time with his relentless scythe, all mingle in rollicking accord to make the evening a never-to-be-forgotten time of fun.

The program is in two parts. First is "It Does Happen Here," in which the Senior Class turns the tables on the teachers. Second is "They Find the Way," in which the audience, after much patience, should begin to know what it is all about.

This clever combination of merriment, satire, and genuine truth consists of a prologue, in which is revealed the trek of disillusioned folk to happiness, where a better way of life is being sought; Election Eve, a realistic political rally; The Hall of Man; The Cabinet Meeting, and "The Answer."

The appearance of a mystery candidate whose identity the Seniors are keeping carefully concealed is a high-spot of the program.

Students Get Degrees In Foreign Service

Three Cumberland students received Bachelor of Science degrees in Foreign Service yesterday at graduation services at Georgetown University in Washington.

The three graduates are Oliver Herman Bruce, 407 Washington street; George Peter Charuhas, 240 Columbia street; and Newton Heston, 911 Ridgedale avenue.

Harold M. Stephens, associate judge of the United States Court of Appeals, addressed 480 graduates at the 141st annual commencement held on the college lawn.

Irvin H. Crabtree Granted Divorce

Associate Judge William A. Huster yesterday awarded a divorce to Irvin H. Crabtree, former tinmill employe of South Cumberland, from his wife, Mary J. Crabtree.

According to the petition filed by Harold E. Naughton, Crabtree's counsel, Mrs. Crabtree deserted her husband soon after their marriage on March 15, 1936.

Mayor Thinks Airport Deal Can Be Made

Committee Meets Council Today; Action Necessary

Cumberland's Airport committee and the mayor and city council will meet this morning at 10 o'clock at city hall to discuss the possibilities of purchasing the proposed airport site near Wiley Ford, W. Va.

Immediate action must be taken by the council as options on the land known as the Whalley and McAbee tracts in West Virginia will expire Saturday. The option was obtained by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

The mayor and council conferred with Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and it was decided to have the full committee present for today's session.

The matter of federal aid for the airport project was discussed yesterday in Washington by Oscar C. Gurley, James C. Shriver, Owen D. Hitchins and John J. McMullen in a conference with Major A. B. McMullen, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and Representative William D. Byron.

It is understood that the city must obtain title to the land before federal aid for an airport project will be approved. Cost of the land for the proposed site in Wiley Ford is reported to be $15,000.

"We'll have to cut some financial corners to raise the money," commented Mayor Irvine, "but I think it can be done."

Personal Letters Ask War Relief

Local Drive Still Only Halfway

With little more than half of the minimum quota reported in the relief fund for the Allegany County Chapter of the American Red Cross, announcement was made yesterday that more than 500 letters have been written to Cumberlanders in a plea for aid to victims of the European war. Mrs. Robert S. Henderson and Donald Smith are co-chairmen of the personal solicitations committee of the war relief fund in Cumberland.

When the increased need was seen for immediate aid in Europe, Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross, announced that the national goal was doubled to $20,000,000. The total amount received by the local headquarters at 45 N. Liberty street, yesterday was $3,769.09. The original minimum quota for the county chapter was $7,000.

Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, sent a check for $25 with $5 pledged for each month the emergency exists. The Women's Sport Club also sent $2

Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a letter yesterday urged the American people "to contribute quickly and generously to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross, as the best help the American people can give in the tremendous problem of caring for millions of refugees and wounded." He pointed out that the American Red Cross is the official national relief agency of the American people and is chartered by an act of Congress.

Money obtained in the national war relief campaign will be used to buy food, clothing, surgical supplies, medications, ambulances, soap, cooking utensils, and similar commodities which Red Cross representatives in Europe cable are in such demand.

The S. S. McKeesport, known as the "Mercy Ship" has been chartered by the Red Cross to carry supplies to Europe. It is scheduled to sail this week.

Allegany Orchestra To Play at Flintstone

The Allegany high school orchestra, under the direction of Jack E. Platt, will play at the annual commencement exercises of Flintstone Agricultural high school on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The A.H.S. musical organization has played annually at the Flintstone exercises for a number of years.

Ridgeley Republicans To Meet Tonight

The Young Republican Club of Ridgeley will hold an important meeting tonight at 8 p. m. in Justice of the Peace G. E. Hiser's office for the purpose of forming a membership committee. All members of the organization have been urged to be present by Walter Ridgeley, president.

Celanese Worker Swallows Poison

A 37-year-old Celanese worker was admitted to Allegany hospital Sunday after he swallowed nearly a dozen poison tablets. The man was Leo W. Anderson, of RFD 1, Baltimore Pike.

Jr. Association Delegates

Fred Z. Hetzel, president, and Captain Randolph Millholland, national councilman, have been designated delegates to the national convention of the Junior Association of Commerce. The delegates were appointed by members of the Board of Directors of the local association at a meeting last night. The convention will be held the latter part of next week.

Deaths

George L. Morris

George Lawrence Morris, son of James and Hilda Matt Morris, of 320 Holland street, died late yesterday afternoon at Allegany hospital where he was admitted May 25. He was 13.

Young Morris was a native of Cumberland and a student at St. Patrick's parochial school. He was a member of St. Patrick's church.

Samuel A. Marvis

Samupel Aaron Marvis died yesterday afternoon at Memorial hospital where he had been a patient for the past twenty-one days. He was 63.

Mr. Marvis was born in Turkey and attempts are now being made to locate his daughter. He survived his wife, Ruth Kaplon Marvis, by a number of years.

The body will remain at Stein's chapel until his daughter is located.

Bernard Martin

Bernard Martin, of Clarysville, a former employee of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, died suddenly yesterday morning in Morgantown, W. Va., of a heart attack He was 47.

Mr. Martin had been working in Morgantown for the past year.

He was a member of St. Michael's Catholic church, of Frostburg, and the parish Holy Name Society.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Hilda Delaney Martin; seven children, John, Thomas, James, Rita, Marie, Agnes, and Margaret Martin, all at home; a brother, Thomas Martin, of Detroit, Mich.; and two sisters, Mrs. Agnes Vocke, of Detroit, and Mrs. Aloysius Winner, of Mt. Savage.

Cumberland Man Home from Italy Saw Liner Rex Stripped for War

Mrs. Emma M. Jammer, of 230 Columbia avenue, today was anticipating a visit from her son, J. S. Jammer, who arrived from Europe yesterday on the Liner Manhattan.

Mr. Jammer, connected with the foreign service of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company for the last sixteen years, told ship reporters, that the Italian Liner Rex is being transformed into a troopship at Genoa. In dispatches sent through the country, Mr. Jammer told how he saw workers stripping furnishings from the palatial trans-Atlantic liner and conditioning it for war service.

Mr. Jammer's main office is in London, but he had been working in the Balkans for six months prior to his return to America. He was called to the New York office of his company in regard to some special work.

Mr. Jammer had planned to spend more time in Italy but took an earlier boat for home in view of conditions in Italy and instructions from his office.

He told his mother by phone last night that he planned to come to Cumberland just as soon as possible. He was last home in 1938.

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Italo Verrando, general manager of the Italian line in this country, said today that the liner Rex, now in Italy, would make a west-bound sailing "early in September—when the war will be over."

"I'm very serious," he told reporters. "If it (the war) is not over, I'll buy you boys lunch."

Italy's declaration of war found all Italian line ships safe at home or in neutral ports, he said.

Camera Club's First Nude Entry Wins Prize over Fifty Others

The winning print is a side view of a young woman standing on the sea shore and holding aloft a towel which is waving in the breeze.

The picture was taken by George R. Lenhert, chief radio engineer for Station WTBO, who also captured second place with a landscape. It was the first time he had ever entered any prints in the club competition.

Milton Benemann took third place with a shot of a lake at sundown. Honorable mention went to James Weber and Fred Strausburg.

Pictures on Display

The winning pictures will be on display at Harvey's jewelry store on Baltimore street.

Nudes are a favorite subject of the art photographers, but heretofore Cumberland enthusiasts have stuck to more conventional subjects such as sunsets, cows, and sailboats.

G. W. McElfish, one of the judges, said the fifty prints entered in the June contest were the best group the local club has ever turned out.

Thirty-five members were present, making it the first time in the club's history that the number of prints exceeded the number of photographers attending.

Other judges were John Wellington and Richard Coffman.

July Outing Planned

Robert O. Slemmer presented an illustrated lecture prepared by E. P. Wightman, F. R. P. S.

The meeting was held in the Knights of Malta hall on Prospect Square, which will be the regular meeting place in the future. The club meets the second Monday of each month.

The July meeting, however, will be held at Edgar D. Growdens' cottage on Hazen road. It will be known as a photo outing, and will begin in the afternoon and continue through the evening.

More Pay, 4-Year Term Sought for City Council

Jr. Association Makes Proposal, Plans Campaign

Fewer Elections Would Save Money To Raise Salaries

The Board of Directors of the Junior Association of Commerce went on record last night as favoring a four-year term of office for the mayor and city council, and a salary increase for those officers.

After several weeks survey, in which members of the board studied city finances, election costs, officials' salaries, duties of the mayor and four councilmen, election laws and other matters pertinent to the question, the matter was formally presented last night at a meeting of the board of fourteen young citizens.

There was lengthy discussion on the question, during which it was shown that the salary of the mayor of Cumberland is $1,500 a year and that of each councilman, $1,200 a year, or little more than is paid semi-skilled or unskilled labor.

It was shown, too, that these salaries were established years ago, when the city was smaller, living costs were much lower, and the duties of the city fathers were considerably lighter and less involved than they are today.

Term Now Too Short

Members of the board also reached the conclusion that a two-year term of office is barely sufficient time for a councilman to acquaint himself with the duties of office.

After he serves two years, he stands the chance of being replaced in the election by another inexperienced man. This tends toward inefficiency and expensive administration, the board concluded.

It was mentioned that a four-year term would give the members of council a better opportunity to plan a progressive program and organize their departments to operate over a longer period. This, it is believed, would give ample time to become familiar with new duties and attempt more constructive, progressive and aggressive projects.

View Public Opinion

Members of the board during the past three or four weeks have discussed the idea informally with numerous people of all professioss, vocations and occupations. Statements from scores of individuals indicate that the idea meets with little opposition and most people who understand the plan favor it.

By holding elections every four years instead of every two, $1,500 a year can be saved. This is based upon the figures o the past election, which, including both the primary and general balloting cost the city of Cumberland $5,943.25. This expense includes payroll of election workers and clerks, rental of polling places, printing and necessary legal advertising.

The Board of the Junior Association agreed that this $1,500 a year

Even Cap Pistols Banned Under City Cracker Law

Even the lowly cap pistol is banned under Ordinance No. 1694, relating to the sale of fireworks, firecrackers, etc., which was passed by the mayor and city council July 10, 1939. City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett informed Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman and Fire Chief C. Reid Hoenicka yesterday.

The city attorney said there were no loopholes in the ordinance and that the law must be enforced.

The subject was brought to the attention of Mr. Heskett after several local merchants had inquired if any type of fireworks could be sold here. It was said that caps and pistols and noise-making canes were being sold here in spite of the law which was put into effect after the riotous celebration here last July 4. Chief Eyerman was advised to take immediate action against those violating the ordinance.

"It srall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to display or offer for sale, sell, deliver, discharge or set off any fireworks or NOISE-MAKING explosives of any kind or description which contains powder, explosive of inflammable material within the city limits of Cumberland or for one mile beyond the limits"—is the wording of the ordinance.

Violators of any provision of the ordinance shall be fined not less than fifty dollars nor more than $100 for each offense.

Eagles To Ask For Bids Soon On New Home

Largest Lodge Hopes To Start Work by July 1

Bids to contractors for the new building to be erected by Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles, at Bedford and North Mechanic streets will be advertised June 29, it was announced yesterday by Henry Koelker, chairman of the building committee.

According to the plans drawn by S. Russ Minter, local architect, the new building will be three stories in height and will be of steel, iron, concrete and brick construction. Measurements of the new structure are 119 by 32 feet. It will adjoin the present Eagles Home, corner of Frederick and North Mechanic streets, which is ninety feet long and thirty-five feet wide.

The cost of the new building is estimated at $45,000.

Mr. Koelker said he was hopeful that work on the new structure would be started about July 1 and that it would take about five months to complete the job.

Other members of the F. O. E. building committee in addition to Mr. Koelker are Louis Firlie, David Ogilvie, Francis H. Schultz, John H. Hager, and Walter G. Leibarnt.

Cumberland Aerie now has 1,480 members and is the largest fraternal organization in this section. The local F. O. E. membership represents almost fifty percent of the entire organization in the State of Maryland.

Driver Fined $5 For Traveling over 30 In Bowling Green

Four drivers were fined and one was acquitted in court yesterday.

William F. Morgan, 625 Princeton avenue, was fined $5 and costs in Trial Magistrate court on a charge of exceeding the speed limit of thirty miles an hour through Bowling Green, a restricted zone.

David J. Johns, 24 Laing avenue, paid $5 and costs for crossing from one lane to another when it was unsafe on the McMullen highway near The Dingle.

State Trooper George J. Miller made both arrests.

In Police court, Leon Taishoff, 1027 Bedford street, was fined $2 for driving in the wrong direction on Water street, a one-way street. Officers Carl J. Souffer and W. P. Crabtree preferred the charge.

Richard C. Dyer, of 223 Richard street, Bedford, Pa., was fined $1 on a charge of careless driving, and Henry N. Dressman, of RFD 1, Cumberland, was acquitted on a similar count. Lieut. James E. Van and Officers John G. Powers arrested both drivers.

Driver Arrested

James Q. Kenny, of Lonaconing, is scheduled to be given a hearing today in Police court on a charge of careless driving. He was arrested on the West Side by Officers Carl J. Stouffer and Walter P. Crabtree.

St. Mary's Grad, Now a Priest, To Address Class

Eight To Receive Diplomas Tomorrow; Play Tonight

A priest who received his early education in Cumberland will return to his home town tomorrow to address the seniors of the school from which he was graduated.

He is the Rev. J. Henry Hopkins, assistant pastor of St. Ambrose Catholic church in Baltimore, and he will deliver the principal address at the annual commencement exercises of St. Mary's high school tomorrow at 8 p. m. in St. Mary's auditorium on Oldtown road.

Diplomas and awards will be presented by the Rev. Lawrence P. Landrigan, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church. The awards consist of a scholarship to Sacred Heart college, Louisville, Ky., for the outstanding girl student in the graduating class, and a five dollar cash prize for the senior with the highest average in religion.

Miss Rose Ratke will be valedictorian of the Class of 1940 and Miss Anna Danahy will give the salutatory.

St. Mary's orchestra of twenty-two members, directed by Sister Eileen, will play a number of selections appropriate to the occasion, with Miss Catherine Doerner as pianist.

Members of the graduating class are Mildred Borchert, Ann Danahy, Nancy Heckler, Betty Jane Ketzner, Marian Mason, Rita Perkins, Rose Ratke, and John Clarke, James Hovatter, and Thomas Will.

Class Night exercises scheduled for this evening at 8 o'clock will include the presentation of a play entitled "The Day We Graduate" which will be given by the senior class in the church auditorium.

Court Studies Case For Tax Adjustments On Washington St.

Washington street property owners striving to obtain reductions in tax assessments yesterday submitted their case to Circuit Court Judge D. Lindley Sloan.

The property owners, former Judge Albert A. Doub Sr., Joseph B. Finan, and the McMullen brothers, appealed their case to the Circuit Court after they were turned down by the county commissioners and the State Tax Commission.

The protestants contend that a fair property appraisal should be determined by the "best sale price which the property can be sold for at either private sale or public auction, but not forced sale."

The protestants aver that important evidence governing their case was stricken from the record by the State Tax Commission, including expert testimony.

Evidence striken included a statement by Robert E. King, real estate dealer, that there has been no market for the properties under consideration for the last ten years.

The court took the case under advisement and indicated it would study the record of the case.

Newcomer Wins Season Opener At Yacht Club

Muma Brothers Also Have Big Day

James O'Connell, of Frostburg, a newcomer to the sport of yachting, had the thrill of winning his very first start over the course of the Deep Creek Yacht Club on Sunday when his Snipe class sloop defeated five other Snipes in the opening point-score race of the season.

No small part of O'Connell's victory in his re-christened "Small Fry" was due, however, to the smart handling of his boat by Bobby Muma while the owner acted as crew. The "Small Fry," ex-"Alias," was always a dangerous contender under the hand of her former owner, Hugo Keller, but yesterday she took the best the fleet has to offer with the possible exception of Bobby and Harold Muma's "Lisbeth," not yet in commission for the season.

All in all, it was a Muma Brothers day on Deep Creek Lake. Just a few yards back of "Small Fry" came Past-Commodore John B. Mordock's Catalog II, skippered by her owner, with Harold Muma handling the headsails. What the brothers will do next Sunday when they join forces in "Lisbeth" is something all small boat sailors in Western Maryland will be waiting to see.

Disqualified for Collision

William J. Cramer and Lee Hunter in Cramer's "Leah-Louise," like "Catalog II" a former club champion and another dangerous contender, finished third in Sunday's first event, but was disqualified for colliding with Dr. Arthur P. Dixon's and Miss Georgie Dixon's "Rebel" as the field turned the first mark.

Third place then went to Dr. Donald B. Grove and Miss Gladys LaRue in Dr. Grove's "Holiday." Richard C. Holben, another Frostburger, with George Martz as his afterguard, was fourth. John B. Steiding and William Sluss brought in Steiding's "Aloha" fifth, while "Rebel" was given sixth place.

Yesterday's Snipe race was sailed minus several stars of the fleet besides "Lisbeth." William Sluss's Deany II was missing, as was Tom Geer's Pittsburgh entry, "Lollypop." Dr. Tolson's "Windward Ho." Fred Hodd's ex-"Catalog I." another club champion, and several other boats expected to make this year's championship a wide-open affair.

Smart Sailing

In Sunday's open race John B. Mordock took advantage of every trick known to small boat sailing to win a decision from Jean Pickut's new National One Design boat "Cagey," which carries considerable more sail than the Snipe. The National was skippered by H. H. Muma and carried Miss Betty Tuebner as additional crew. Commodore Mordock outmaneuvered the bigger boat as the two neared the first turn and was never thereafter headed. David H. Murrie was Mordock's crew. Five other Snipes also took part in the open race.

At least twelve Snipes will enter next Sunday's class race, while the open event will be broadened to include Sea Gull class and several other classes of boats.

River Victim's Funeral Today

Allegany Student Drowned Saturday

The faculty of the Columbia street school and a number of teachers from Allegany high school called in a body yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lewis, Sr., 215 Valley street, parents of the 16-year-old student who drowned Saturday.

The victim, James W. Lewis Jr. was a graduate of the Columbia street school and a freshman at Allegany high. He was a model airplane enthusiast and recently won a prize for a model submitted in a local competition.

Young Lewis drowned Saturday in the Capon river, six miles south of Paw Paw, where he and his father and grandfather had been camping. The boy suffered a cramp and perished before aid could reach him.

Eight boys from his class at Allegany high will be pallbearers at the funeral today, it was announced last night.

Surviving, besides his parents and grandfather, are two sisters, Misses Eleanor and Marian Lewis, at home.

Woman Shoos Bees, Her Car Upsets

Mrs. Sue M. Hixon's attempt to shoo a bee out of her car sent the machine plunging down a bank Sunday on Nave's Crossroad. The car upset, but Mrs. Hixon escaped serious injury.

Mrs. Hixon, widow of William T. Hixon, of 126 Virginia avenue, was helped from the wreckage by Officers J. H. Stitcher and L. E. Meister, who took her home. Mrs. Hixon had been to Hill Crest Burial Park to put flowers on the grave of her husband.

Citizen's Telegram To Senator Censored

W. A. Spruill got his dander up last night while he was listening to Senator Rush D. Holt of West Virginia make a radio speech urging America to stay out of the war.

Citizen Spruill, a local real estate man, got madder still when the telegraph company refused to call the young senator what Citizen Spruill wanted him called.

The message which was never sent was: 'Dear Sir: Listening to your address tonight made me homesick, for every time I hear a jackass bray I become nauseated."

Commencement Program

Friday's commencement program will be opened with four selections by Allegany high school's thirty-piece orchestra directed by Jack E. Platt. The numbers to be played are "Echoes from Grand Opera" by Herfurth; "National Melody" by Herfurth; "Maleguena" by Luceona, and "Festival March" by Mendelssohn.

The invocation will be given by the Rev. Robert H. Parker, pastor of the Union Grove Circuit of the Methodist church.

The remainder of the program is as follows:

Class oration, by John Beckman; "The Wind's in the South," selection by the Girls' choral club of thirty voices; Address by Harry Collins Spillman, of New York; violin duet, "Evening Prelude," by Wilton Sykes and Marshall Cowers, accompanied by Mrs. John Dorn, Jr.; presentation of diplomas by William A. Gunter, president of the Board of Education of Allegany county; selection, "America, My Wondrous Land," by the Allegany high school chorus; announcement of honors, by Ralph R. Webster, principal; song, "Dear Old High School," by members of graduating class, with Jack E. Platt as accompanist at the organ.

The Allegany school song was composed by Howard C. Hill principal of the school in 1904, and was copyrighted in 1936. The composer is a brother of R. Mason Hill, assistant clerk to the county commissioners in charge of tax assessments.

Miss Dorothy Willison will direct the choral club, the school chorus, and class singing.

This year's graduating class is composed of 188 seniors. Allegany's first graduating class of 1889 had fifteen members and the exercises at that time were held in the Union street school building.

Mr. and Mrs. James Andrew Cohill Jr., Hancock, announce the birth of a son, at Mt. Airy, N. C., May 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goss, 322 Grand avenue, announce the birth of a son Saturday night at Allegany hospital.

Veteran Ball Player Up for Postmaster

One of Allegany county's most widely traveled baseball players will be the next postmaster of Westernport if Congressman William D. Byron approves the endorsement of Thomas V. McGuire, who recently was recommended for that post by the unanimous vote of Allegany county's Democratic State Central Committee.

The fact that McGuire received the full blessings of the state central committee and stands a good chance of being the successor to the late Leo Connell is of special interest in Cumberland because it was here that he starred as a pitcher and outfielder for the Cumberland Colts in the days of the Middle Atlantic League.

Has Been Busy Fellow

His escutcheon not only shows that he was a minor league ballplayer from 1920 to 1928, but he did more than play the diamond pastime to earn his doughnuts and coffee. "Tommy," as he is familiarly known to his many friends throughout the county, served as manager of Keystone Grocery B. & O. shops; timekeeper for the signal corps, B. & O. railroad, insurance agent, and for the last seven years has has been employed in the finishing room of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper company plant at Luke.

Played with Grove

It was back in 1920 that the Westernport southpaw got his start in organized baseball. He, the great Robert Moses "Lefty" Grove, and Bobby Blair, of the Midland Indians, and Henry "Diddy" Stitcher, of the Cumberland Colts, started out together for their first fling at minor league ball at Martinsburg, W. Va., in the Blue Ridge League.

Grove went from there to Baltimore thence to Connie Mack at Philadelphia and finally to the Boston Red Sox, for whom he still performs. McGuire played in eight leagues in nine years before he quit as an active performer. He came back in 1937 as manager of the Midland Red Sox, of the Bi-State League and piloted a pennant winner. He repeated last year. This season he is holding the managerial reins of Westvaco in the same circuit.

Globe Trotter

During his nine seasons in the minors he played with Martinsburg and Chambersburg in the Blue Ridge; Dover, in the Eastern Shore; Scranton in the New York-Penn loop; Bristol, Tenn., in the Appalachian; Rocky Mount, N. C., in the Virginia league; Cumberland and Clarksburg in the Middle Atlantic; Okmulgee, Okla., in the Western League and last but not least Rochester, of the International circuit, the fastest company in which he ever has

Fast on Bases

A left-handed thrower and hitter, McGuire was regarded as one of the fastest baserunners ever developed in this section. His ability to beat out bunts and high bounders to the infield impressed scouts in his younger days. He started out in baseball as an outfielder and in baseball parlance he really "could carry the mail." In later years he developed into a dependable twirler.

McGuire attended Georgetown university, Washington, D. C., and left there during the war for the Field Artillery officers' Training School at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky.

He was born in Piedmont, W. Va., October 3, 1897, and he is now 42. His wife is the former Esta Fisher, of Lonaconing. They have two children, Irene and Ethel Ann.

Fort Hill Ready For Class Night

Hilarious Fun Promised Tonight

Tonight the Seniors of Fort Hill High School will present for their Class Night exercises, the original and hilarious program "Excuse Us, Please," in which more than 100 Seniors transform the school auditorium into a veritable whirl of amazing activities.

With a plot abounding in clever dialogue, snappy songs and dances, and unbelievable events, the program promises to reach the peak of the year's productions. Witches, the Old Gray Mare, aspiring political candidates, Seniors avenging long-suffered wrongs, Father Time with his relentless scythe, all mingle in rollicking accord to make the evening a never-to-be-forgotten time of fun.

The program is in two parts. First is "It Does Happen Here," in which the Senior Class turns the tables on the teachers. Second is "They Find the Way," in which the audience, after much patience, should begin to know what it is all about.

This clever combination of merriment, satire, and genuine truth consists of a prologue, in which is revealed the trek of disillusioned folk to happiness, where a better way of life is being sought; Election Eve, a realistic political rally; The Hall of Man; The Cabinet Meeting, and "The Answer."

The appearance of a mystery candidate whose identity the Seniors are keeping carefully concealed is a high-spot of the program.

Admission is by tickets which have been given to the Senior Class for distribution.

Students Get Degrees In Foreign Service

Three Cumberland students received Bachelor of Science degrees in Foreign Service yesterday at graduation services at Georgetown University in Washington.

The three graduates are Oliver Herman Bruce, 407 Washington street; George Peter Charuhas, 240 Columbia street; and Newton Heston, 911 Ridgedale avenue.

Harold M. Stephens, associate judge of the United States Court of Appeals, addressed 480 graduates at the 141st annual commencement held on the college lawn.

Lloyd H. Buchanan To Get Degree

Lloyd H. Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander R. Buchanan, of Narrows Park, will graduate tomorrow from the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. Buchanan, a member of the class of 1936 at Allegany high school, will receive a Bachelor of Science degree in economics.

Legion Meets Tonight

Fort Cumberland Post No. 13 of the American Legion will hold a regular meeting tonight. A nominating committee will be appointed.

Irvin H. Crabtree Granted Divorce

Associate Judge William A. Huster yesterday awarded a divorce to Irvin H. Crabtree, former tinmill employe of South Cumberland, from his wife, Mary J. Crabtree.

According to the petition filed by Harold E. Naughton, Crabtree's counsel, Mrs. Crabtree deserted her husband soon after their marriage on March 15, 1936.

Camera Club's First Nude Entry Wins Prize over Fifty Others

The first nude study ever entered in the monthly print competition of the Cumberland Miniature Camera Club won first place for June last night.

The winning print is a side view of a young woman standing on the sea shore and holding aloft a towel which is waving in the breeze.

The picture was taken by George R. Lenhert, chief radio engineer for Station WTBO, who also captured second place with a landscape. It was the first time he had ever entered any prints in the club competition.

Milton Benemann took third place with a shot of a lake at sundown. Honorable mention went to James Weber and Fred Strausburg.

Pictures on Display

The winning pictures will be on display at Harvey's jewelry store on Baltimore street.

Nudes are a favorite subject of the art photographers, but herebefore Cumberland enthusiasts have stuck to more conventional subjects such as sunsets, cows, and sailboats.

G. W. McElfish, one of the judges, said the fifty prints entered in the June contest were the best group the local club has ever turned out.

Thirty-five members were present, making it the first time in the club's history that the number of prints exceeded the number of photographers attending.

Other judges were John Wellington and Richard Coffman.

July Outing Planned

Robert O. Slemmer presented an illustrated lecture prepared by E. P. Wightman, F. R. P. S.

The meeting was held in the Knights of Malta hall on Prospect Square, which will be the regular meeting place in the future. The club meets the second Monday of each month.

The July meeting, however, will be held at Edgar D. Growdens' cottage on Hazen road. It will be known as a photo outing, and will begin in the afternoon and continue through the evening.

Mayor Thinks Airport Deal Can Be Made

Committee Meets Council Today; Action Necessary

Cumberland's Airport committee and the mayor and city council will meet this morning at 10 o'clock at city hall to discuss the possibilities of purchasing the proposed airport site near Wiley Ford, W. Va.

Immediate action must be taken by the council as options on the land known as the Whalley and McAbee tracts in West Virginia will expire Saturday. The option was obtained by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

The mayor and council conferred with Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and it was decided to have the full committee present for today's session.

The matter of federal aid for the airport project was discussed yesterday in Washington by Oscar C. Gurley, James C. Shriver, Owen B. Hitchins and John J. McMullen in a conference with Major A. B. McMullen, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and Representative William D. Byron.

It is understood that the city must obtain title to the land before federal aid for an airport project will be approved. Cost of the land for the proposed site in Wiley Ford is reported to be $15,000.

"We'll have to cut some financial corners to raise the money," commented Mayor Irvine, "but I think it can be done."

Local Drive Still Only Halfway

With little more than half of minimum quota reported in the relief fund for the Allegany County Chapter of the American Red Cross, announcement was made yesterday that more than 500 letters have been written to Cumberlanders in a plea for aid to victims of the European war. Mrs. Robert S. Henderson and Donald Smith are co-chairmen of the personal solicitations committee of the war relief fund in Cumberland.

When the increased need was seen for immediate aid in Europe, Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross, announced that the national goal was doubled to $20,000,000. The total amount received by the local headquarters at 45 N. Liberty street, yesterday was $3,769.09. The original minimum quota for the county chapter was $7,000.

Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars, sent a check for $25 with $5 pledged for each month the emergency exists. The Women's Sport Club also sent $25.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a letter yesterday urged the American people "to contribute quickly and generously to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross, as the best help the American people can give in the tremendous problem of caring for millions of refugees and wounded." He pointed out that the American Red Cross is the official national relief agency of the American people and is chartered by an act of Congress.

Money obtained in the national war relief campaign will be used to buy food, clothing, surgical supplies, medications, ambulances, soap, cooking utensils, and similar commodities which Red Cross representatives in Europe cable are in such demand.

The S. S. McKeesport, known as the "Mercy Ship" has been chartered by the Red Cross to carry supplies to Europe. It is scheduled to sail this week.

Allegany Orchestra To Play at Flintstone

The Allegany high school orchestra, under the direction of Jack E. Platt, will play at the annual commencement exercises of Flintstone Agricultural high school on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. The A.H.S. musical organization has played annually at the Flintstone exercises for a number of years.

Ridgeley Republicans To Meet Tonight

The Young Republican Club of Ridgeley will hold an important meeting tonight at 8 p. m. in Justice of the Peace G. E. Hiser's office for the purpose of forming a membership committee. All members of the organization have been urged to be present by Walter Ridgeley, president.

Celanese Worker Swallows Poison

A 37-year-old Celanese worker was admitted to Allegany hospital Sunday after he swallowed nearly a dozen poison tablets. The man was Leo W. Anderson, of RFD 2, Baltimore Pike.

Jr. Association Delegates

Fred Z. Hetzel, president, and Captain Randolph Millholland, national councilman, have been designated delegates to the national convention of the Junior Association of Commerce. The delegates were appointed by members of the Board of Directors of the local association at a meeting last night. The convention will be held the latter part of next week.

Deaths

George L. Morris

George Lawrence Morris, son of James and Hilda Matt Morris, of 320 Holland street, died late yesterday afternoon at Allegany hospital where he was admitted May 25. He was 13.

Young Morris was a native of Cumberland and a student at St. Patrick's parochial school. He was a member of St. Patrick's church.

Samuel A. Marvis

Samupel Aaron Marvis died yesterday afternoon at Memorial hospital where he had been a patient for the past twenty-one days. He was 63.

Mr. Marvis was born in Turkey and attempts are now being made to locate his daughter. He survived his wife, Ruth Kaplon Marvis, by a number of years.

The body will remain at Stein's chapel until his daughter is located.

Bernard Martin

Bernard Martin, of Clarysville, a former employee of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, died suddenly yesterday morning in Morgantown, W. Va., of a heart attack. He was 47.

Mr. Martin had been working in Morgantown for the past year.

He was a member of St. Michael's Catholic church, of Frostburg, and the parish Holy Name Society.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Hilda Delaney Martin; seven children, John, Thomas, James, Rita, Marie, Agnes, and Margaret Martin, all at home; a brother, Thomas Martin, of Detroit, Mich.; and two sisters, Mrs. Agnes Vocke, of Detroit, and Mrs. Aloysius Winner, of Mt. Savage.

Cumberland Man Home from Italy Saw Liner Rex Stripped for War

Mrs. Emma M. Jammer, of 230 Columbia avenue, today was anticipating a visit from her son, J. S. Jammer, who arrived from Europe yesterday on the Liner Manhattan.

Mr. Jammer, connected with the foreign service of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company for the last sixteen years, told ship reporters, that the Italian Liner Rex is being transformed into a troopship at Genoa. In dispatches sent through the country, Mr. Jammer told how he saw workers stripping furnishings from the palatial trans-Atlantic liner and conditioning it for war service.

Mr. Jammer's main office is in London, but he had been working in the Balkans for six months prior to his return to America. He was called to the New York office of his company in regard to some special work.

Mr. Jammer had planned to spend more time in Italy but took an earlier boat for home in view of conditions in Italy and instructions from his office.

He told his mother by phone last night that he planned to come to Cumberland just as soon as possible. He was last home in 1938.

NEW YORK, June 10 (AP)—Italo Verrando, general manager of the Italian line in this country, said today that the liner Rex, now in Italy, would make a west-bound sailing "early in September—when the war will be over."

"I'm very serious," he told reporters. "If it (the war) is not over, I'll buy you boys lunch."

Italy's declaration of war found all Italian line ships safe at home or in neutral ports, he said.
